Memories Of Commander Shea

Museum To Recall Squantum, South Weymouth Air Bases

By TOM HENSHAW

Naval Air Station Squantum, once the training ground for the pilots and air crews who won World War II in the Pacific, has long since disappeared under the upscale shops and luxury condos of Marina Bay.

And the runways and hangars of its successor, NAS South Weymouth, are about to begin vanishing under some 2,500 housing units and 250,000 square feet of commercial enterprise planned by a developer.

Soon, the two bases that meant so much in the early history of Naval aviation will be only a memory.

But a memory enhanced by members of the Patriot Squadron of the Association of Naval Aviation, who plan to construct a museum on the South Weymouth site to display memorabilia from both bases.

Right now, the museum occupies 1,300 square feet of space in the old Shea Fitness Building on the abandoned base where a limited number of exhibits can be seen by the public by request only.

It's called the Shea Field Naval Aviation Historical Society, chartered to serve as "a repository of historical data on the past contribution of NAS Squantum, NAS South Weymouth and the US Navy to national security."

"We hope to be open in two years in a building of our own adjacent to the Shea Field Memorial Grove," said Bill Horsch, one of the founders of the museum.

The Shea Field Memorial Grove is a stand of trees just inside the gate to the former NAS, built around an A-4 Skyhawk and dedicated to the 22 Congressional Medal of Honor winners from Norfolk and Plymouth Counties.

The number of exhibits is limited because most of the desired artifacts have been in storage for safekeeping since 2000 at the USS Salem Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy and the Salem, says Horsch, won't give them back.

NAVAL RESERVE pennant, originally flown at the Squantum naval reserve base in the 1920s, will be a centerpiece in the naval air museum planned for South Weymouth, the successor to the Squantum training field.

"I'd be delighted to help with their museum," said Michael Condon, executive director of the USS Salem. "But I need documentation that they are legitimate and who they say they are.

"If I gave away memorabilia without knowing who I'm giving it to, I deserve to be fired."

When the base closed in September, 1997, said Horsch many items of historic interest were collected and stored in the attic of the Administration Building.

The items were catalogued and transferred to the USS Salem by Capt. Robert Deutsch, the commanding officer, and James Fahey, a naval historian, then on the staff of the USS Salem.

Investigation Continues

House Blast Exact Cause A Mystery

Investigators have traced the cause of the explosion that wracked the house at 15 Craig Ave., Quincy Point, to inflammable cleaning chemicals that infiltrated the sewer system.

But a week later they still can't say exactly what touched off the blast that blew resident Robert Donnelly, 39, out the back door. He suffered burns and was treated and released from Boston Medical Center.

"We cannot say with certainty what was introduced into the sewer system, where or by whom," said Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli, "but it appears to be gone."

He said the tests indicate that neighbors on Craig Avenue are in "no immediate danger." A large section of the neighborhood was tested for traces of volatile matter or vapors.

He said that what vapors were present at the time of the explosion were so volatile as to be destroyed by the blast.

Investigation of the explosion has been massive with the State Fire Marshall, the Department of Environmental Protection, the MWRA and the FBI joining the local fire and police departments

And now, at the behest of Councillor Daniel Raymondi, the City Council was poised last night (Wednesday) to delve into the explosion.

Raymondi, whose Ward 2 venue includes Craig Avenue, asked that the Council's Public Works Committee conduct hearings into the cause of the blast.

The explosion, which occurred about 7 p.m. Wednesday, June 28, blew Donnelly out the back door and across his yard. He suffered burns and was treated and released from Boston Medical Center.

"This has been a massive effort," said Pettinelli, who indicated that testing would continue through the holiday. "The neighborhood is safe and secure. We are doing everything possible to ensure its stays that way.

Shellfish Planting In Quincy Bay Monday

The City of Quincy and the Division of Marine Fisheries will plant 400,000 seed soft-shell clams Monday, July 10.

Work will take place from about 4 to 6:30 p.m. and continue Tuesday if need be.

"This is the first of what will hopefully be a yearly planting," said Shellfish Warden Andrew Ayer. "The project will be under taken using local commercial shell fishermen, and is, I believe, a first of its kind in Quincy Bay."

White House Wreath To Honor John Q. Adams

The traditional White House wreath will be placed on the tomb of John Quincy Adams in the crypt of historic United First Parish Church Tuesday, July 11, at 12 noon.

The wreath will be presented by Navy Lt. Commander Scott Graham and members of the Navy Color Guard while the Navy Brass Ensemble from Newport, R.I., will perform.

The ceremony will mark the 239th birth date anniversary of the sixth president of the United States who was born July 11, 1767. A similar wreath is laid on the tomb of John Adams, the second president, on Oct. 30.

The tradition of sending a wreath to the resting place of a deceased president on his birthday was started some 40 years ago during the term in office of President Lyndon Johnson.

Granite Railway Tours On Summer Weekends

The Mass Bay Rail Road Enthusiasts (RRE) will conduct tours of the Granite Railway in West Quincy and East Milton on two weekends this summer.

Two 3 1/2 hour van tours will be offered each day on Saturday and Sunday, July 22-23 and Aug. 26-27 starting at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. with the Sunday morning run only with sufficient advanced reservations.

A $10 donation is requested.

The limited capacity tour will visit the preserved 1826 railway terminus at Bunker Hill Ledge, surviving segments of the old right of way, the 1830 double track, several quarries and the Neponset River wharf.

Tourists will meet at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center. Pickup is also available at the Milton T station at 8:30 a.m. Pre-registration is suggested.

BURNING FEET NOT ALWAYS FROM SUMMER HEAT

Feeling a burning sensation in the feet may indicate a temporary issue like athlete's foot or a reaction to materials in your shoes or socks. But if burning lasts for an extended period, it's important to seek medical attention to rule out serious conditions. Sensory peripheral neuropathy, a nerve problem affecting the nerves in the extremities, can cause a burning sensation. This condition may develop from diabetes, alcohol abuse, or a vitamin B-12 deficiency. To treat burning feet, your doctor will identify and address the underlying cause. During this time, symptoms can be relieved by wearing non-synthetic socks that encourage feet to breathe, avoiding long periods of standing, taking pain relievers when necessary, and bathing feet in cool water.

People don't always realize how their feet mirror their body's general health. They sometimes try to believe their foot problems "will just disappear." We strongly recommend having a podiatrist attend to foot problems in order to prevent them from becoming serious, as well as to keep an eye on the rest of the body. We may not be able to prevent disease here at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, but we can help deal with some of the problems that may accompany it. Make your next step pain-free – call for an appointment at 781-986-3668. Office hours are now also available at the Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

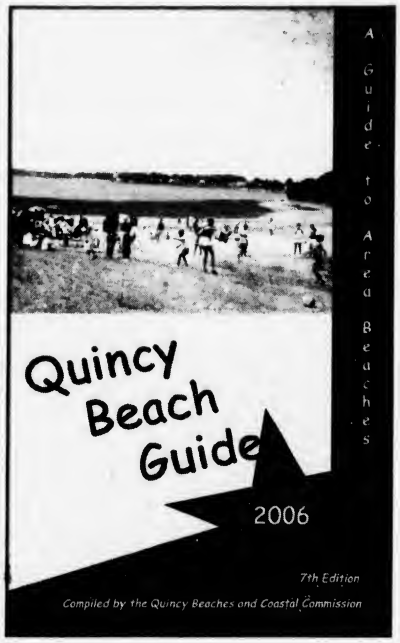
New Beach Guide Filled With Waterfront Advice



If the annual Beach Guide put out by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission gets much larger and timelier it'll have to be published by Random House and reviewed by Sunday Times..

The latest edition, the seventh annual, contains not only 56 pages but a Krossword puzzle for Kids, advice on the selection of the shape of your sunglasses and a history of men's swimwear.

That plus the required information on the city's 10 municipal beaches, tide charts through September, sunset and sunrise information, beach testing and fishing tips.

The helpful booklet highlighting the beaches and amenities along Quincy's 27 miles of coastline is now available at many local businesses and public facilities.

"It's amazing how many people have no idea that Quincy has so many great neighborhood beaches," said Mayor William Phelan. "This guide will help you enjoy our city beaches as the beautiful waterfront parks they are."

The Guide takes on the current controversy over private ownership and public beaches by examining the basis for the public's right of access dating from Colonial ordinances.

Six pages are devoted to the Beaches Environmental Assessment and Coastal Health Act under which the water at beaches is sampled weekly to ensure safe swimming conditions.

Jack Lydon, "the fisherman extraordinaire," weighs in on the art of digging one's own sea worms for bait and the adrenaline rush that comes from night fishing "when a 25-inch fish in the dark (is) almost more exciting than a 35-inch fish in the daylight."

Andy Ayers, the city's shellfish warden, writes about shellfishing (what else?) and Bob Szabo and Bob Gillen tell of the city's new boat ramp at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center.

Cathy Curran adds to the list of boating safety tips a warning against "teak surfing," the fad of clinging to the teak swim platform amid the exhaust fumes of a boat until a wake is built to, then body surfing the wave.

There's a chapter on what sun screen to use (SPF30+board spectrum, water resistant), how to apply it to children, and what to remember when choosing a hat (it has to feel comfortable and stay on in the wind).

And, last, for those who still think they have to wait a half hour after eating before they can safely go swimming — it ain't necessarily so.

"Neither the American Academy of Pediatrics or the American Red Cross make any specific recommendations about waiting after eating before taking a swim," says the 2006 edition of the Quincy Beach Guide.

"I want to thank my fellow members of the Commission that worked really hard on this book," said Leo Kelly, the commission chairman. "This is a labor of love for these volunteers and they did another great job."

John Fagerlund Named To Zoning Board

Fagerlund is a life-long resident of Quincy that currently resides in the Beechwood Knoll neighborhood. He is a district manager within the US Automotive Sales Division for Daimler Chrysler Corporation. He is a graduate of Tufts University.

Fagerlund was a member of the William F. Degan Memorial Road Race Committee (1999-2005). He serves on the Sailors Home Pond Committee and is a member of the Ward Five Community Association.

He and his wife Bonita (Baldani) have three children, Eric, Justine, and Amy.

"I am pleased that John has agreed to volunteer his services to the Zoning Board," said Phelan. "He cares deeply about our community and his perspective as a concerned resident fits nicely with the makeup of the board. He should augment an already outstanding group of volunteers."

Phelan has asked the Zoning Board to make stricter reviews of all requests for zoning variances in an effort to preserve the character of Quincy's neighborhoods. He has requested that the standards for variances be strictly applied in accordance with the zoning by-laws.

"We have heard from residents who are at their wit's end about development in the neighborhoods," Phelan said. "We have zoning by-laws for a reason and that reason is to protect the character of our city and its neighborhoods. I expect that the Zoning Board will continue to help protect residents and neighborhoods from over-development."

Overdue Library Charges Erased For Amnesty Month

Overdue books, Cds, audiocassettes, videos, DVDs and magazines can be returned to the library without penalty. Old overdue charges may also be canceled.

The primary purpose of overdue charges is to encourage prompt return of library materials, so other library patrons can use them.

"Sometimes, people amass such large overdue charges that they simply stop coming to the library," said Library Director Ann McLaughlin. "With this amnesty month, we hope to get both our materials and our customers back."

To take advantage of the amnesty, go to any Quincy library location, return overdue Quincy materials, and let library staff know of outstanding overdue charges.

The July amnesty applies to any overdue materials owned by and returned to the Thomas Crane Library or one of its three branch locations, and to any outstanding overdue charges for Quincy materials. The amnesty does not cover materials owned by or charges applied by or other Old Colony Library Network Libraries. Charges for lost or damaged items are not included in the amnesty.

Come back to the library and find out what's buzzin' this summer! For more information about amnesty month, call 617-376-1301.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 4, 1826, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the second and third presidents of the United States, die on the 50th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Adams' last words were, "Thomas Jefferson still survives," though his old friend and political adversary had died a few hours before.

• On July 8, 1918, American author Ernest Hemingway, working as a Red Cross ambulance driver, is severely wounded while carrying a companion to safety on the Austro-Italian front during World War I. Hemingway published his first book of short stories in 1925.

• On July 6, 1935, an infant named Tenzin Gyatso, future leader of Tibet, is born to a peasant family in Takster, Tibet. At age 2 the child was declared the reincarnation of a great Buddhist spiritual leader and named the 14th Dalai Lama. In 1989, he won the Nobel Peace Prize for his commitment to the nonviolent liberation of Tibet.

• On July 5, 1946, French designer Louis Reard unveils a daring two-piece swimsuit, which he dubbed the "bikini," inspired by a U.S. atomic test that took place that week off the Bikini Atoll in the Pacific Ocean.

• On July 9, 1956, actor Tom Hanks is born in Concord, Calif. Hanks has won the Best Actor Oscar twice, for "Philadelphia" in 1993 and "Forrest Gump" in 1994. He was also nominated for his role in "Saving Private Ryan" (1998).

• On July 3, 1971, singer Jim Morrison, of the rock group The Doors, is found dead of heart failure in a bathtub in Paris. The Doors' first album topped the charts, as did a shortened version of their 6-minute 50-second track "Light My Fire."

• On July 7, 1984, "When Doves Cry," the first single to be released from Prince's 1984 album "Purple Rain," hits the top of the charts. The song became the best-selling single of 1984. Meanwhile, the album topped the charts for 24 weeks and sold more than 10 million copies.

A First Lady's Visit

Don't know if Laura Bush will ever visit Quincy, the home of First Lady Abigail Adams.

Hopefully, if she does, Mayor William Phelan won't have the hectic last minute experience of former Mayor James McIntyre when another First Lady came to town.

Lady Bird Johnson, wife of President Lyndon Johnson, was on her campaign to "Keep America Beautiful" June 9, 1967 when she visited the Adams Mansion with Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall at the invitation of the Adams family.

They flew up from Washington to the South Weymouth Naval Air Station and came to Quincy in a motorcade.

Quincy was their only Massachusetts stop on a four-day swing through New England.

McIntyre had been briefed on her itinerary and was there, nice and relaxed, when Lady Bird's plane touched down at the Naval air station. With him were his wife, Sheila, and their 5-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, who presented the First Lady with a bouquet of roses. Also greeting her was Mrs. John Volpe, wife of the governor.

There was no hint of the hectic hour or so McIntyre had gone through before the plane arrived.

McIntyre was determined Mrs. Johnson's visit to Quincy would go off smoothly. He was taking no chances.

He asked Jack Schmock, Civil Defense Director at the time, to help him check out Lady Bird's motorcade route in Quincy.

The motorcade, coming from Weymouth on the Southeast Expressway, would turn onto Furnace Brook Parkway in Quincy and proceed to Adams Street and the Adams Mansion.

But then, to McIntyre's horror, lining the sidewalks in front of the homes were trash bags and barrels. It was rubbish pick-up day in that area, a small matter that had been overlooked in the planning for her arrival.

McIntyre cringed at the thought of the First Lady — campaigning to keep America beautiful — looking out from the motorcade at piled-up trash as she rode by.

He quickly radioed an SOS to Public Works Commr. Jack Browne. The latter swiftly pulled rubbish trucks away from other routes and had them move in to pick up the Furnace Brook area trash.

A short while later, McIntyre and Schmock — joined by Executive Secretary James (Pete) Ricciuti — decided to make a second inspection of the route. Just to be sure everything was all set.

The trash was gone. But the problem wasn't. The empty trash barrels were standing or lying there in front of the homes.

And then, a sight to behold: the mayor of Quincy on one side of the street and his executive secretary on the other and as Schmock recalls: "Hiding rubbish barrels behind homes, shrubs, automobiles and any other hiding spot they could find."

Some of the residents realized what was going on and got their own trash containers out of sight.

Lady Bird was due shortly at South Weymouth and McIntyre knew he had to hurry to get there to greet her. But he took time to stop and thank some of the residents for their cooperation. And he managed to make it to the Naval air station in time.

Mrs. Johnson spent three hours at the Adams Mansion, including a luncheon.

She was the first wife of a U.S. president in more than a century to enter the mansion, home and summer White House of second President John and sixth President John Quincy Adams. The last First Lady at the mansion was Louisa Catherine Adams, wife of the sixth president who lived there.

LADY BIRD JOHNSON walks through the garden at the Adams Mansion with Charles Francis Adams, direct descendant of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, and Mrs. Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the home and summer White House of the two presidents.

Mrs. Johnson was greeted by Charles Francis Adams, other direct descendant of the two Presidents, and Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the mansion.

Mrs. Johnson told Charles Francis Adams she had read letters written by John and Abigail Adams and said: "Your family was so aware of the stream of history they were living, they recorded it."

She walked in the garden with Adams and Mrs. Harris and loved the flowers in bloom. (She enjoyed the visit so much that she would return in 1995.)

She presented a special gift: a three-foot elm tree, an off-shoot of one planted on the White House grounds when John Quincy Adams was president as a memento of her visit to be planted on the front lawn.

It was a perfect ending to a perfect day, for a First Lady on a mission to "Keep America Beautiful."

The word trash was never mentioned.

Scenes From Yesterday

Free Speech And Ann Coulter

(The following letter is in regard to the June 29 Sunbeams column which contained a letter of criticism about a previous column on Ann Coulter.)

I wish you hadn't printed that diatribe from the Coulter admirer hiding behind that good old "free speech" banner last week. It was nonsense, as you must have known.

Free speech is not a license to say unchecked, cruel and insulting things about other people. What a nation of perverted subhumans we'd be if we let anyone attack another verbally and dare not speak up, for fear we'd step on their right to free speech!

Coulter was mean-spirited, cruel, and way out of line. She needed to hear exactly what you said. I'm sure it won't make a bit of difference to her- she's been ranting and insulting for years, attacking anyone who doesn't support her opinion of Bush. Disagree with him, criticize an action of his, and you're an idiot, a moron, a bad American, etc. Thank goodness we still have people such as yourself who use their right to free speech to speak up against this perverted loyalty.

Keep it up!

Thanks For Supporting EMS Week

Those of us who work in the business of providing emergency medical service and transportation already understand the significance of EMS Week, but this year we also received a great deal of outside support from area businesses.

We would like to thank the outstanding local businesses for their many generous contributions to help acknowledge EMS (Emergency Medical Service) Week at Fallon Ambulance Service.

Every day, around the clock, our emergency medical technicians (EMTs) and paramedics heroically respond to people in need throughout the South Shore, and those medical personnel do what they do best — save lives.

Additionally, there is an element often unnoticed: EMTs and paramedics often provide the simple human comforts that make a difference, calming a frightened injured child or holding the hand of a lonely elderly person. Those are all elements that add to our quality of life on the South Shore.

Nationally, EMS Week is a time to show appreciation for their hard work and dedication to our communities.

A number of businesses went above and beyond the call of duty to show this appreciation. We thank, first of all, Dunkin' Donuts corporate offices in Quincy for providing refreshments for the crews throughout the week.

Special thanks and appreciation also go to New England Wheels of Billerica, Professional Vehicles of Maine, Clinical One Oxygen in Weymouth, EMSAR in Rehoboth, Andrea's Police Supply in Quincy, South Shore YMCA in Quincy and Curry Hardware in Quincy for their donations to help celebrate this week.

Their generous support made EMS Week a success and demonstrated how valuable the emergency medical teams are in our communities. We are grateful for the assistance and the confidence shown in our medical personnel. We will continue to do all that we can to be a great resource for the community.

"We assume that there was garbage in the collection," said Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti. "You really couldn't tell."

It was Ricciuti's way of saying that opening day of Mayor Walter Hannon's controversial mixed rubbish and garbage collection in Quincy went off without a hitch.

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, the leading critic of the mixed collections, declined to comment on the first day's operation. He said he had no reports from the route and it was too early to tell.

Shortly before collections were made, an ordinance banning the placement of rubbish outside more than 15 hours before collections, which had been introduced two months ago by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, went into effect.

OVER 1,000 APPLY FOR FOOD STAMPS

Considerably more than 1,000 people have applied for a chance to stretch their food dollars in this area as the new federal food stamp program went into effect. Eligibility depends on many factors, particularly net income, size of family and certain expenses like shelter, utilities and education.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Red Sox, with a 41-32 record, maintained a two and a half game lead over the Cleveland Indians and Baltimore Orioles with identical 38-34 records. Left fielder Carl Yastrzemski was batting .325 while Luis Tiant led the Red Sox pitching staff with 11 wins.

Bill Arienti Inspiring Youngsters

Firefighter-Author Turns Out Second Children's Book

Quincy firefighter and local author Bill Arienti has been gaining recognition for "Tales From Faxon Park," a series of children story publications, that are being read throughout Quincy schools.

The series teaches children life lessons, based on the adventures of animals who live in the park. Arienti is a Hanover resident but grew up a couple hundred yards away from Faxon Park. "It used to be beautiful," he said.

The children's stories, written in verse, are part of a series of eight. Arienti said he is planning on writing the ninth installment of the series with his 10-year-old son, Mark. Two stories in the series have been published so far. The first publication was Scooter The Rabbit, and the most recent was Buddy's First Flight, published several weeks ago. The next publication is expected out in October, he said.

Arienti said he was inspired to start writing stories when his son handed him a Christmas list, and everything on it was breakable. "When I saw it, I began to laugh," he said. "I wanted to give him something that would last forever, so I decided to write him a book. He liked it, and when he finished, he said, 'yeah that was great dad, can you write me another one?'"

Arienti said that teachers from Lincoln-Hancock School, Hingham schools, and Needham schools have contacted him, hoping he would read his stories to their students.

"Teachers tell me that I'm inspiring their students, but as much as I'm inspiring them, they're inspiring me," said Arienti.

An average of five or six students per visit have approached Arienti, saying they want to learn to write stories themselves, he said.

"The best part is if one child decides they want to write a story because of my influence," he said. "It's just great watching a child strive to do new things. It's the greatest return I can imagine."

Arienti has received letters from teachers, principals and parents, praising him for his positive influence on children.

"Your touching story, along with its charming art work, captivated my nine-year-old son, and more importantly made him think about doing what is right, no matter how difficult it may be," wrote parent, and C.C.D. teacher Judi Leonard.

"This book offers a wonderful spin-off to vital discussions of topics that are an integral part of our Catholic school curriculum," wrote Catherine Cameron, principal at St. Mary School.

"You could feel the energy and enthusiasm in each classroom as Bill interacted with the students. It didn't matter which grade. Somehow Bill was able to reach each child and touch him. Essentially, a writer is a storyteller and Bill is a master," wrote Martha Evans, South's Reading Consultant.

"The children were completely captivated by his storytelling! Students, teachers, and parents are still commenting on his visit," wrote Quincy South's Vice Principal, Eliza Burns.

Arienti's stories are currently sold in stores in Massachusetts, California, and New Jersey. They are available at Abigail's Crossing in Quincy Center.

For more information on Arienti's publications, visit www.talesfromfaxon.com, or write to Faxon Stories, P.O. Box 275 Hanover, MA 02339.

Beechwood Harbor Cruise Aug. 9

Beechwood's 10th Annual Harbor Cruise is Aug. 9, boarding at Marina Bay (MDC) Dock at 6:30 p.m., and departing at 7 p.m.

Cost is $30 per person or $50 per couple. Special group rates are available for corporate, business and family friends. Small business groups, family celebrations and neighborhood parties are specially invited this year.

"The Boston Harbor Cruise Liner is a large, three-decker ship and can accommodate over 300!," said Sharron Beals, Executive Director of Beechwood on the Bay. "It is the only time that a liner this size departs from the Marina Bay dock each year."

"This cruise has become a very popular and fun-filled summer event. Last year tickets sold out, and we expect the same community response this summer," stated Judy Paul, Center President. "We are grateful for the widespread community support each year. This is an important fundraiser for our center."

For more information call 617-471-5712.

QPAC Sets Two Dates For Summer Meetings

The Quincy Parent Advisory Council (QPAC), an organization of parents with special needs children, will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, July 11, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Lincoln Hancock School cafeteria.

A parent volunteer will be available from 6:30 to 7 p.m. to speak to parents who have specific questions regarding their children.

The next meeting will take up the subject of mediation and is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 8, from 7 to 9 p.m., also in the cafeteria of the Lincoln Hancock School.

Mediation is an informal process which allows school districts and parents to have a facilitated conversation about issues involving their special needs children.

The Bureau of Special Education Appeals will make the presentation to assist parents to understand the mediation process.

RSVP to Andrea White at 617-479-8776 by Aug. 3. The RSVP is important in making sure the Bureau of Special Education brings enough information to the seminar.

11 Residents Graduate Legion Boys, Girls State Programs

Nearly 400 high school juniors from across the state graduated from the Boys State program held at Stonehill College in North Easton.

A volunteer staff of Legionnaires and former Boys State graduates conduct the week-long program each year.

The program teaches rudiments of town, city and state government. Attendees learn how to run a campaign and the process of election. Mock Campaigns and elections are held to elect two U.S. senators, governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, treasurer and auditors. The two candidates elected for senate will travel to Boys Nation in Washington, D.C., in July.

Boys State was established in 1944 in Massachusetts by the American Legion and is now sponsored in 50 of the 52 states.

For more information on the Boys State program, contact Wendy Lee Eng at WendyEng95@yahoo.com.

'Father O'Brien Appreciation Day' At Sacred Heart School

Wednesday, June 7 was declared "Father John O'Brien Appreciation Day" at Sacred Heart School.

Fr. O'Brien, the pastor of Sacred Heart Parish, was presented with cards made by all the students. He was also honored with an entire bulletin board on the first floor.

The first grade students wrote what they admired about him (one liked to hear his stories about his sister, another thought he always dressed really nice).

There were also pictures of Fr. O'Brien at all the school events. He was presented with a green wind breaker jacket with the school's new logo on it.

Principal Katherine Hunter said the support and concern Fr. O'Brien has displayed for all the students and the entire school community was the reason he was being honored in this way.

Fr. O'Brien was quite surprised and pleased at being so honored. He said it was a pleasure to work with the entire faculty and staff at Sacred Heart School and he is looking forward to another great year next year.

Students, surrounded by family and friends, assembled in prayer and thanksgiving, and to be recognized for their achievements.

Among those recognized were several young women from Quincy who received academic, leadership, athletic and attendance awards.

Quincy resident Erin Cain served as the Baccalaureate speaker. Cain was nominated by her peers to reflect on the past four years at Fontbonne and offer insight to her fellow classmates.

In her address, Cain spoke about the wisdom that comes from experience. She likened the travel through her four years at Fontbonne Academy to the trek up the hill that connects lower campus to upper campus. She described how at first this path is just a means to get to class and home to awkward social interactions, but how soon a feeling of comfort is instilled.

Through experiences and time spent together at Fontbonne, Cain spoke about how she and her fellow classmates drew closer together in common bonds of friendship and understanding.

"We have all had our own personal losses, gains, tears, and laughs," Cain said, "but the fact of the matter is we all walked together, everyday through it all . . . I would not have wanted to walk up that hill with any other girls for these four years.

"It's an honor to have walked side by side [with all of you]."

She concluded with thanks for her classmates, family and the Fontbonne Academy faculty and staff.

"I'm blessed to have gone to such a unique and fulfilling school such as Fontbonne Academy."

Academic, Leadership, Athletic, and Attendance Awards were presented to the following Quincy residents:

Academic Awards

Leadership Awards

Lauren Austin: Dedication and Commitment to the Good Fountain Players; Nina Liang: Leadership for the Association of Diversity in Action.

Athletic Awards

Juliana Eagles: The Outstanding Career Achievement Award; Kelsey Finn: The Outstanding Leadership in Athletics Award; Christine Foley: The Scholar Athlete Award.

Perfect Attendance Award 2005-2006:

Mary Flaherty, Nina Liang and Kaitlin McGrath.

ERIN CAIN of Quincy was the Baccalaureate Speaker at Fontbonne Academy this year. Her heartfelt address received a standing ovation.

QUINCY RESIDENT Lauren Austin, right, sang with the Fontbonne Academy Select Chorus during the candlelighting ceremony portion of the school's Baccalaureate Mass. Austin also received an award for Dedication to Select Chorus.

Civil War Roundtable At Beechwood July 12

A "Civil War Roundtable" for the July Current Events Breakfast at Beechwood On the Bay will convene Wednesday, July 12 at 9 a.m. at the center.

Chuck Fazio, a long time Civil War enthusiast, will give a presentation on Civil War weapons. He is currently the Adjutant of the Wollaston Post 295. The Post meets at Beechwood each month. He is also a member of the company of Military Historians.

Participants are invited to bring Civil War memorabilia for discussion and/or identification purposes. Options include uniforms, medals, documents, citations, awards and letters. Fazio will also have memorabilia available.

To reserve a seat and for more information about the Beechwood Community Life Center, call Coordinator Maryann Mahony at 617-471-5712.

Homebuyer Workshop Begins July 24

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Citizens Bank, will host a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop July 24 from 6 to 8 p.m. and July 29 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

They will be held at Citizens Bank, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend. Participants will have the opportunity to be pre-qualified by a lender at the workshop.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person. There will be refreshments and free gifts. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

High-Velocity Air Conditioning

(NAPS) Chill out. Even in an older home, people don't have to resign themselves to living without the comforts of central air conditioning. A new technology called high-velocity air-conditioning can be added to almost any home, even those without existing ductwork.

How It Works

Also known as "mini-duct" systems, high-velocity air conditioning typically uses an outdoor compressor to cool the air, combined with a high-pressure blower (usually mounted in the attic).

Instead of bulky metal ductwork, this technology, developed by Space Pack, uses flexible tubing only two inches in diameter. The insulated tubes can be threaded behind walls or inside closets without damaging sheetrock or plaster. This makes the system much quieter than air-conditioning through traditional metal ductwork.

A mini-duct system also dehumidifies the air more effectively. The high-pressure blower compresses the air and allows it to be in contact with the cooling coils longer, which reduces the temperature and removes more humidity.

It's All Central

Actually, "high-velocity" and "mini-duct" systems are just different names for the same type of super-efficient and comfortable central air-conditioning systems. These systems are very quiet, distribute the cool air evenly throughout the house, and dehumidify effectively.

The words "high velocity" and "pressure" may give the impression that these systems are noisy, but actually they are barely audible, and there is no air flow sound at the tiny outlets.

In two-story houses, the mini-ducts are run down from the attic through the corners of the closets or inside walls to the first floor. In a single-story house, the entire system is located in the attic with outlets in the ceiling below.

Space Pack's mini-duct systems use ordinary, high-efficiency, outdoor air-conditioning compressor units. With this mini-duct system, cool air blows out from tiny two-inch openings in the ceiling or high on the walls. The outlets are barely noticeable when they are painted the same color as the room. For a decorative look, natural wood outlets are available.

Cool Ways To Save On Hot New Kitchen Looks

(NAPS) The age-old obsession with status symbols has found a welcome home in the kitchen, which is now a hotbed for name-brand appliances, luxury materials and custom work. No matter the budget, making a kitchen look like a million is all in the know-how.

To that end, consider this list of today's most popular kitchen status symbols and the snazziest alternatives.

Countertops. Real stone is the belle of the ball, with pricey granite reigning supreme. While granite is too rich for many budgets, new WilsonartHD high definition laminate is not. Complex layers of color and the high definition technology, which combines high performance and optics, create the crisp, elegant dimension of natural stone. The subtle, tactile nature of the finish gives it the feel of real stone. There are three WilsonartHD series to choose from: Bella, Sedona and Deepstar.

Cabinetry. Custom cabinets steal the show, and the budget. To get the same look for less, install oversized crown molding on top of stock cabinets to make them "pop." Also, get creative with the layout. For example, don't place all cabinets flush against the wall. Instead, bring the cabinets above the sink and stove out a few inches from the wall.

Appliances. High-end name-brand appliances are derigueur in some kitchens. Fortunately, many affordable lines offer similar looks and performance. Doubling up on less costly appliances is another way to achieve a high status look. For example, kitchens with two sinks or two refrigerators say luxury and can still be had at half the price of a single name-brand model.

Sinks. For those who don't have $1,500 to spend on a trendy oversized farmstyle sink, consider a commercial one. Many manufacturers produce lines for a range of commercial applications that suit individual needs for a fraction of the price.

Hardware. Highly popular glass or decorative nickel knobs and pulls can run as much as $16 apiece. For a look with impact that's easy on the wallet, consider oversized hardware: eight to 12 inches long as opposed to the standard four to five inches.

Gardening Shed Essentials

By REBECCA KOLLS

Here are some essential items that I keep in my garden shed:

• Gardener's First-Aid Kit: The most important thing in my shed is my first aid kit for common garden emergencies including sunburn, bug bites, cuts, and poison ivy, oak or sumac. Every gardener I know dreads poison ivy because the itch can last for weeks. A tiny brush against one of these plants can cause a whole lot of itch, but it doesn't have to with the help of one of my favorite products, CORTAID Poison Ivy Care Treatment Kit. It can be used to defend against an outbreak, help prevent spreading and treat an itchy reaction.

• Gardening Gloves: While I believe in getting my hands dirty, nothing beats a great pair of high-quality leather gardening gloves. The right gloves can protect hands from thorns, an unexpected bee or spider, sharp twigs or sticks and blistering.

• Shovels/Spade & Towel: A good shovel is the difference between making your garden work easier and giving you a backache. Look for one with a long handle (to take pressure off of your back) and flat ledge, which creates a surface for your foot. A towel is a must. Find one with a wide, curved blade that fits comfortably in your hand.

• Pruners: Pruning, deadheading (picking the dead flowers off of plants) and trimming plants goes on all year long. Look for "bypass" pruners that make a clean cut on the plant without crushing or tearing it.

• Wheelbarrows and Carts: Toting things around the garden can become a chore. Save yourself a backache and find a lightweight yet sturdy and steady cart to help with heavy work.

• Watering Essentials: A good hose has a 58-inch opening, is reinforced with a mesh layer and is kink resistant. It should handle 50 pounds per square inch of water pressure. Cost usually reflects quality, so spend the extra. For areas your hose can't reach, invest in a sturdy watering can.

With tools like these, gardening will truly be a pleasure, so get out there and "Get Your Hands Dirty."

Quincy Edges Braintree For First Win

LEGION BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

In what has been a long and trying season, the Quincy American Legion baseball team finally ended a ball game with a celebration.

After starting the season by dropping its first 10 games, Quincy broke into the win column last Friday with a thrilling, 5-4 victory at second-place Braintree in District 6 East action. It also marked the first win over them in five years.

"It was an exciting game," said coach Lenny Seitz. "It came down to the final pitch. It was one of the better games of the year. It was a great thing for the kids. They ended up carrying me off the field."

Quincy (1-11), which followed the win with an 11-4 loss to Stoughton Sunday, faced city rival Morrisette Monday, played an exhibition game against a team from Brooklyn (N.Y.) Tuesday and met Holbrook Wednesday.

It will host Milton today (Thursday) at 5 p.m. at Adams Field and travel to Canton Friday and to Weymouth this Sunday before ending the season next Monday against Braintree.

Quincy broke out on top in the second inning with a run. Tom Conley walked, Steve Kussman singled and Jay Lewis lined a single to left field to plate Conley.

In the bottom half, Quincy extinguished a Braintree rally when its co-captains came through defensively. Second baseman John Fitzgerald and shortstop Drew Loud executed a timely, inning-ending double play. The veteran combination turned a league record 21 twin-killings last season.

Braintree scored the equalizer in the third inning before Quincy responded with three runs in the fifth for a 4-1 advantage.

After Quincy loaded the bases when Doug Melanson walked, Loud singled and Kevin Bossart walked, Conley crushed a bases-clearing double, narrowly missing a home run.

In the sixth, Lewis led off with a single, moved to second on Steve Matos' fielder's choice, advanced to third on Matt Jaehnig's bunt single and scored on Melanson's sacrifice fly to center field for a 5-1 advantage.

Braintree trimmed the lead to one by scoring three times in the sixth and threatened in the seventh when it had the tying and go-ahead runs in scoring position with two outs.

Wollaston I Splits, Wollaston II Drops 2 Of 3

In Senior Babe Ruth baseball action, Wollaston I split its two games last week to bring its record to 2-4.

Joe Griffin tossed a two-hit shutout in a 4-0 victory over Hanover last Thursday. He struck out seven and walked none on 89 pitches.

John Orlando, Zach Stifler, Mike Crifo and Phi Nguyen each had a hit while Orlando made several great plays in the field.

Last Tuesday, Wollaston I dropped a 7-2 decision to Marshfield. Paul Doolan and Wendell Cosgrove drove in the runs.

Wollaston II lost two of three games at the end of June to drop its record to 2-3.

On June 20, it edged Braintree II, 9-7, in eight innings as Dave Regan (three hits) knocked in the go-ahead run with a single. Brendan Carnell added two hits. Pitcher Matt Edgerly picked up the win, allowing one hit in three shutout innings.

On June 27, Wollaston II fell behind, 6-0, before battling back to lose, 6-4. Regan and Dave Griffin each had two hits and an RBI. Carnell and Rob DeAngelis also had RBI hits.

On June 29, Wollaston II fell to Marshfield, 3-1, despite a fine pitching effort by Edgerly, who gave up only four hits. Regan (RBI) and Carnell had two hits apiece.

Morrisette's Offense Sparks Three Wins

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team celebrated the Fourth of July weekend with fireworks of its own.

Mired in a three-game losing skid, Morrisette erupted with a 10-0 shutout over Stoughton last Friday, a 17-3 rout of Holbrook last Saturday and an 8-1 triumph over Cohasset Sunday.

Morrisette (7-4), which battled cross-town rival Quincy Monday, will travel to Braintree today (Thursday) and host Weymouth Friday at 8 p.m.

The victory over Cohasset moved Morrisette out of a tie and two points ahead of them in the Division 6 East standings.

Matt Haskins picked up the win, limiting them to a pair of hits and an unearned run while striking out five. Spark plug Brandon Ranalli led the offense by going 4-for-4 with five stolen bases, two runs scored and three RBI.

Morrisette took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Chris Boyd's RBI double and Ray Marchand's RBI single.

Cohasset scored its lone run in the bottom half when a runner on third with the bases loaded crossed the plate on an errant pick-off throw to first.

Morrisette came right back with two more runs in the second on Ranalli's RBI single and Marchand's sacrifice fly.

In the fourth, Steve Connolly reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on Ranalli's single for a 5-0 lead. Mike Burke stroked a two-run single in the fifth and Ranalli added another RBI single in the sixth to close out the scoring.

Against Holbrook, Brian Sullivan notched the win, giving up two earned runs on six hits in a complete-game outing.

Morrisette grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first on RBI singles by Marchand, Brian Sullivan and Joe Garland.

After Holbrook scored a run in the second, Morrisette hammered them in the fourth inning with a 10-run outburst, highlighted by Marchand's RBI double and RBI single. Boyd added an RBI single, Steve Sullivan a two-run double, Brian Sullivan an RBI double and Joe Lousararian knocked in a run.

In the fifth, Burke had an RBI single for a 14-1 cushion before Holbrook pushed across a pair of runs in the bottom half. In the sixth, Marchand blasted a two-run triple and scored the final run on an error.

In the Stoughton game, Connolly tossed a gem, yielding just two hits and a walk while fanning eight in a 79-pitch effort.

Again Morrisette jumped out to a first-inning lead on Steve Sullivan's RBI double and Burke's two-run single.

In the third, Morrisette put the game out of reach with four runs. Marchand tripled and scored on Steve Sullivan's double. Brian Sullivan reached on an outfield error, allowing Steve Sullivan to score. After Burke reached on an error, Connolly ripped a two-run double.

Steve Sullivan cracked an RBI triple and scored on a wild pitch in the sixth and Garland had an RBI single in the seventh to account for the final score.

Playground Program Underway

The Quincy Recreation Department's summer playground program got underway yesteday (Wednesday) at 19 locations with supervised activities for boys and girls ages 6 to 16.

The playgrounds are open from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, weather permitting.

The free program includes active games and sports as well as arts and crafts and weekly sports competitions. There are special events and weekly field trips to local attractions.

In addition to the high school and college staff who are assigned to each playground, a sports specialist and arts and crafts specialist visit each location in a regular rotation.

Registration is done at the playground and continues throughout the summer to accommodate youngsters who may return from vacation or summer school programs. Participants must be Quincy residents, and may attend the program of their choice.

The locations are: Faxon Park, Kincaide, Adams Park/Bradford Street, O'Rourke, Forbes Hill, Wollaston School grounds, Perkins Field, Heron Road/Boyson Park, Palmer Park, LaBrecque, Fore River Field, Great Hill/Chapel, Squantum, Montclair/Bishop, Fenno Street, Cavanaugh Field, Mass Fields, Beechwood Knoll School grounds.

The playgrounds will be staffed until Tuesday, Aug. 15.

TACKLING A TRANSMISSION

If your vehicle is equipped with an automatic transmission, be advised that abuse and negligence can lead to costly repairs. With this in mind, maintain the transmission fluid at the proper level, and note any burnt odor or off-color. One of the first signs of trouble is delayed engagement, which occurs when there is a longer-than-normal delay between the shift from Park into Drive. There should also be a smooth shift without delay from Park into Reverse. If there is a jerk or a longish delay, the transmission should be checked by a technician. Also, take note of anything less than smooth transitions through the forward gears. Generally speaking, the quicker you address transmission problems, the less costly the repair.

Does your transmission show any signs of the mentioned signs of fatigue? If so please consult an automotive expert at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO as soon as possible. Transmissions don't fix themselves, and it can be difficult to assess a problem. Entrust your car to us. We are located at 258 Quincy Ave., East Braintree, where we have expert mechanics to service your vehicle. Questions? Call 781-843-1550. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: If there is a persistent red fluid leak under your vehicle, have the transmission and power-steering system checked.

Men's Slowpitch Softball

A DIVISION

Fatman's Cafe.....11-1
Hancock Tavern.....13-2
Granite Rail.....7-5
Harry's Carpet One.....6-6
Goal Post Pirates.....2-10

Notes: Fatman's Cafe avenged its only loss to Hancock Tavern with a win of its own and has regained first place . . . Granite Rail, led by Dave MacPhee, continues to improve as the season goes on.

B DIVISION

Cagney's.....10-3
Yellow Cab.....7-5
Moose Lodge.....8-8
Gold's Gym.....7-7
Jeff's Smoke Shop.....3-10

Notes: Cagney's continues to play good ball while Yellow Cab, led by Wayne McCulley, and Moose Lodge, led by Bill Gile, are making a mid-season charge . . . Gold's Gym, led by Michael Goldstein, continues to be much improved over last season's performances.

C DIVISION

Iscribe, Ltd.....7-4
Malachy's.....6-8
Local 792.....4-10
Quincy Pirates.....3-9
Comm. Vending.....2-8

Notes: Iscribe, led by Luke Dwyer, seems to have the speed advantage in the C Division while Malachy's core unit, led by Phil Brown, is made up of returning players.

A Job Well Done

On June 26, at approximately 8:57 a.m., dispatch broadcast to the Wollaston area cars a "Breaking and Entering" in progress at St. Ann's Church.

LT. DAN MINTON

According to the caller, the male suspect was in the sacristy. Lieutenant Dan Minton, who happened to be in the area as the call came in, drove up the driveway and as he approached the rear door near the sacristy, rectory staff in the adjacent building called out that the suspect was now in the rectory.

Responding units included Sergeant Sean Duggan, Officers Mark Millane and Paul Matthews as well as Detectives Cindy Walsh and Karyn Barkas. Minton advised responding units to cover the front door as he searched the building and then notified headquarters he had the suspect in custody. Walsh and Barkas arrived on scene and took control of the suspect.

The suspect demanded to know why he was being detained and he was advised of the incident. He adamantly stated he goes to church every Sunday and would never "sink to something so low as breaking into a church."

Once read Miranda Rights, the suspect said he came to the rectory initially to ask for food, but saw a priest in the driveway first. The priest told him to go the rectory office, which he did and was allowed inside. The suspect denied every going into the church.

Barkas entered the sacristy in search of evidence and found the locked cabinet door to the church's Tabernacle had been forced open and broken off. Barkas also learned a small brass key on a gold chain was missing from the cabinet door.

A parishioner, who was arriving for Mass, stated he entered the sacristy just before Mass and saw the suspect in front of the Tabernacle. When the suspect realized he had been discovered, he fled the sacristy through a door leading to the altar. The witness said he could identify him.

Barkas had Walsh escort the suspect out of the rectory, where the witness said he was "100 percent sure that's the guy." The suspect was placed under arrest.

Matthews questioned the suspect further and learned from the suspect that after being discovered in the sacristy, he fled via the altar toward the Super 88 Food Market next door. The suspect said he dropped the brass key with gold chain in a trash can and hid a red handled screwdriver under a rug just before Minton had found him. Matthews and Walsh located the brass key and gold chain in the trash can and found the screwdriver under the rug.

The suspect, a 40-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Breaking and Entering into a Building," "Possession of Burglarious Tools," "Larceny in a Building" and "Willful and Malicious Destruction of Property." The screwdriver was tagged and placed into evidence. Nice work!

Get Your Family Moving This Summer

Q. Do you have any suggestions to help me motivate my family to be more active this summer? I want my children to avoid a summer of video games and Internet surfing and really spend more quality family time having fun and staying fit.

A. You have the right idea. It's a fact that families who exercise and are active together lower their risk of obesity and other related medical conditions. But busy schedules and the many available forms of entertainment have put exercise on the back burner. With creative thinking, you can get your family up, moving and having fun.

Begin by making time within your family's busy schedule to meet together. This may be challenging at first, but do your best to get the whole family to participate.

Be creative with the type of activities you find for your family to do. Get everyone involved in the planning so the interests of each family member are included. Be sure that each family member can participate in the chosen activities. If you have children of widely varying ages, be sure that the youngest to the oldest can all enjoy the activities.

During the summer you can move the fun outside. Walk or ride bikes after dinner. Swimming, skating and roller blading, and sports such as tennis, golf and basketball are great ways to get moving.

Also consider trying something new. The whole family learning a new skill or activity can keep everyone's interests. Look into different activities such as indoor/outdoor rock climbing walls or surfing parks. Take lessons to learn the basic skills for a more enjoyable experience.

Other ideas include signing up for a charity 5K road race. The family can run together while helping a good cause. Most 5 kilometer races (about 3 miles) offer kids' runs — shorter distances for younger participants. This allows you to include the entire family, no matter what the age.

Although your question involved staying active during the summer, you'll want to continue these habits year-round. Make it a part of your family's lifestyle to stay active with each other when possible. When summer ends and your schedules become busier again with school and other responsibilities, continue to find time to play with each other — even if it's for shorter periods. An overall healthy lifestyle for your family is an activity for all seasons.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@ hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Advanced Medical Records, Patient Education And Support, And Care Management Cited

Harvard-Vanguard Medical Associates Recognized Nationally For Quality Care

Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates in Quincy was recently awarded recognition from the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA) for work in advanced medical records, patient education and support, and care management.

They are:

Dr. Donald Accetta, Dr. Deepa Arya, Dr. Susan Beebe, Dr. Gerry Campos, Dr. Katharine Carter, Dr. Cheryl Cragwell, Dr. Christopher Doyle, Dr. James Liu, Dr. Nancy Loughridge, Dr. Steven Matfis, Dr. Martha Moss, Dr. Marc Oster, Dr. Douglas Penta, Dr. Graeme Steele, Dr. So-Fai Tsang, Dr. Michael Whitner, and Dr. Peter Young.

"It is an honor to have 14 of our locations recognized nationally," said Dr. Richard Marshall, Chief Medical Officer for Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates. "Harvard Vanguard has a strong history of developing and utilizing systems that ensure our physicians can deliver a consistently high level of patient care across our large practice."

Physician Practice Connections recognizes physician practices that use information systematically to improve the quality of patient care. Practices meeting program standards monitor for patients who need care, measure quality across their entire practice and ensure that abnormal test results receive follow-up. Such approaches have been shown to improve medical outcomes and to reduce errors.

NCQA lauded Harvard Vanguard's work in earning recognition.

"Good information at the point of care is crucial to delivering quality health care," said NCQA President Margaret E. O'Kane. "Physician Practice Connections identifies those doctors who make the most out of clinical information they have on hand to make better decisions and provide better follow-up. The physicians at Harvard Vanguard are to be commended for their significant achievement."

Harvard Vanguard's innovative quality improvement efforts have also drawn attention from Bridges to Excellence (BTE), a non-profit coalition-based organization created to encourage significant leaps in the quality of care by rewarding health care providers for demonstrating that they deliver safe, timely, effective, and patient-centered care. The Quincy site, along with the 13 other Harvard Vanguard sites that have earned NCQA recognition are now eligible to earn incentive rewards from Bridges to Excellence for their high-quality care.

"Harvard Vanguard has demonstrated significant leadership through their work with these practices. The systems that are now in place are an example of Harvard Vanguard's continual drive towards delivering outstanding care," said Francois de Brantes, National Coordinator for Bridges to Excellence. "BTE participating employers are proud to have supported this effort."

Harvard Vanguard has been a leader in Massachusetts for linking its state-of-the-art electronic medical records (EMR) system, EpicCare, with strong clinical protocols to help physicians and patients manage their medical care.

Tai Chi Begins July 12 At Milton Hospital

Milton Hospital will host an eight week Tai Chi class beginning Wednesday, July 12.

The cost is $80, and the class runs from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., in the Nangeroni Center on the first floor.

Pre-payment and registration are required. The eight-week course ends Aug. 30.

Tai Chi is a gentle, flowing progression of movements designed to calm the mind, relax the body, attain better balance, rehabilitate injuries and promote whole body health.

For more information or to register call the Milton Hospital Community Education Department at 617-696-8810.

Safe And Clean Ice

(NAPS) All ice is not the same, and contaminated ice can be a health risk.

As the weather begins to heat up, so does ice consumption to keep beverages and food cold and fresh. Whether it's a backyard BBQ, a picnic at the park or a daily glass of iced tea, people need safe, clean ice.

Recent news reports have shown that some ice in fast-food restaurants is dirtier than toilet water. Whether processed and packaged from a moldy ice machine, mishandled through the use of dirty buckets or even handscooped by dirty hands, it is difficult to know exactly what people are buying and consuming.

Here are a few tips for purchasing clean, safe ice:

- Ice should be clear in color as well as odorless and tasteless.
- The bag should be properly closed and secure.
- The bag should have the manufacturer's name, address and phone number.
- The bag should be free of any foreign objects.
- The bag should have a product code.

According to a recent study conducted by Michigan State university, there is a heightened concern with safety of foods among consumers. In fact, 63 percent of the consumers interviewed are very or fairly concerned about the safety of the foods they eat and almost half of the respondents said they do not buy foods that are likely to be unsafe.

This summer, the International Packaged Ice Association (IPIA) wants consumers to know that all ice is not created equal and that ice shoppers need to be selective. When buying packaged ice, look for a product that has been packaged by a certified IPIA member and caries the IPIA seal.

The seal means that the packaged ice consumers are buying meets the association's strict quality and safety policy. The stringent Packaged Ice Quality Control Standards (PIQCS) are mandated for all IPIA members to ensure safe and quality ice. The standards regulate employees' personal hygiene, sanitary operations of the facilities, equipment and utensils used in making ice, quality of the water source and continuous microbiological testing of the finished product.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A MORE GENTLE APPROACH

While any dentist would be happy with a patient who is dedicated to regular brushing and flossing, there is such a thing as being too strenuous with brushing. If you are brushing your teeth too aggressively, your forceful approach may contribute to gum recession and other problems. Gum recession associated with vigorous tooth brushing is most likely to appear in the area of the back teeth opposite the brushing hand. You may also be experiencing heightened sensitivity to cold drinks. To avoid these problems, try brushing your teeth with a soft-bristled toothbrush and light pressure for two to three minutes at a time. Using your non-dominant hand may help you pay better attention to your brushing technique.

We can give you tips on the proper way to brush and floss. We'll also recommend a personalized oral home care program to meet your specific needs. We take the time to talk, and answer any questions you may have. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We explain all procedures and what they will do for your smile, and we take the time to be gentle. Brushing and flossing correctly helps keep your teeth white and healthy. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our friendly staff and relaxing environment will put you at ease. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Another sign of aggressive tooth-brushing is a toothbrush with squashed, splayed bristles.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening; otherwise, you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send to you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

VIRGO (August 23 September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now's the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hardworking Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Sympathy is two hearts tugging at one load." – Charles H. Parkhurst

A farmer was out plowing his field one spring morning. The spring thaw had just occurred and there were many muddy valleys in the field. Through one particularly wet place, his tractor become stuck in the mud. The harder he tried, the deeper he became struck. Finally, he walked over to his neighbor's to ask for help. The neighbor came over and looked at the situation. He shook his head, and then said, "It doesn't look good, but I tell you what. I'll give it a try pulling you out. But if we can't get it out, I'll come sit in the mud with you."

Although we may not all be farmers, we do experience getting "stuck in the mud" from time to time. And chances are we probably know someone who is stuck right now. Have you tried "mud-sitting" with a friend? . . . It may be the best thing you can do. . .

Kindergarten Concert At Sacred Heart School Celebrates Year Of Learning, Achievement

The 73 Pre-Kindergarten and Kindergarten students at Sacred Heart School, North Quincy capped off a year of learning and forming new friendships with an hour-long end of year celebration.

Under the direction of the kindergarten music teacher, Mrs. Elaine McCarthy, the students sang nine songs for their parents, siblings and grandparents.

Mrs. McCarthy has been introducing to her four and five year old students the basics of musical scales and how to raise their voices together in song all year. Their weekly music classes are a clear favorite of the students.

The students enthusiastically clapped, signed, and two students even hula-hooped in harmony. They then received their "diploma", a certificate acknowledging their hard work and accomplishments.

Mrs. Katherine Hunter, Sacred Heart School's principal and Fr. John O'Brien, Sacred Heart Parish's pastor, thanked the students for their amazing energy and enthusiasm for learning.

The afternoon was a terrific success.

Sacred Heart School is continuing to accept registrations for various grades for the upcoming school year. Tours are offered of the school by appointment in the summer.

To arrange a tour or to ask questions regarding admissions to Sacred Heart, call 617-328-8666.

Museum To Recall Squantum, S. Weymouth Air Bases

SHEA FIELD Memorial Grove at the former South Weymouth Naval Air Station, named for Cdr. John Shea, once executive officer of the base at Squantum, who died a hero in World War II, is near the site planned for a museum.

While most of the historic items are from NAS South Weymouth, the oldest are from NAS Squantum, which was established by the Navy as a seaplane base for training and patrol in 1917, only 14 years after the Wright Brothers first flew.

The memorabilia at the current museum includes the U.S. Naval Reserve Squantum banner that flew over the base when it was authorized in 1923 and commissioned as a reserve base in 1925 under the leadership of Lt. Richard E. Byrd.

"The flag goes back to the 1920-25 period," said Horsch.

Also on exhibit is an old wooden propeller from the days prior to jets when prop-driven aircraft like the F4U Corsair, the F6F Hellcat and the Curtis Jenney of World War I ruled the Squantum skies.

There is also a nod to Commander Jack Shea, once executive officer of the Squantum base, who died a hero in the sinking of the Quincy-built aircraft carrier Wasp in the Solomon Islands in World War II.

His letter to his son, explaining to him war and what to do if he doesn't come back, has become a literary classic. Shea Field at both bases and Commander Shea Boulevard in Quincy were named in his memory.

The arrival of jet aircraft after the war and the proximity of Logan International Airport in East Boston doomed NAS Squantum, then a reserve training base, and it was closed and moved to South Weymouth.

NAS South Weymouth opened in 1942 as a base for blimps patrolling the waters off the Atlantic coast during World War II. It was manned by a skeleton crew after the war until 1953 when NAS Squantum moved in.

Both Horsch and Charlie Murray, his colleague in spreading word of the Squantum/South Weymouth museum, are Navy veterans whose 20 years of service include tours at both Squantum and South Weymouth.

Murray was an aviation ordnance chief at Squantum in 1952 and South Weymouth in 1955. Horsch was chief avionics technician at Squantum 1947-53 and South Weymouth 1953-57.

MEMA's Hurricane Safety Tips For Boat Owners

"If you are a boat owner, you know that preparing your boat for a hurricane is just as important as preparing your home," says Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency Director Cristine McCombs. "MEMA has some important safety tips for boat owners as they prepare for the upcoming hurricane season."

• Boat owners should assemble emergency equipment and supplies as well as all of the necessary gear on board to properly tie down their vessel. Realize that it may not be possible to pull the boat out of the water. Precious time is lost when searching for gear as a storm approaches.

• Identify hurricane holes and safe harbors in the area in the event of being caught at sea.

• Have a plan worked out with the marina operator so there are no questions or confusion when the time comes to tie up or pull the boat from the water.

• Insure that the vessel is as watertight as possible. Use duct tape and plugs to seal hatches, ports, windows, doors and vents.

• Remove all electronics, valuables and non-essential items.

• Have insurance policies, boat registration, a recent photograph and description of the vessel, gear inventory, marina or storage lease agreement and important telephone numbers (local harbormaster, U.S. Coast Guard, National Weather Service, insurance agent) in a secure place off of the boat.

• When through, help neighbors in the water. It only takes one poorly tied boat in a marina to destroy an entire dock.

• Do not stay on the boat.

For more information on hurricane preparedness, visit www.mass.gov/mema.

Phelan Wants City To Take Over State-Owned Land

Mayor William Phelan wants the city to take control of state-owned land along Wollaston Beach, Furnace Brook Parkway and Squantum Point Park.

Phelan, in a letter to Commissioner Stephen Burrington of the state Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), cited the state's neglect in maintaining the property and requested a meeting to discuss Quincy taking it over.

Phelan called the condition along Furnace Brook Parkway "disgusting" and Wollaston Beach "regrettable."

"Squantum Point Park is a waste of one of the most valuable pieces of real estate in Quincy," he told Burrington.

Phelan said:

"The people of Quincy should not suffer from the neglect that the state has shown us over the years. State-owned properties in Boston, Hull and Revere are well-maintained and we continue to get the short end of the stick.

"The weeds along Furnace Brook Parkway are six feet tall and I am incredibly frustrated at the lack of attention we receive despite being one of the largest communities in the Commonwealth."

Phelan also cited the abandonment of Squantum Point Park and the adjoining pier.

"This could be of the most beautiful pieces of parkland in Quincy yet it sits there neglected, without any real future plan for use," Phelan continued. "You could not afford to build a pier like that, yet we let one simply go

360,000 Clam Seedlings Set To Revive Industry

By TOM HENSHAW

Clam Warden Andy Ayer supervised this week the planting of 360,000 clam seedlings which are expected to become a bonanza for Quincy's clam diggers when they become adults in 18 to 20 months.

It represents another step in the comeback of an industry that has been declining in these parts for the past 10 years.

"We seeded 180,000 last night," said Ayer Tuesday morning. "We'll seed another 180,000 tonight. That will equal 1,200 bushels of adult clams when they reach maturity.

"There are fewer clams now than there were 30 years ago when I became warden. In the mid-90s there were so many diggers in Quincy that they dug most of the clams.

"Now there are fewer men digging and the clams are slowly coming back."

There are 30 persons, most of them Quincy residents, who hold clam-diggers' licenses from the city and state. Only commercial diggers are allowed to work the clam flats five days a week.

Old-time diggers, like former Mayor Frank McCauley, can recall a day when clams were so thick in the Quincy flats that their seedlings were shipped out to other coastal communities.

"Years ago the process was reversed," he said. "We used to go out and dig small clams and send them to other areas to help their diggers."

McCauley, who lives in Houghs Neck and dug clams on and off for 16 years, recalled that in his day it seemed like everybody dug clams, high school and college students, weekenders.

'Still So Much Work To Be Done'

Neighborhood Housing Services Helps With Katrina Relief Efforts

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore recently sent two volunteers to assist with Hurricane Katrina housing relief efforts in storm damaged neighborhoods of New Orleans.

Donna Ackerman, Assistant Director of NHS of the South Shore and Arthur Tucker, resident volunteer, each spent a week working with partner organizations, NeighborWorks America, FannieMae and the Community College Foundation.

Ackerman and Tucker helped to staff the HomeHelp Express, a bus outfitted with computer stations, satellite internet connections, housing information and counselors from local housing agencies.

Residents from affected neighborhoods in New Orleans were able to access property insurance information, building permits, credit histories, receive mortgage counseling and overall assistance in housing.

Both volunteers met with families and individuals faced with many obstacles as they try to re-establish residency in devastated neighborhoods.

"There is still so much work to be done," was the sentiment of both volunteers. Since Hurricane Katrina hit the Gulf Coast in August of last year, there has been recovery in many neighborhoods, but some areas remain uninhabitable and will require total rehabilitation.

Both volunteers kept journals during their stay. Below are excerpts from their experiences.

From Arthur Tucker:

"My work location for the week was across the river in Gretna, at a shopping mall and in an area that had seen better days. We were located just outside a FEMA office at the mall, which was manned by two armed security guards.

BADLY DAMAGED home and debris in a residential section of the Lower Ninth Ward in New Orleans. While some areas have recovered from Hurricane Katrina, there are still areas that remain uninhabitable and will require total rehabilitation, according to two volunteers from the Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore who recently spent a week in Louisiana assisting housing relief efforts in storm-damaged neighborhoods.

"The work group consisted of people who offered information on food stamps, section 8, rental housing, homeless shelter for women, insurance claim status, first time home buyer assistance, credit reports, and job search. I would estimate that there were between 60 to 80 people who dropped in on a daily basis.

"I spent some of my work hours greeting people outside the bus, leading them inside to sign up, either directing them to the appropriate person, or asking them to take a seat and wait. I also sat down with numerous individuals and helped them by printing out credit reports, showing them web sites for job searches, housing rental, real estate prices and purchase."

Tucker said there are two people he remembers most:

"A single woman, about 50 years old, with one son and four grandchildren. She was of some financial means, but had lost her home and everything in it. She had spent all her time since Katrina living in about 6 different places all over the country with family and friends.

"She came back to New Orleans to be with her son, "pick up the pieces" and try to find a place to live while the insurance status of her destroyed home gets resolved. I helped get her credit reports and did a job search.

The other person is a senior citizen, about the age of 75, who had lived in the same modest ranch house in the Lower 9th Ward for nearly 50 years, that was paid for.

"He had homeowners insurance, but not flood insurance," Tucker recalled. "His house and everything in it was totally washed away, he did not know where. They offered him $18,000, said take it or leave it. Unbelievable. There wasn't much I could do for him."

From Donna Ackerman:

"My time on the bus was spent meeting individuals and families who had suffered significant losses. Each story was more compelling than the next.

"As you know, the devastation was great and the problems that followed are even greater. I listened to stories of families without flood insurance, families without damage insurance, families with insurance who were in mitigation, families who had received their settlements, only to be bewildered by what to do with the funds.

"Would their neighborhood be rebuilt? Or would it be destined for 'greenspace' in the near future. Some families are struggling to pay their mortgages, while living elsewhere.

"As an NHS worker with nearly 20 years of experience, I was asked to assist in matters that pushed my counseling knowledge and skills to the maximum. In many ways it was the epitome of validation of the work NeighborWorks does. As a human being, I was tested daily as I listened to heartbreaking stories of loss and frustration.

"I struggled to maintain hope. In reality, the people I was servicing were much more hopeful and resilient than I was. They were an inspiration. And they kept on coming."

John Quincy Adams Honored With Presidential Wreath

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A wreath from President George Bush and remarks of praise honored President John Quincy Adams on the 239th anniversary of his birth, Tuesday.

A wreath was placed by members of the Quincy Navy Reserve Center, Lieutenant Commander Scott Graham, commanding officer, and Arthur Ducharme, director of the Historic Interpretive Program on his tomb in the crypt of historic United First Parish Church.

It was the 42nd wreath placed on his birthday, a tradition that started during the presidency of Lyndon Johnson.

Mayor William Phelan described Adams, the sixth president, as having a "pure" political record that is "marked most drastically, by his willingness to stand up in slavery. It was a brave position, albeit an unpopular one."

Remarks of praise were given by: Phelan, Ducharme, Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Minister of the United First Parish Church, and William Westland, United First Parish Church member, Caroline Keinath, deputy, superintendent of the National Historical Park, Kirt Switzer, member of the Church, Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, member of the Quincy Historical Society, and Lieutenant Commander Scott Graham.

Keinath and Fitzgerald agreed that Adams was an enigma that while describing himself as a cold, and reserved man, with an exterior that many could not break through, his diaries and letters showed compassion, love, and appreciation towards the people in his life.

Keinath described a journal entry that showed his vulnerability and anguish after losing his mother, and how it had severed ties to his childhood.

"These are not the words of a cold, indifferent man," said Keinath.

"Underneath that cold exterior was a warm man," said Fitzgerald. "The richness of the man and his spirit, which was not always evident to everyone, came through in his diaries."

"We remember John Quincy Adams for many things, but often overlooked is his devotion to churches," said Bennett. "The church was important to John Quincy Adams, it had been the church of his family."

Bennett described the intimidation of delivering a service with such a brilliant and educated man as John Quincy Adams sitting in a pew, as he did hundreds of years ago. "Sometimes I look out at the pulpit and I imagine how daunting it would be."

"John Quincy Adams was many things," said Ducharme. "Like his father, John Quincy Adams was a man of faith." Ducharme said that Adams stressed the importance of living life as his faith had taught him.

Graham said that he was proud to represent the president in honoring a "great American."

The oldest son of John Adams, the second President, he served an extended political career that started in his teens, during the American Revolution. He served as U.S. Minister to Prussia, and after a term as U.S. Senator from Massachusetts, he served as Minister to Russia. He signed the Treaty of Ghent in 1814 which concluded the War of 1812, served as minister to Great Britain, and continued on to become Secretary of State under President Monroe. He served as President from 1825-1829, and after a 16-year run as a member of the House of Representatives, he died in 1848.

"As I look at the list of what he accomplished, I'm always a bit overwhelmed," said Switzer. "What we see here is a man that lived fully every day of his life."

"Quincy is proud to call a man of such principles, their own," said Phelan.

Music for the service was provided by the U.S. Navy Brass Ensemble, with a hymn by Kathleen Adams, American Guild of Organists.

Peter Boylston Adams, treasurer of Adams Memorial Foundation, was a scheduled speaker, but was unable to attend the ceremony.

Beale Street Re-paving Sidewalks Work Underway

Beale Street in Wollaston will be re-paved from Adams Street to Newport Avenue over the next two weeks.

Crews from Aggregate Industries are already at work on the project, said Mayor William Phelan and DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell.

Sidewalks from Lakin Square down to Summit Avenue will be replaced entirely and sidewalk repairs will be performed all along Beale Street from Summit Avenue to Newport Avenue. In addition, 48 new ADA sidewalk ramps will be installed.

"I am thrilled to see new pavements on Beale Street," Phelan said. "Our residents have been patient as we replaced the century-old water main but we wanted to ensure that we did this project the right way. We will continue to make improvements to our streets and sidewalks throughout the city in an effort to improve our neighborhoods."

Crews will be milling the street this week and laying new pavement next week. Commuters should expect delays and seek alternate routes when possible.

An Early Start For Phelan?

The next city election is still more than a year away but for political observers, it's more like just around the corner.

And that means speculation time.

PHELAN

He hasn't publicly said "yes" or "no" but it's virtually a sure thing he will seek a fourth term.

And, he appears to be getting off to an early start.

His committee is sponsoring a reception for him Tuesday, July 25, 5 to 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Inn, 21 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The invitation is simply worded as a reception in Phelan's honor. The return card, however, refers to it as "Bill's Campaign Reception."

Suggested donation: $125.

It would appear to be a fund-raiser for a fourth term run.

And, that naturally raises the inevitable question: will he get an opponent or a free ride?

There are six city councillors considered as interested in someday moving into the mayor's office:

Council President Doug Gutro, Joe Finn, John Keenan, Mike McFarland, Dan Raymondi and Kevin Coughlin.

But would any of them challenge Phelan next year?

If one were to, the more likely of the six would seem to be Finn. He came close to running last year.

FINN

But at this time, he isn't saying he will. He isn't saying he won't. And he isn't saying maybe.

"I'm keeping all of my options open," he says. (Period.)

The others seem to be willing to bide their time for a run somewhere down the road. For Raymondi it could be a short road.

RAYMONDI

Phelan has the look of a definite fourth term candidate. He likes the job. The power. The prestige. And he has some projects he wants to see completed. Especially a new Quincy High School and getting the Quincy Center concourse down to Southern Artery.

If Finn doesn't run, it looks like a free ride next year for Phelan.

He rode to an easy third term last year unopposed on the ballot and swamping a sticker candidate.

With no challenger on the ballot — and despite the sticker candidate — Phelan qualified as only the fourth mayor in the city's history to be re-elected unopposed.

BURGIN

SHEETS

Thomas Burgin was the first in 1940. Frank McCauley, the second in 1983. And James Sheets the third with not one, but three free rides in 1991, 1993 and 1997.

Phelan took the keys to the mayor's office away from Sheets in 2001 by a slim 17 votes in the closest mayoral race and the biggest political upset in the city's history.

For years mayors traditionally came out of the city council. Phelan changed that. He came out of the school committee where he served only two years before being elected mayor.

And speaking of tradition all 29 mayors have been men.

There are those who hope to see a woman sitting behind the mayor's desk one of these days.

Four women have tried to get there.

Rita Anderson (1971), Grace Saphir (1973 and 1975) and Joanne Condon and Sabina (Kavanagh) Stenberg, both in 1985.

SAPHIR

Of the four women, Saphir was the top vote-getter polling 10,416 against incumbent Walter Hannon's 15,492 in 1973.

Could another mayor come out of the city council? And is there a woman mayor in the city's future?

Could those two questions be answered with one name?

A name, say, like Anne Mahoney.

Mahoney made a dazzling political debut last year, winning one of the three vacant school committee seats. But it was the way she did it.

MAHONEY

She led a 12-candidate field in the preliminary election. And then topped the six-candidate field in the final with a 1,209 vote margin.

She worked hard in both elections, knocking on doors throughout the city — losing 10 pounds doing it.

And, she listened to what people had to say.

She's the attractive mother of three young children who also makes an attractive candidate. Right now, her interest is in doing a good job as a member of the school committee.

But someday could she — or someone like her — be that first woman mayor?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A REAL photo postcard reproduction showing an aerial view of Swingles Quarry in West Quincy. Previously known as Elcock Quarry it was purchased in the 1890s by Jonathan Swingle and Alexander Falconer. The two later separated their businesses and Swingles went on to expand his holdings eventually owning four quarries on 50 acres of land in the West Quincy hills. This quarry produced the Quincy Granite Gazing Ball made from the Extra Dark Quincy granite that Swingle made famous. The small bridge in the foreground separated Swingles from the Granite Railway quarry that was adjacent to it. In 1963 the Swingles Quarry had reached a depth of 350 feet and was then owned and operated by Antonio Ruscitto & sons, who shut it down after two workmen fell to their death. That was the end of granite quarrying in Quincy. The quarry was a treacherous place for swimmers and was eventually filled with material from the Ted Williams Tunnel. This area, with spectacular views, will soon become a city park. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Democracy And Values Being Chipped Away

Your Sunbeams column on June 22 needs further exposition. We should all be concerned if our democracy and values are being chipped away.

I suggest that your readers consider their own attitude towards the actions of the three branches of government: congress, the chief executive, and the courts. The most recent action was by the senate.

Why did our senators vote against the almost two-thirds majority, including many intelligent and thoughtful members of the Democratic party? Why haven't they shown support for Senator Clinton of New York who proposed to provide better statutory protection for the display of our flag?

Why haven't the President and the Executive Department helped design better bipartisan legislation? Why isn't the public more considerate of the flag? Are we all getting indifferent and letting our traditions get chipped away as you say?

Do the schools still teach why Francis Scott Key composed his poem during the war of 1812?

The United States Senate has rejected, by one vote, submitting a constitutional amendment to the states authorizing Congress to provide better protection of the American national flag from desecration.

This need not end the discussion. It would be timely to recall certain principles.

The decision of the Supreme Court, by a five to four vote, that it would be a constitutional violation of the First Amendment for Congress to legislate against the desecration of the flag, is binding. A five to four vote is as binding as a nine to zero vote of the Court. There is a general recognition that freedom of speech, to some extent, includes symbolic acts of expression.

In the 1943 case in West Virginia involving the refusal of certain Jehovah's Witnesses to salute a flag, Justice Robert Jackson explained that at times, symbolism can be an effective, albeit primitive, way of communicating ideas.

In 1968, the Supreme Court considered the freedom of expression rights of a man named O'Brien who was apprehended burning his draft card on the steps of the South Boston District Court. The Court held that he violated a statute seeking to facilitate operations of the Selective Service System.

By 1989, a different Court majority held a different point of view.

In Texas vs. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, the majority believed that there was a protected freedom of expression for one Johnson to burn an American flag publicly at the 1984 Republican National Convention. However, the decision written by Justice Brennan fails to take account of some factors, and does not satisfactorily comply with precedents.

There are flags which under American law cannot be misused. The Hague and Geneva Conventions stipulate that the flag of the Red Cross is a symbol of humanitarian medical haven, and cannot be moved or misused in any manner. These treaty obligations are part of the supreme law of the land, under our constitution.

Under international law, the flag and embassy-consular buildings have extraterritorial status. For example, it is illegal to tamper with the Russian flag at the embassy on 16th Street in Washington, or for Russians to tamper with the American flag at our embassy in Moscow. Historically, flags have become vital symbols of nationhood.

Congress should enact a statute that properly provides for the respect of our flag, and indicate the public purposes being served.

If a future case arises involving alleged desecration of the flag, the Court should craft a more sensible and persuasive decision than the Texas case, and that case should be restricted to its facts.

The executive branch of the government should avoid prosecution of pitiful people like Johnson, and choose to prosecute only significant violations.

All of us should take more care in displaying and saluting the flag.

Jet Noise Compromise Summit Meeting Is Set

Week Of July 10

By FRANK McCAULEY

Representatives of the Federal Aviation Administration and citizen groups from Boston, Quincy and three other communities are scheduled to meet July 19 to see if they can reach a compromise in the long dispute over airplane noise that has gone on for over a year.

Federal Judge David Nelson had urged the meeting be held before he rules on a petition by the city of Quincy and the towns of Milton and Hull to intervene in a suit brought by the city of Boston to force aircraft taking off from Logan Airport to use a route other than one over South Boston.

One of the alternate routes would take the planes over Quincy. The 180 degree heading raised a ruckus in Squantum and Wollaston last summer when a change in routes was made without consulting Quincy residents.

Bernice Mader, chairperson of Citizens Against Airport Noise, demanded aircraft departing Logan use routes over the ocean.

CITY EYES TAKEOVER OF MBTA PARKING LOTS

Mayor Arthur Tobin is considering a city takeover of the parking lots at the MBTA stations in order to improve maintenance and policing of the areas.

"We're dissatisfied with the way the parking around the stations has been handled," said Tobin, noting the leases between the MBTA and Allright Boston Parking will expire next April 30.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

At the halfway point in the 1979 season, the Boston Red Sox were in second place in the American League East, two games behind the league leaders. Jim Rice, batting .325, was the only Red Sox player in the top 10 in hitting in the American League.

Quincy Artist's Paintings On Exhibit At Library During July

Quincy artist Isabel Shamitz will exhibit oil paintings of urban scene in Boston, Quincy and other cities during the month of July in the Coletti Reading Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Shamitz tries to capture in her work moments in time using a realistic style heavily influenced by the themes and colors of impressionism and the artists Mary Cassatt and Norman Rockwell.

She has a degree in fine arts from the University of Maryland and has studied at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the Boston Artists Guild.

INTERNET CLASSES

An introduction to the Internet class will be offered on the fourth Wednesday of each month this summer in the computer room of the Main Library. The class covers such basics as how to conduct a Google Web search.

Classes are scheduled for June 28, July 26 and Aug. 23 at 10 a.m. No advanced registration is required but participants must have previous experience using a mouse and a keyboard. If not call 617-376-1316 or stop by the reference desk.

MONTHLY ANIME SCREENING

The library will present the Japanese anime film "Howl's Moving Castle" Thursday, July 13, at 6:30 p.m.

Sophie, a 19-year-old girl who believes she is plain, has resigned herself to a drab life in her family's hat shop — until the Witch of the Waste transforms her into a 90-year-old woman.

In her aged guise, Sophie searches for a way to break the Witch's spell and finds unexpected adventures. The program is intended for adults and teens aged 13 and older.

Father Bill's Place Food Fest, Auction Aug. 1

Father Bill's Place will host the 12th annual Food Fest & Action at WaterWorks in Marina Bay Tuesday, Aug. 1, from 6-10 p.m.

The evening's proceeds will benefit the agency's programs and services for the homeless in the South Shore.

The money raised at this event will help people like Donna, who has recently gone from homeless to housed, with the help of Father Bill's Place.

Donna arrived at Father Bill's Place in the summer of 2005. She had recently been hospitalized and was discharged with no place to return to. She wanted to remain close to the doctors who were caring for her. She arrived at Father Bill's Place with little more than the clothes she was wearing.

Donna credits Father Bill's Place and its staff of case managers, nurses and direct care workers with helping her get back on her feet. In addition to providing her with the appropriate service and programs, like Mass Health and assistance from the Department of Transitional Assistance, the staff helped her in other ways as well. They helped her join the YMCA and provided her with eye care and necessary vaccinations. Most importantly, they gave her support when she needed it; a shoulder to lean on during the bad moments.

After three and a half months at the shelter, where Donna connected with the Department of Mental Health and Work, Inc., she was able to move into an apartment of her own. Now, just a few months later, she is settled in her knew home, paying rent, and working on "getting back into the race." She has been taking computer classes and recently interviews for a full-time administrative position. She views the day she moved into her apartment as the "first day of life."

Now in its 12th year, the Food Fest features more than 40 of the finest local restaurants, bakeries, and wine distributors sampling their wares for the 1,500 people who turn out for the "event of the summer."

Auction items include a Red Sox jersey autographed by rookie sensation Jonathan Papelbon, dinner at the four-star-rated Aujourd'hui restaurant at the Four Seasons Hotel, Boston, and a trip for two to New York Fashion Week in September.

The Food Fest & Auction is sponsored by William Gallagher Associates, The Patriot Ledger, New England Realty Group, and Jay Cashman, Inc.

Father Bill's Place is an interfaith housing provider committed to providing permanent solutions to the problem of homelessness. Since its inception in 1984 as an emergency shelter, Father Bill's Place has grown into a highly visible, well-respected social service agency assisting the entire South Shore community.

Father Bill's Place remains steadfast in its mission to help homeless people obtain a home by giving temporary shelter and food, finding safe and affordable housing, and providing permanent housing with supportive services. Father Bill's Place helps people who are homeless, or at risk of homelessness, to achieve self-sufficiency.

Tickets for the event are $100 each, and can be purchased online at www.fatherbillsplace.org, or by calling the agency's Development Office at 617-376-2255.

Popular Jazz Concert for All Ages

Krisanthi Pappas Band To Perform At Crane Libary Sunday

The Krisanthi Pappas Band will perform popular jazz and cabaret songs at a free concert for all ages on Sunday, July 16 at 3 p.m. on the Thomas Crane Public Library lawn, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Jazz, cabaret and pop vocalist Krisanthi Pappas, dubbed the "golden voice" by her jazz colleagues, has performed throughout the U.S. and Caribbean at jazz concert series, festivals, resorts, clubs and private events. She has opened for or shared the stage with such jazz greats as Branford Marsalis, Chuck Mangione, and Gary Burton as well as pop sensations The B-52s.

Krisanthi also plays piano and drums on some of her songs as well as writing her four-piece band's musical arrangements.

In February 2006, Krisanthi's hit song "One Slow Dance a Day" – as heard on ABC's One Life to Live and NBC's Passions – won third place in the jazz category of the prestigious Billboard World Song Contest.

She has continued to receive songwriting awards from the ASCAP Popular Music Awards Panel every year since 1999 for her original music and lyrics in jazz, cabaret and pop.

Several CDs feature Krisanthi's own jazzy arrangements of classic songs as well as her heartfelt original songs and have been purchased by fans around the world.

Music lovers of all ages will enjoy the Krisanthi Pappas Band. The concert will last one hour and will be held in the library's atrium if the weather is inclement.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

'SummerFest' Concert Series Underway

The "SummerFest" concert series is underway and will take place Wednesdays at 7 p.m. at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

Admission to all shows is free.

The series began last night (Wednesday) with New England Weather.

The remaining schedule:

July 19, Moby Dick & the Wailers: A performer from the original series, Quincy native John DeMasi leads his group back to the stage. Specializing in Dixie/Swing to Chicago Jazz, Moby Dick & the Wailers' features a medley of trombone, clarinet, tuba and bass, banjo and drums.

July 26, Riverside Theater Works: Riverside has been such a fixture in the musical life of Quincy over the past 10 or more years that it's proclaimed the official Musical Theatre Group of the city. Join this troupe of talented young folks as they sing and dance their way through the Great American Songbook.

Aug. 2, The Continentals: The Continentals are a 17-piece Big Band in the style of The Duke of Ellington, Count Basie and Glen Miller Orchestras.

Aug. 9, Denis O'Gorman: Denis and his authentically Irish band were one of the big hits of SummerFest last year. From his slow Irish ballads to rollicking traditional sing-a-longs, his performance is always a magical experience.

For more information, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

Chef to Grill Fresh Veggies At Farmers' Market Friday

Shoppers who venture into Quincy Farmers' Market in the Hancock parking lot Friday, July 14, will be treated to farm-fresh produce, prepared and grilled by Charles de Varennes, chef-owner of the Heritage Cafe.

Quincy native deVarennes opened the Heritage Cafe at 1429 Hancock St. in March 2006 and has developed a menu of southern-style barbecue ribs, pulled pork, breakfast sandwiches and desserts.

"We are fortunate here in Quincy to experience variety of fine dining from every corner of the world," said Mayor William Phelan, who is scheduled to make an appearance at the market cookin.

Also in attendance will be Erin Confer, chef-owner of Eatin' Healthy, and Dr. Wayne Westcott of the South Shore YMCA. Quincy farmers will answer questions on their production and anticipated season's bounty.

Free Summer Concert July 24 At Shea Park

The 12th Anniversary, a free summer concert, will be held Monday, July 24, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Shea Park, Copeland and West Streets, West Quincy.

The evening of free entertainment is sponsored by the Granite Workers Memorial Park Committee and Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis. Rain date is Tuesday, July 25.

The concert will feature The EMANONS led by Dave Burbank. Concert-goers are urged to bring blankets and law chairs.

'Saturday Night Fever' At Mound St. Beach

Beach chairs and blankets will be the order of the day Thursday, July 20, at 7 p.m. when the John Travolta film "Saturday Night Fever" is shown under the stars at Mound Street Beach.

The presentation is sponsored by Mayor William Phelan and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, Leo Kelly, chairman.

There will be refreshments for sale and a bingo game and prizes.

Mound Street Beach is in Quincy Point with adequate parking and close to an MBTA bus route.

A Special Van For Eddie From Friends

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A wheelchair-accessible van was recently donated to Eddie Saliba 14, of Braintree, who suffers from Muscular Dystrophy.

The gift was made possible through the donations of many people, and the collective fund-raising efforts of many, especially Rev. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church, and Executive Director John Yazwinski, of Father Bill's Place, Eddie's late great-uncle, Rev. Deacon Joseph Stanley, who passed away in April, and Dan Quirk, owner of Quirk Chevrolet.

The van, with all of the equipment, cost $50,000. Father Bill's place, named for Rev. McCarthy, raised $45,000, but Dan Quirk paid for $9,000 of the total, allowing Father Bill's to redistribute the remaining $4,000 towards other charity work.

Eleven donors contributed to paying for the van, and it took approximately two weeks to raise the money, McCarthy said. A donor who wished not to be named gave $25,000. He is a former owner of Sylvania Electric.

"It's very heartwarming and overwhelming that people we don't know, but know of us, would be so gracious as to donate the money for the van," said Margie Saliba, Eddie's mother. "Thank you doesn't seem quite adequate enough."

It took about eight or nine weeks to install equipment in the van because the parts had to be specially ordered. By pushing buttons, Eddie may open the back door, and lower a ramp. The van is also equipped with a television for rear passengers.

"The dying wish of (Stanley) was that (Eddie) get a van," said McCarthy, "so I went to Quirk's, and ordered a van. I didn't have a dime to pay for it, so I went out and begged various people, and finally came up with the $45,000. Most of the people I got to participate in donating for the van were from the Cape. Before his uncle died, he knew that I ordered the van, so he could rest in peace."

Stanley "was very well-liked, and he was always going about helping out people," said McCarthy. "He was involved in the prison ministry, and he was involved in a house that they call Saint Claires, which is a house for women to become rehabilitated after they come out of prison. He visited funeral homes for wakes, and did prayers for anyone buried at various cemeteries. I had no trouble raising the money because everyone that knew him was more happy to give."

This is the 4th van that Father Bill's Place has arranged for a person with muscular dystrophy.

"It's the mission of Father Bill's place to try to help out not only the helpless, but those who are in dire need, or disabled," said McCarthy.

Braintree High School also arranged to make their facilities handicap-accessible, including ramps built by South Shore building trade companies, said Rev. McCarthy.

Monti Granite Donates Quincy Granite Pillars To USS Salem

Linda Monti, owner of Monti Granite, a longtime Quincy granite firm, has donated two pillars of real Quincy granite to the USS Salem for use in their historic mini golf course.

Kilroy's Mini-Golf at the USS Salem opened recently next to the Quincy landmark with the goal of creating replicas of Quincy's many historic sites.

"When I spoke with Linda Monti and she told me she would donate real Quincy granite columns for our Granite Rail reproduction I was ecstatic," said Michael Condon, executive director of the US Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

"The last time they quarried Quincy granite was almost half a century ago, just about the same time the Salem was finishing its service," said Condon. "Quincy is famous for many things," added Condon, "and its exciting to link our granite and shipbuilding heritage. Linda is a wonderful person, her business is an example of a generations old Quincy business tied to our history."

The USS Salem and Kilroy's Mini-Golf are open daily throughout the summer. They are located at 739 Washington St. next to Harbor Express.

'Arts In The Parks' Concert Season Opens

Quincy's "Arts In The Parks" concert series will begin its 10th season tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at LaBrecque Playground in Houghs Neck.

Mayor William Phelan, in announcing the concert schedule, said:

The city is proud to provide first class events for the whole family to enjoy. The "Arts In The Parks" concert series offers a unique experience as residents can walk to their neighborhood park to enjoy the performance in the aesthetic setting of our park system.

The six concert series is sponsored by the Park and Recreation Departments and held in each of the city's sex wards. All shows are at 6:30 p.m.

The concerts will feature the popular Java Jive, known as the "Smallest Little Big Band," playing popular music of the past 60-70 years.

Admission is free and free ice cream and cold drinks will be provided.

The remaining schedule:

Tuesday, July 18, Avalon Beach, Quincy Point. Tuesday, July 25, Safford Park, Beale Street, Wollaston. Thursday, July 27, O'Rourke Field, west Quincy. Tuesday, Aug. 1, Beechwood Knoll, Wollaston. Thursday, Aug. 3, Wendall Moses, Squantum.

For more information, call the Park Department at 617-376-1251.

Historical Society Maine Clambake Trip July 26

Quincy Historical Society is offering a trip to historic York, Maine, and a traditional New England clambake at famed Foster's Clambake Pavilion, Wednesday, July 26.

The trip, in a Brush Hill bus, will leave the Adams Academy in Quincy Center at 8 a.m. and arrive in York around 10 a.m. The first stop is at Stonewall Kitchen, an award-winning emporium of New England specialty foods, ranging from "chocolatest" gift baskets, to homemade jellies and jams.

The bus will arrive at Foster's Clambake Pavilion at 11:30, and the clambake will begin at noon. The menu consists of clam chowder, fresh-dug steamed clams, steamed cultivated mussels, a Maine lobster, drawn butter, fresh corn-on-the-cob, roasted red-bliss potatoes, roasted onions, rolls and butter. Those who do not want lobster may substitute a barbecued half chicken with sweet and sour hickory sauce. Dessert is Maine blueberry crumb cake, and there's a choice of coffee or tea. The clambake is accompanied by live entertainment.

After the clambake, the trip will continue to Cape Neddick for a look at the Nubble Lighthouse, listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The trip will leave York around 3:30 p.m., and be back at the Adams Academy at approximately 5:30 p.m.

The price of the trip is $60 for Quincy Historic Society members, and $70 for non-members. Advance registration is required. For more information, call Quincy Historical Society at 617-773-1144.

360,000 Clam Seedlings Set To Revive Industry

(Cont'd From Page 1)

"Quincy permits were only $5," he said. "They're up to $100 now."

McCauley, retired from public life with time on his hands for the first time in more than 70 years, called this week's seedings in Quincy shores "a great idea."

"It should be a shot in the arm for Quincy clamming," he said. "Who knows, I might even go back to clamming myself."

The current crop of quarter inch seedlings were sown along the Moon Island Causeway on the Orchard Beach side at low tide, from 3:30-8 p.m. Monday, 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Then they were carefully covered with nets to protect them from hungry crabs and gulls until the tide came in when they could burrow themselves into the sand and mud.

And live on to help revive a once declining industry along Quincy's 27 miles of shoreline.

Quincy Police Due $$$ Settlement For Vests

Quincy police are in line to receive as much as $80,000 in cash or product, thanks to the class action court settlement of a law suit over a defective bulletproof vest.

Attorney General Thomas Reilly brought the suit against the vest maker, Second Chance Armor, Inc., and Toyboyo, the makers of Zylon, a synthetic material advertised as bullet-proof.

A $29 million settlement was reached in which 65 police departments in Massachusetts shared to the tune of $1 million.

Quincy police have yet to learn of their share in the settlement but they had 100 Zylon vests and the settlement called for them to receive $730 in cash or $803 in new vests for each old one.

The efficiency of the vests were called into question three years ago when a policemen in California was killed and an officer in Pennsylvania wounded when bullets penetrated their vests.

The U.S. Department of Justice, after a two-year study, concluded that Zylon was not really bullet-proof after all.

Three Graduate From Agriculture High School

Quincy graduates include: Stacey Baszkiewicz, Daniel Lombard and Donald Gardiner. Gardiner received a Proficiency Award in Diesel and Mechanical Technology, Small Engine Repair.

Two residents participated in the commencement on June 8. Greetings were extended by resident Stacey Marie Baszkiewicz, President of the Norfolk FFA chapter, and the Certificate of Graduation was given by resident Gail H. Murphy, Principal.

Line Dancing For Seniors

The Quincy Council on Aging will hold a line dancing class for seniors every Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

'Bookworm Bookmarks' Weekly Art-To-Go At Crane Library

The project of the week for the week of July 17 in the Art-to-go series at the Thomas Crane Public Library will be the creation of "bookworm bookmarks."

Art-to-go is a series of weekly art activities that travel throughout the city with a wide range of projects that are easy enough for preschooler yet free form enough for school aged kids.

The projects travel citywide so youngsters can drop in any time from 2 to 4 p.m. to create a project.

Supplies for the weekly project at available at the children's room of the main library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays.

The annual Summer Storytellers Series continues Tuesday, July 18, at 7 p.m. with storyteller Tony Toledo narrating "Witch Stories Halloween in July," a collection of scary tales.

This program is for families with children ages 5 and older and will be held in the large meeting room at the main library. It is sponsored by the Quincy Arts Lottery.

Younger children, ages 2 to 5, with an adult, are invited to join storyteller Joan Goodman for a pajama storytime designed especially for them. including dancing as well as stories.

It is sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Easy Peanut Butter Cookies

If you're a peanut butter lover, here is the easiest recipe that I have found for a great peanut butter cookie. Imagine a recipe without flour.

Today's recipe can be used with either Splenda or sugar equally as tasty especially for those on a sugar free diet.

Easy Peanut Butter Cookie

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees.

1 cup of either creamy or crunchy peanut butter

1 cup sugar (or splenda)

1 egg (slightly beaten)

1 teaspoons vanilla

Mix all of the ingredients together. Roll in walnut sized balls and place on a slightly greased cookie sheet If it is too moist, you can dip them lightly in flour or some more sugar. Then flatten them a bit and top with a fork making lines on each.

Bake for about 12 minutes. Wasn't that easy?

Three Quincy Sisters Graduate

Three resident sisters have recently graduated from their respective schools.

Jennifer Cleary earned a master's degree in law at the University of Virginia. She will begin her career at Bringham McCutchen Law Firm in Boston.

Christina Cleary earned a bachelor of science in business administration from Villanova University in Pennsylvania. She graduated Magna Cum Laude majoring in marketing.

The three are the daughters of Brendan and Rose Cleary of Quincy.

Rhuda was recognized by the South Shore Economic Development Corporation (SSEDC), a subsidiary of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. He was presented with the award during a reception held at The Neighborhood Club in Quincy.

"SSEDC is a certified development company that offers the lowest fees in the Commonwealth," said Michael Duff, SSEDC executive director. "Tim submitted the most referrals for SBA 504 Loans (commercial real estate loans for growing businesses) in 2005 and received this award as recognition of his commitment to working with the SSEDC."

"Bank of Canton has a wonderful, long-standing relationship with the SSEDC," Rhuda said. "This award recognizes our dedicated support for the growth of business in Massachusetts and the impeccable service, rates and financial assistance that Bank of Canton provides the business community."

Bank of Canton has offices in Canton, Quincy, Randolph, Brookline and Hyannis and lends throughout the state. Established in 1835, Bank of Canton is a Massachusetts-chartered mutual savings bank that offers its consumer, business and commercial customers access to a full array of deposit, loan, investment and convenience service options.

Council On Aging Health Screenings Aug. 8

The Council on Aging and Life Line Screening will hold health screenings Tuesday, Aug. 8, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Koch Park and Recreation Complex, 1 Merrymount Parkway.

Stroke and carotid artery screening, abdominal aortic aneurysm screening, or peripheral arterial disease screenings are $45 each. Osteoporosis screening is $35. Signing up for all four tests is $129. Pre-registration is required.

Through preventative screenings, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced. Screenings are fast and painless. Screenings use ultrasound technology to scan for health problems such as blocked arteries, aortic aneurysms, and hardness of arteries in the legs. Participants may also be tested for bone density screening to assess risk of osteoporosis.

For more information or to schedule and appointment, call 800-324-1851, or call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

Three Residents Achieve Eagle Scout Rank

Three residents, Jeffrey Belovarac, Sean Farrell, and Derek Lee, recently achieved Eagle Scout status, the highest rank a Boy Scout can achieve.

They were recognized by the City Council at the last City Council meeting.

Only four percent of all scouts reach Eagle Scout status, said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who presented the citations.

All three scouts, who joined their troop seven years ago, have been named scout of the year. They are members of the Order of Arrow, have achieved First Class, and completed the Eagle Board of Review this past year.

While in his troop he earned 26 merit badges. He attended summer camp every year that he was in the scouting program, attended eagle weeks, and a junior leader training week.

His adventures include the Philmont trek in 2002, two canoe treks in Canada, and a White Mountain trek last summer. He has camped 161 nights in eight states, and Canada.

He has served as the Assistant Senior Patrol Leader in his troop, and was named scout of the year, twice.

Belovarac is currently captain of the North Quincy High School cross country team, and one of its top runners. After graduation, he plans to join the US Marines with an occupational specialty in public affairs, and plans to pursue college courses while serving.

Lee planned and managed renovations of the bakery in the USS Salem, for his eagle project. Although he had not participated in cub scouts, he earned 23 merit badges. He attended five summer camps including the Philmont trek and a canoe trek in Canada. He participated in eagle week, and junior leader training week. He has camped 103 nights in seven states, and Canada.

He has served as Patrol Leader for the Fox Patrol.

Lee is currently an undergraduate at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, majoring in civil engineering. He graduated with honors from Boston College High School last year, and was a member of the National Honor Society. This summer he will be tutoring in Quincy.

Farrell was a member of cub scouts Pack 21 where he earned the Arrow of Light, before becoming a scout.

For his eagle project, he managed the scraping and repainting of the fan tail elevator hatch on the USS Salem. He earned 33 merit badges, the most earned of any scout in the troop. He attended summer camp every year while in the scouts. He attended eagle weeks, and junior leader training week. His adventures include the Philmont trek in 2002, two canoe treks in Canada, and the White Mountain trek last summer. He has camped 168 nights in eight states, and Canada.

In the troop, he served as the Senior Patrol Leader for two years. He gave a speech about scouting at the Mayoris Fundraising Breakfast for Scouting on the USS Salem.

Farrell will be graduating this spring from Boston College High School with honors, and will attend the University of Massachusetts, Lowell in the fall, majoring in electrical engineering.

Pedestrian Safety Improvements In Norfolk Downs Area

City crews have repainted the crosswalks at Hancock Street and Glover Avenue, Hancock Street and Hayward Street, and Billings Road by the Vane Street parking lot entrance. Additional pedestrian safety signage will be added this week.

"This issue was raised at our neighborhood meeting and by Councilor (Brian) McNamee as a top priority," Mayor William Phelan said. "We will continue to implement the proposals of our Neighborhoods First! campaign and I appreciate the continued input of our citizens."

More than 100 people attended the Neighborhoods First! meeting held by Phelan last spring.

"Norfolk Downs is an important part of North Quincy and has a strong history as a vital party of the Atlantic and North Quincy neighborhoods," Phelan said. "We will do our part to make it an attractive location to shop, eat and do business."

A 39-foot van from the Dana Farber Cancer Institute's Blum Family Resource Center will be at Wollaston Beach to offer skin cancer education and free skin-screening this month.

The van will be at the beach across from the Clam Box for education Friday, July 21, and for free skin cancer screening by dermatologists from Brigham and Women's Hospital Friday, July 28.

Adults will have an opportunity on both dates to have their photos taken using an ultra violet camera to assess the damage already done to their skin.

There will also be sun safety educational materials for children, including sneaker rings that change color in the sun.

Screenings will be canceled if there is rain.

Norfolk County Report Shows

Second Quarter Real Estate Activity Down 19 Percent

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for April through June 2006, was $1.88 billion, down 19 percent from the comparable period last year, according to a report issued by Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell.

The report also shows a total of 4921 deeds were recorded during the second quarter, down 12 percent.

Average sales prices declined, but by a lesser percentage. The average price reported in deeds over $1000 (both residential and commercial properties), was $569,784, down 7% on a year-to- year comparison basis. The number of new mortgages declined year-to-year basis.

"The nominal total dollar volume of new mortgages increased substantially, to over $8.5 billion, but a large part of that dollar amount (3.6 billion) was involved in a single commercial transaction," O'Donnell said.

Excluding that transaction, the total number of mortgages (13,169) was down 14 percent on a year-to-year basis, and the total dollar volume decreased slightly (1 percent).

"It is important to note," O'Donnell said, " that mortgage filings do not necessarily represent an overall increase in indebtedness, since many mortgages are refinancings replacing existing debt, or secure equity credit lines that may not be drawn in their entirety.

"For similar reasons, mortgage activity is closely related to changes in interest rates," the register added.

The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County. The Registry is a basic resource for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call 781-461-6116 or visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Light A Home Without Lightening A Wallet

(NAPS) There's good news for homeowners concerned about rising energy costs. They can save hundreds of dollars in taxes, and even more in lower power bills, by taking steps to reduce the amount of energy they use at home.

The Energy Tax Incentives Act of 2005 provides federal income tax credits for installing equipment upgrades, including qualifying energy efficient exterior doors, windows and skylights. According to David Westbrook, a Charlotte, North Carolina, CPA and CFP (Certified Financial Planner), the regulations are quite specific but researching and purchasing qualifying products can be worth the effort for the tax breaks, not to mention ongoing energy bill savings.

"Residential tax credits, which are dollar-for-dollar reductions in federal income taxes, can be realized for heat pumps, central air conditioners, water heaters, furnaces or boilers and even insulation improvements such as sealing ducts," Westbrook said. "Exterior doors, windows and skylights also qualify."

He also advised homeowners to do their homework prior to making purchases or improvements to be sure that specific government guidelines are met and the expenditures qualify. "A good starting point is www.energy.gov/taxbreaks.htm."

Joe Patrick, senior product manager with VELUX America, agreed that qualifying energy-efficient skylights, either replacements or new installations, can help to reduce power bills by bringing more balanced natural light and ventilation into homes.

"And there is a model and price range for every home," Patrick said. "Available skylights include electric or manual venting; fixed with or without a ventilation flap; and fixed for replacing faded plastic bubble skylights with clear, energy-efficient glass. There are also models specially designed to meet code for use in hurricane-prone and other high-wind areas, as well as models with electrochromic glass that can be lightened or darkened by remote control and that don't restrict the view to the sky," he said.

In addition to skylights, roof windows are available for in-reach applications requiring egress, such as in finished attics, and VELUX Sun Tunnel skylights can be used when a view to the outside is not needed, as with closets, laundry rooms, pantries, hallways and second baths.

For information on skylight selection and the benefits of natural light, call 800-283-2831 or visit www.veluxusa.com. For government information on window and skylight energy efficiency, visit www.energystar.gov, and for independent agency information visit www.nfrc.org or efficientwindows.org.

Homebuyer Workshop Begins July 24

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Citizens Bank, will host a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop July 24 from 6 to 8 p.m. and July 29 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

They will be held at Citizens Bank, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend. Participants will have the opportunity to be pre-qualified by a lender at the workshop.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person. There will be refreshments and free gifts. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

America Hits The Showers

(NAPS) Imagine washing the day's worries away under a showerhead large enough to cover an entire body. Or consider the soothing sensation of massaging water jets set to the temperature and rhythm of choice. If these spaworthy indulgences sound appealing, more and more people are adding rainshowers to their home.

Within the past few years, bathrooms have rapidly evolved into a kind of oasis within the home, growing larger in both size and importance as people seek refuge from increasing stresses and strains. Kitchen and Bath Business magazine recently reported that consumers are so passionate about this most private space of the home that bathroom remodeling jobs have increased 29 percent since 2000 and high-end remodeling jobs are expected to increase another 17 percent in the next year.

"No longer are bathrooms purely functional spaces for cleaning and grooming," said Paul Flowers, vice president of design for Grohe, one of the largest faucet companies in the world. "Hip hotels and spas have opened our eyes to the pleasures of hydrotherapy and more people want to bring this luxurious experience into their own homes."

Nowhere is this trend more evident than in the variety of shower products flooding the marketplace. Among the most popular new offerings are "rain" products. As the name implies, these designs create the sensation of soaking in a refreshing, tropical rain shower. Rain-style showerheads are available in a multitude of sizes, but for what may be the ultimate rainshower experience there's a gigantic showerhead measuring 16 inches in diameter, the largest available on the market. This impressive product also features more than 250 water nozzles expertly arranged to provide full-body coverage with no "dry" zones.

"Showers are a time to block out the world around us and focus on cleansing our minds and souls-as well as our bodies," said Flowers. "With our 16-inch Rainshower, you really feel as if you're escaping into an intense cascade of water. It's simultaneously soothing and reinvigorating."

Hand showers, already hugely popular in Europe, are becoming increasingly fashionable in the U.S. The best designs make reaching all parts of the body effortless through ergonomically shaped handles and multiple spray patterns that let people set the shower to their mood.

For added comfort and ease, look for those with a 360-degree swivel capacity that eliminates twisting and kinking of the hand shower hose, and a double-insulation design that protects from hot water temperatures.

Demand also is increasing for shower panels that allow users to customize their showers based on their individual preferences, be it a light sprinkle or a total downpour. Easy to install and available in sizes to suit any bathroom, these all-in-one designs combine traditional showerheads, hand showers and a variety of repositionaable body sprays to create an extreme shower experience by distributing water from two or more directions.

Whether it's a quick, energizing shower first thing in the morning or a long, relaxing water massage before bed, people may now get the pampering they deserve. With today's range of sumptuous bathroom products, people can have their own spa that's open 365 days a year.

Vinyl Siding Stain Stumps Dad

Q. I have a stain on my white vinyl siding. I've tried numerous cleaning chemicals to remove it, including bleach, without success. My daughter may have spilled some type of beverage from her window, but denies it. Do you have any cleaning tips? — Bryce B.

A. Give your daughter the benefit of the doubt: Vinyl siding is fairly resistant to liquids, so I don't know if a spilled beverage would have caused that stain. Then again, one can never underestimate the power of Kool-Aid.

This type of siding does crumble before acids, solvents and heat. Well, not really "crumble." It gets a bit melty in most cases, enough to let a solvent adhere permanently to its surface. Chemicals that can damage the siding's surface include nail polish, nail polish remover (darn it), certain glues, liquid grease remover, furniture polish, organic solvents, herbicides, fungicides and undiluted bleach.

However, some household cleaners can be used directly on vinyl siding without causing damage, including glass cleaner (ammonia-based), oil soap or all-purpose cleaner. These work well on crayon, marker, grass stains, oil or rust. Pencil or paint marks can be removed by polishing with a gentle abrasive cleaner like Soft Scrub. Test these items in small spots first to see if they have any effect.

Cleaning solutions recommended by the Vinyl Siding Institute (www.vinylsiding.org) for larger areas include a 30-70 mixture of vinegar and water, or a solution of 1/3 cup powdered laundry detergent, 2/3 cup powdered household cleaner, 1 quart of household bleach and 1 gallon of water. Use a soft cloth or a soft bristle brush to scrub the area.

The worst-case scenario is if none of these cleaning solutions work. Painting over the stain may not be possible. Some manufacturers will void the warranty if this is done, so check with them first.

The ultimate solution is to replace those stained or damaged vinyl siding panels. If you have spare panels stored in the house from the initial installation, great; otherwise, you'll need to consult the manufacturer. If you don't know who the manufacturer is, head to the nearest home-improvement store to find matching panels and detailed instructions on replacement.

Four Eighth Grade Students Receive Quincy Legion Awards

Four eighth grade graduates were recently presented certificates and medals by the Quincy American Legion in recognition of their courage, honor, leadership, patriotism, scholarship and service.

Vi Nguyen and Zachery Dwyer of Point Webster Middle School and Sarah Minton and Phuc Huynh of Central Middle School were chosen to receive the awards by Principals James McGuire and Jennifer Faye and faculties of each school.

Wendy Lee Eng, an Auxiliary member of the American Legion Post 95 and daughter of Robert Leo Eng, past State Commander and chairman of the Awards Committee for American Legion Post 95, addressed each ceremony on behalf of Post 95.

"The chosen students should be proud of their accomplishments," McCray said.

The award is the highest honor given to American youth by the American Legion. Students also received medals as a gift from McCray.

The rangers also provided the patients a guided tour of Fort Warren.

On the return to Hingham harbor, each patient received several gifts donated by Elks members before leaving the boat.

Anime Feature Film Screened At Library

The Japanese anime feature film, "Howl's Moving Castle," will be screened today (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The film is the story of Sophie, a 19-year-old girl who believes she is plain and has resigned herself to a drab life in her family's hat shop, until the Witch of the Waste transforms her into a 90-year-old woman.

The Myth of Flatter Abs

Q. My gym offers 15-minute abdominal classes, and I try to attend at least three of these a week. While I definitely feel my abs burning during class, I haven't seen much of a difference in flattening my abdominal area. Am I doing something wrong?

A. Abdominal classes have become very common in many fitness facilities. In a typical class, an instructor takes a group of participants through 15-20 minutes of varying abdominal exercises. Unfortunately, the popularity of these classes has many people crunching themselves into disappointment.

The purpose of abdominal classes should be to focus on increasing the stability and strength of the core muscles (abdominal, back, hips), not to develop a "six pack." The idea of crunching yourself into oblivion to flatten your stomach has attracted many people to abdominal classes; however, abdominal exercises alone will not slim your middle. Since we cannot actually "flatten" our abdominals, our goal is to lower our body-fat percentage, which will decrease the amount of fat covering our ab muscles.

Before attending your first abdominal class, I recommend understanding what to expect. Your goal should be to increase core strength and stability — not to be sore for the next two days. Avoid gauging how well the class was taught by how "hard" the exercises were or by how much of a burn you felt in your abdominal muscles. You should feel like you have more control, strength and stability within your back, abdominals and hips with each class completed. Focus on quality, not quantity, to determine the success of each class.

To get the best results from abdominal classes, be sure you know how to correctly perform each exercise. Many participants use the wrong techniques when completing abdominal exercises, and repeat these poor techniques repetition after repetition, class after class. Straining the muscles of your neck and arching your lower back while completing abdominal exercises is one example of what should be avoided, as it could cause not just discomfort, but injury if repeated.

Although group classes tend to encourage participants to keep up with their neighbors, go at your own pace. Use modifications of exercises that may be too advanced, and only progress to a more difficult exercise once you have mastered the basic exercise. At the beginning of class inform the instructor of any medical conditions that may need a safer version to be demonstrated, such as neck and back issues. The instructor should be able to accommodate your needs.

Remember to make your abdominal class part of a balanced workout routine that includes cardiovascular and strength training, partnered with healthy nutritional habits. Consistent exercise, proper nutrition and genetics will help you reach your goal of lowering your body fat around your abdomen, giving the appearance of "flatter abs."

Bone Up On Vitamin D

Currently, 10 million people suffer from osteoporosis in the United States and another 34 million are at risk of developing the disease. The surgeon General has named osteoporosis a national health threat and estimated that by 2020 one in two Americans over the age of 50 will be at risk for fractures from osteoporosis or low bone mass.

There are several risk factors associated with the development of osteoporosis, including inadequate levels of vitamin D, a nutrient essential to the body's absorption of calcium. Recent research has uncovered that over 70 percent of women over the age of 50 have low levels of vitamin D, and even women being treated for osteoporosis have low levels of the important vitamin.

To address the need for greater awareness about low levels of vitamin D, Spirit of Women Hospital Network has teamed up with Dr. Marie Savard, an internationally recognized women's health expert, to launch a new vitamin D risk assessment.

"Patients are frequently unaware of the importance of vitamin D in bone health and may not know they have low levels of vitamin D. Given its effect on calcium absorption, vitamin D inadequacy is an important medical concern for women, especially those over 50 or those who have been diagnosed with osteoporosis," said Savard.

In 2005, The American Medical Women's Association issued recommendations that called for an increase in vitamin D to 800-1,000 IU daily. The risk assessment will enable women to actively address the adequacy of their vitamin D intake and will direct them toward a possible treatment option for osteoporosis to discuss with their doctors.

"Women today want to be on top of their health to ensure their mobility and independence for a lifetime. The vitamin D risk assessment will help women recognize risk factors for osteoporosis and empower them to make important decisions about their bone health," said Tanya Abreu, national director of Spirit of Women Hospital Network.

Bug Bites

School's out, and chances are your children will spend much of their summer break outdoors. And they'll probably encounter some pesky insects along the way. So, before sending your kids out to play, learn how to prevent and treat insect bites.

Insect repellants with DEET can be purchased over the counter and are safe to use on children as young as 2 months old, according to Dr. Margie Andreae, associate professor at the University of Michigan Medical School. However, make sure any insect repellant used on children contains only 10 percent DEET. These repellants can provide protection for about two or three hours.

Also, avoid areas bordered by standing water, which can be a breeding ground for mosquitoes. Likewise, stay away from open beverages that contain sweetener, such as sodas or juices. The sugar in these products can attract bugs and put you at risk for an insect bite.

While these tips will reduce the risk of insect bites, avoiding insects altogether is virtually impossible. So, be prepared to treat your kids if they come inside with a painful sting or itchy bite.

If a bee or wasp is the culprit, check the bite for the stinger. If the stinger remains under the skin, use a firm object like a credit card to swipe across the bite and remove it. Once removed, clean the area with soap and water.

Apply ice or hydrocortisone cream to the bite to soothe the pain. An antihistamine or pain reliever can help control swelling or irritation.

Although serious reactions to bug bites occur for only 3 percent of the population, some children may have allergies to certain insects. If your child has difficulty breathing or swallowing after a bug bite, call 911 immediately.

Write to Tamara Jones in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send an e-mail to letters.kfws@hearstsc.com.

Better Bone Health

By DR. JAY PROVENZANO

All people experience a gradual loss of calcium and other minerals from their bones as they get older. This process normally begins when we are in our 30's and continues into old age, though in some people it starts much earlier.

If the bone does not grow strong enough when we are young (having adequate amount of calcium and other minerals) or if the bone loss starts too early or proceeds too fast, it can lead to osteoporosis.

Osteoporosis is an extremely common condition in our society, affecting both men and women (literally millions of people in the United States), with postmenopausal women being the most commonly affected groups.

There are a number of things that increase the risk of osteoporosis such as diet high in phosphorus or low in calcium. Meat, poultry, fish and soft drinks are all very high in phosphorus and low in calcium. Regular coffee consumption can contribute to the problem since it increases the body's mineral losses. Most processed foods have a similar demineralizing effect.

Other risk factors are lack of exercise (exercise increases the strength of bones) and cigarette smoking. White and Asian women have even more reason to pay attention to this issue since these groups have a genetic predisposition to having thin bones and bone loss.

Those who are very thin are also at an increased risk to bone loss, as does hysterectomy, missed or irregular menstrual periods and, of course, menopause. To reduce risk of osteoporosis, it is important to change as many of these risk factors. This translates to taking the following steps:

- Regular, moderate, weight-bearing exercise. Note that heavy exercise, such as body building or marathon training, can actually increase bone loss.
- Increase mineral-rich foods, particularly calcium and magnesium such as green leafy vegetables, seeds and whole grains. Dairy products can be pro-inflammatory and are not recommended.
- Limit red meat consumption.
- Reduce consumption of antacids (these can actually interfere with calcium absorption).
- Aspirin and other pain killers may increase calcium loss. Unless specifically recommended by a doctor, they should be reduced or eliminated.
- Reduce or eliminate alcohol, coffee, black tea and carbonated soft drink consumption.

In addition, a proper nutrition program with specific whole food supplements (not synthetic) to support normal bone production and repair is recommended. Remember, it is never too late to start.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ERUPTING TEETH

Parents often play a waiting game when it comes to their baby's erupting teeth. There is hardly a precise timetable, with factors such as tooth location being part of the equation. In general, there is less variation in timing when the first teeth appear (less than six months for incisors and first molars), in comparison to the teeth that erupt later (1.5 years for cuspids, premolars, and second molars). When teeth appear late, it may be due to such obstructions as lack of space, cysts, other teeth appearing out of place, and extra (supernumerary) teeth. Genetics also plays a role. In families with histories of delayed eruption, however, extracting baby teeth does not hasten the eruption of permanent teeth.

Teeth should be cleaned as soon as they emerge. By starting early, your baby gets used to the daily routine. Preventive dentistry means a healthy smile for your child. Children with healthy mouths learn to speak more quickly and clearly. Our goal is to develop a strong partnership with every patient. When you understand the importance of dental health, we can help you and your children maintain a healthy mouth, as well as treat the causes and symptoms of any dental condition. We're currently accepting new patients and we welcome you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Call us today! We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If one parent has the trait of delayed tooth eruption, then half of his or her children will also have it.

Morrisette Earns Playoff Spot

By CHRIS POISSON

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team headed into Monday's game at Canton knowing it needed to win one of its final three games to secure a spot in the playoffs.

Morrisette (10-6) left no suspense to the playoff run, rallying from behind with three runs in the sixth inning en route to a 5-3 victory and a trip to the postseason after missing it by a point last year.

"I'm happy we're in," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "It's quite an accomplishment for these kids. They're a great bunch. They try hard, they come to play and they have fun. They're all from different schools but they get along so well. They made it one team."

Morrisette, which was scheduled to close out the regular season Tuesday at Hyde Park and Wednesday at home against Canton (5:45 p.m.), locked up the fourth seed in District 6 East.

The playoffs will be held Friday through Sunday with a best-of-three series against the No. 2 seed in District 6 West, most likely Dedham or possibly Walpole. Morrisette will be at home in the second game. Cattaneo said the pitching rotation will be Steve Sullivan, Matt Haskins and Brian Sullivan or Steve Connolly.

"If you get into the playoffs and play good ball, you can win some games," Cattaneo said. "The teams are going to get tougher. We're ready to go."

In the Canton game, Haskins out-dueled ace Greg Lyons, allowing two earned runs on seven hits (three of which were bunt singles) and striking out five.

Canton struck first with an unearned run in the second inning before Morrisette evened the score in the fourth on Ricky Salvucci's RBI single. But Canton responded with a pair of runs in the bottom half for a 3-1 advantage.

Brian Sullivan walked to begin the sixth-inning rally and Mike Burke reached on a fielder's choice and made it to second with an error on the play. Chris Boyd (3-for-4) followed with an RBI single. Salvucci walked and a passed ball advanced both runners into scoring position. Joe Lousararian plated them with a single to give his team a 4-3 lead.

Morrisette added an insurance run in the seventh. Brian Sullivan singled and Joe Garland pinch ran for him. After an out, Boyd singled to put runners on the corners and Salvucci (2-for-3) followed with a sacrifice fly to center to bring home Garland.

In previous action, Morrisette suffered a 6-0 loss to Milton Sunday. Morrisette managed only a pair of hits in six innings off ace pitcher Alex Hassan, a B.C. High graduate who will be attending Duke in the fall.

Salvucci singled and Ray Marchand doubled. Brian Sullivan pitched six innings, allowing two earned runs on seven hits and four walks. Garland gave up a run in the final inning.

Last Friday, Morrisette bested Weymouth, 5-1, as Steve Sullivan struck out 12 and yielded one run on three hits and six walks.

Morrisette jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the second inning. After Burke, Boyd and Haskins singled to load the bases, Salvucci brought a run home with a sacrifice fly and Lousararian followed with an RBI single.

Weymouth scored its run with two outs in the fourth inning before Morrisette pushed across three runs in the bottom half on Lousararian's RBI single and Brandon Ranalli's two-run single.

The day before, Morrisette fell to Braintree, 6-2. It scored its runs in the last inning with two outs when Salvucci singled home pinch-runner Joe Ferris and Burke.

Last Monday, Morrisette completed a season sweep of city rival Quincy with a 7-4 triumph.

The game was scoreless through two innings before Quincy scored an unearned run in the third. Jared Kenney singled, moved to second on Matt Jaehnig's sacrifice and scored when Drew Loud reached on an infield error.

Morrisette came right back with a four-run fourth. Brian Sullivan walked, Burke singled and Garland singled to load the bases, and Haskins lined a two-run single. After Connolly's sacrifice bunt and Lousararian's walk loaded the bases again, Ranalli followed with a sacrifice fly to score Garland and Boyd ripped an RBI single.

Quincy pulled to within 4-3 in the bottom half. Tom Conley, Mike Le Bel and Jay Lewis hit consecutive singles to score one run. Le Bel and Lewis attempted a double steal and Le Bel was safe at home on errant throw.

Morrisette pushed its lead to 6-3 in the fifth on Garland's RBI single and Haskins' RBI groundout and it added its final run in the sixth on Burke's RBI single.

Quincy closed out the scoring with an unearned run in the seventh on Tom Power's RBI single. Quincy did have the winning run at the plate before Haskins closed the game to notch a save.

Jonathan Pelletier picked up the win, allowing an earned run on six hits in four-plus innings. Salvucci gave up a run in 2 1/3 innings of relief. For Quincy, Kenney started on the mound and Le Bel pitched well in relief.

NUMBER ONE — The Quincy Youth Baseball 9-year-olds captured the recent Cal Ripken District 3 championship. 9-Year-Olds Cal Ripkin District Champs

SPORTS

The Quincy Youth Baseball 9-year-olds recently won the Cal Ripken District 3 championship with a 12-2 victory over Weymouth South at Quarry Hills.

Quincy went a perfect 4-0 in the tourney, outscoring its opponents by a combined score of 45-9.

Quincy received strong starting pitching from Greg Paulo and John Graselli while Dave Suslowicz and Tyler Beach provided solid relief work.

The mighty scoring attack was led by Aaron Clancy, who went 8-for-8 with five walks and a hit by pitch. Mike Coffey, Graselli, Mike Gendreau, Adam Cook and John Ross McEvilly all provided timely hitting.

Pat Trenholm, Pat Keohane and Nolan Flynn played excellent defense while Beach used his blazing speed to circle the bases each game.

Quincy will compete against seven other district champions in the Cal Ripken State Tournament in Dracut.

Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge July 30

The eighth annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge will be held Sunday, July 30, beginning at 10 a.m. at the southern end of Wollaston Beach.

Interested teams and individuals are encouraged to sign up now.

"With the state and city beach improvements well underway along Wollaston Beach, the demand for organized recreational events will only grow," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, co-organizer of the tournament.

"In the past, businesses, political candidates, city departments, civic groups and individuals have sponsored teams. This annual event has sustained interest and continues to grow. I encourage teams to sign up early while space is still available."

Karen Djerf, co-owner of Tony's Clam Shop and co-organizer of the tournament, said: "Now that the record rainfall is behind us, people will want to come back to the beach more than ever. We've been a proud sponsor of this event since the beginning and it generates a level of summertime excitement that cannot be matched."

Jim Rendle, athletic director and former North Quincy High School girls' volleyball coach, volunteers his time as the head official. There will be three nets with constant play in the double-elimination tournament. Local sponsors contribute to provide free volleyball challenge T-shirts to the first 100 players registered and prizes for the winners and runners-up.

Up to 16 co-ed adult teams can compete in the tourney. Teams must consist of three men and three women. One male and one female alternate on each team are permissible.

Registration costs $125 per team. Interested teams should sign up by calling Gutro at 617-376-1355, or by visiting Tony's Clam Shop or calling 617-773-5090.

Proceeds will go to the Wollaston Beach Clean-up Fund designed to promote educational and recreational events along Wollaston Beach as well as scholarships for high school volleyball players from Quincy public schools.

Gutro's team won the championship last year.

Recreation Department Adds Adult Kayaking

The Quincy Recreation Department's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Facility has added an adult kayaking program to enable Quincy residents to enjoy the rapidly growing popularity of the activity.

The program will begin immediately and the department, long known for its instructional program in rowing, sailing and canoeing, has added five kayaks to its fleet.

According to Recreation Director Barry Welch, the natural saltwater lagoon is an ideal location to learn the basic skills of kayaking in a safe yet scenic area of Merrymount Park. There are a number of small creeks that surround Pine Island and the large area that forms where Black's Creek meets the sea.

"I am pleased that Mayor (William) Phelan supports the request to add these boats to our program and that he recognizes the recreational value that this sport brings to a community with 27 miles of waterfront."

Welch also notes the department has a child's version of a kayak for use by the youth program. However, this will be the first time they have a full-sized kayak available for adult use.

The kayaks are available on a first-come, first-service basis after a period of instruction. There will be a time limit if participants are waiting. Cost of the program is $25 for the season.

Registration can be done at the William Ryan Boating and Sailing Facility, just below Pageant Field in Merrymount Park. Entrance is on the gravel road at the end of the paved parking area. Information and hours of the program can be obtained by calling 617-376-1397 or visiting the facility.

A FLOOD OF RECENT INTEREST

Hurricanes have wrought untold human and property damage in recent years. While we do not want, in any way, to overlook or minimize the suffering caused by these natural catastrophes, it is well within the scope of this column to warn of possible consequences in the realm of automobiles. The unfortunate fact of the matter is that there are some unscrupulous dealers who will try to pawn off a flood-damaged vehicle as an undamaged one. Flood damage can result in electronic and mechanical failure without any readily visible signs. With this in mind, buyers should be aware of the possibility of being shown misrepresented vehicles. Stick with a reputable dealer you know.

Always buy your automobiles from a trusted dealer. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we treat all our customers with respect, and would never act unscrupulous. However, you should remain on guard for people who would try to sell a damaged car as undamaged. For your automotive needs please come to 258 Quincy Ave., East Braintree, or call 781-843-1550. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: According to the National Automobile Dealers Association, in 2005, Hurricane Katrina may have resulted in as many as 400,000 damaged vehicles.

Golf Tournament Raises $35,000 For Cerebral Palsy

Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts recently hosted its seventh annual Golf Classic at the Pembroke Country Club with nearly 100 people taking part to raise more than $35,000.

Proceeds will enhance programming and vital resources that help thousands of individuals with developmental disabilities throughout the state.

"For the seventh year in a row, the community has come out to support our organization by taking part in the Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts Golf Classic," said Jim Hickey, chairman of Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts. "We would like to thank all of those who made this another successful year on the greens."

Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts exists to provide a continuum of community-based services that support the efforts of children and adults with developmental disabilities to live as independently as possible in the least restrictive environment.

The agency, through its programs and services, encourages the inclusion of people with developmental disabilities into the mainstream of society.

30 Local Youth Qualify For State Hershey Track, Field Final

Thirty youngsters earned an invitation to participate in the Hershey National Track and Field state championship in Bolton after winning the local meet sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department.

The state event at Nashoba Valley Regional School will determine who will be selected to attend the national championship, which will be held in August at Hershey Park, Pa.

For more than 25 years, the Hershey Chocolate Company has brought together boys and girls from all over North America for three days of sports and enjoyment.

"This grassroots program has no equal and the youth of Quincy have benefited greatly from this participation," Welch said. "We thank Hershey for their continued sponsorship."

Welch also thanked members of the recreation staff for assisting with the two meets and Geoff Hennessy of the Quincy Track Club who served as the meet director.

The city champions and their events that qualified them for the state meet are:

In Memory Of Patrick White

Jimmy Fund Baseball Tourney At Adams Field Aug. 4-6

The sixth annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament will be held Aug. 4-6 at Adams Field in honor of the late Patrick White.

White, who played many years in Quincy Youth Baseball and most recently in the Babe Ruth league, died last November after battling Rhabdomysarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, for more than six years.

On the evening of Aug. 4, there will be a special tribute to White that hopes to capture his spirit and courage. All are invited to attend the tournament and the special tribute.

Many of White's friends will be playing on the teams and many others will volunteer to run the tournament operations.

Sponsored by Quincy Youth Baseball/Babe Ruth Division and the City of Quincy, the tourney will feature teams of 14-year-old and 15-year-old players from Quincy and surrounding communities.

Those interested in volunteering can contact Jane Warwick, tournament co-director, at 617-822-8820 or Roseann Russell at 617-472-4811.

Those interested in making contributions to The Jimmy Fund can contact Bob Griffin, tournament co-director, at 617-472-4811, or mail a check payable to The Jimmy Fund/QYBL to Bob Griffin, 4 Avon Way, Quincy, MA 02169.

Funds raised will benefit the Pediatric Solid Tumor Program within Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care Services.

Wollaston I, II Split In Senior Babe Ruth Action

The Wollaston I and Wollaston II Senior Babe Ruth baseball teams played .500 ball last week.

Wollaston I (3-5) defeated Braintree II, 10-7, July 2 and dropped a 6-3 decision to South Boston last Saturday.

Joe Griffin led the offense against Braintree with four hits, three RBI and three runs. Steve Matos, Mike Crifo (two RBI) and Joe Cuervals each had two hits. Anthony Gilbody knocked in two runs. Mike McPherson pitched three shutout innings for the win.

Against South Boston, McPherson pitched five strong innings. Griffin, Cuervals and Matos scored. Phi Nguyen had an RBI.

Wollaston II (4-7) suffered a tough 7-6 loss against league leader Cedar Grove July 2. Edwin Nunez had three hits and an RBI. Nick Masone (three RBI), Matt Edgerly (RBI), Rob Mann and Dave Regan each had two hits. Mann tossed five strong innings.

Last Wednesday, Wollaston II blanked second-place Braintree, 2-0, behind pitcher Eric Moreschi, who allowed just one hit while punching out 11. Nunez (hit) and Edgerly (two hits) each plated Brendan Carnell (two hits). Regan and Steven McGarty also had hits.

The next evening Wollaston II edged Hingham/Hull, 5-4. Edgerly limited the opposition to three hits over five innings for the win. Regan notched the save. Carnell spearheaded the offense with two hits, two RBI and two runs. Regan assisted with two hits and two runs. Edgerly helped the cause with two RBI and Moreschi drove in a run.

Wollaston II fell to Hanover, 8-1, last Friday as Edgerly knocked in Rob DeAngelis for the lone run. DeAngelis, Mann and Edgerly had the only hits.

Last weekend, the South Shore League 16-year-old all-stars dropped two close games to all-star teams from the Old Colony and the Cape Cod Senior Babe Ruth Leagues.

Dave Griffin and Dan Munkley of Wollaston II and Bob Yovino and James Mullin of Wollaston I represented the South Shore League all-stars. Griffin and Munkley each had a hit. Munkley and Yovino played solid defense. Mullin drove in a run.

A Job Well Done

Often times, incidents of domestic violence are viewed as blatantly and physically harming another, but there are many cases where intimidation or psychological abuse are forms of abuse.

LT. DAN MINTON

On June 24, at approximately 3 p.m., Officer Harry Breen was dispatched to Dunkin' Donuts on Sea St. for a "Domestic Assault in progress." Upon arrival, he found a woman sitting in a car crying, with her five-year-old daughter sitting in front, and a male standing in the middle of the parking lot. When Officer Breen approached the male and asked what happened, he said that they had an argument.

Officer Breen then interviewed the female and learned that the couple were married by separated. She said that the argument stemmed from a disagreement over child support – that her husband believed that since she and his daughter were living in public housing, he should not have to make payments.

According to the victim, her husband stated that if she sought child support through the courts, he would kill her. She added that she received correspondence from the Department of Revenue that if she did not arrange child support, she would be in danger of losing her subsidized housing. She stated that this was the reason why he was so angry.

The victim recounted the incident, stating that she noticed him following her on Palmer Street and then onto Sea Street, where he motioned for her to pull over. She thought that by pulling into the drive-thru window of Dunkin' Donuts, she would not be followed. She said that he came to her and began yelling. She said that she told him she was going to call the police and then reached over to get her cell phone. The suspect reached in and grabbed her upper arm and then pushed her down against the middle seat divider to take the cell phone away.

Officer Breen checked on the well being of the child, who did not have any physical pain, but did confirm that his father was very angry and grabbed her mother's arms to get the cell phone. Based on the above information, Officer Breen arrested the suspect, a 42-year-old Braintree resident on charges of "Domestic Assault and Battery," "Threats to Kill," and two counts of "Intimidation of a Witness." Officer Breen filed a report to DSS (Department of Social Services) and assisted the victim in seeking a restraining order.

Nice work!

On June 24, at approximately 3 p.m., Officers John Leuchte and Harry Breen were dispatched to Stop & Shop on Southern Artery for a "Violation of a Restraining Order." While enroute, the officers learned from dispatch that a 19-year-old male had just been served with a restraining order and that he was making telephone calls to the victim, his mother, from outside the store.

Officer Leuchte had just served the suspect with the restraining order 10 minutes earlier.

The officers approached the suspect and asked him if he called his mother and he responded that he called twice to ask why she got a restraining order. The suspect, who appeared distraught, said that he lost his whole life today. Since one of the conditions of the restraining order was not to contact the victim, the suspect was placed under arrest.

The victim confirmed that she received two phone calls.

Nice work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You dislike waiting for promises to be fulfilled and for commitments to be kept, but resist your headstrong tendency to push things along. Your patience will be rewarded.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect continuing opposition to your plans from die-hard detractors. However, your determination to see things through will carry the day. A Pisces has romantic ideas.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be too close to a troublesome workplace situation to deal with it successfully. Step away in order to get a better perspective. A solution soon becomes obvious.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might suspect that someone you trust has misled you on an important matter, but a more balanced view of things reveals a misunderstanding to be the culprit.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's animal magnetism has rarely been stronger. You can either just bask in all that admiration or use it to your advantage, especially in the workplace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone who previously balked at cooperating with you on a project suddenly has a change of heart. Accept both help and advice with grace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some hazy issues still need to be cleared up before you can move on with your new plans. A friend from the past reaches out to re-establish old ties.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Continued positive fall-out follows that risky workplace decision you made some time ago. Your payoff will soon prove to be more substantial than you expected.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A personal relationship continues to be affected by a recent unexpected turn of events. Things need to work themselves out without finger-pointing.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a wonderful week for all you capricious Goats to kick up your heels with friends or family members in some well-earned fun and frivolity.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Caution is advised before making a financial commitment to someone you don't really know. There are better ways to build friendships than with risky fiscal dealings.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Travel plans continue to be favored. A change of scenery brings new opportunities, both personally and professionally. Be open to the possibilities.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a strong sense of loyalty that shows itself best in your relationships with family and friends.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Dreams never hurt anybody if he keeps working right behind the dream to make as much of it come real as he can." – F.W. Woolworth

How can you make your dreams come true? First, get rid of all your little ideas. Make your dreams and ideas big enough so that they become exciting. Make them large enough that they can draw real power out of you, really capture the whole of your motivated activity. Second, check your dreams first to be sure that they serve not only your interests, but those of your fellow man. Third, go forward with faith and belief and enthusiasm . . .

Think big, pray big, believe big, act big – and your big dreams can come true. . .

It has been said that it is difficult to say what is impossible, for the dream of yesterday is the hope of today and the reality of tomorrow. . .

MICHELLE HIGGINS

Higgins, who was previously assistant vice president/branch manager for Bank of Canton's Quincy branch, is now based in the company's Canton office, located at 557 Washington St., where she is instrumental in benefit administration, employee relations and employee development.

"I am excited about the challenges of my new position," Higgins said. "Being branch manager required me to be detail-oriented and excel in customer service, two skills that I believe will benefit me in my new position. I enjoy working with many people and appreciate being an essential part of a growing company."

Higgins is a banking industry veteran with more than 20 years of industry experience working on the South Shore. She joined Bank of Canton more than nine years ago as assistant vice president/branch manager for Quincy. She was also previously employed in branch management, human resources and training in positions held at Bank of Braintree, The Cooperative Bank in Quincy and Quincy Cooperative Bank.

"Michelle has been a great asset to this company since joining us nearly a decade ago," Egan said. "Her experience in streamlining operations and dedication to our team make her the perfect choice for this position. Our employees will benefit from her competence and expertise."

Higgins received her B.S. in psychology and business management from Stonehill College in Easton. She is a South Area Council Member of the American Red Cross and is affiliated with various banking, human resources and Chamber of Commerce organizations.

Bank of Canton, with offices in Canton, Quincy, Randolph, Brookline and Hyannis, lends throughout the state. Established in 1835, Bank of Canton is a Massachusetts-chartered mutual savings bank that offers its consumer, business and commercial customers access to a full array of deposit, loan, investment and convenience service options.

Swetha will be entering the first grade this fall.

Her winning entry was for reading See Pip Point by David Milgrim.

"Read to Ride has definitely increased the amount of time Swetha spends reading," her mother, Uma Janakiraman said. "She now excels at reading Ready-to-Read Level 2 books, and is already moving on to books that include Level 3 vocabulary."

Read to Ride offers children, ages 6-15, the chance to win a bike and helmet (retail value up to $275) for every book they complete during the program.

For more information abou the program, call 617-471-1900 or log onto www.dependablecleaners.com.

SWAP Earns Tax Abatements For Seniors

LEGAL NOTICE

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 06C0071GC1

To Judith Beck-Rochelle of 32 Sumac Road, Quincy, MA 02171 and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Terry V. Johnson of 40112 State 92, Bagley, MN 56621 in the County, representing that he holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County Norfolk and briefly described as follows: a certain parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated on Sunrise Rd., Squantum, Norfolk County, MASS. being shown as Lot 5 on a plan entitled "Richard Park, Squantum, Quincy, Mass., Owned by Hilda Carlson," dated April. 1913, duly recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, Plan Book 67, Plan No. 3229; being bounded and described, according to said plan, as follows:

NORTHERLY BY Sunrise Rd., Fifty-five (55) feet;

EASTERLY BY Lot 6, Ninety (90) feet;

SOUTHERLY BY land of Timothy F. Callahan, Fifty-five (55) feet; and WESTERLY BY Lot 4, Ninety (90) feet.

Containing 4,950 square feet of land, according to said plan setting forth that he desires that – all – of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $395,000.00 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the 2nd day of August 2006, the return day of this citation.

Witness, DAVID H. KOPELMAN, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this 16th day of June 2006.

to waste. I would like to see the people of Marina Bay and Quincy have some input into the use and maintenance of the property."

Wollaston Beach has a $6 million capital improvement project underway. Wollaston Beach is the last DCR beach to benefit from the original "Back to the Beaches" capital improvement p.an.

"Despite the capital improvements, I have little faith that the state will maintain the new beach," Phelan said. "I was naive to believe that the new DCR would do a better job than the MDC did. It's time to discuss a funding earmark so that Quincy can maintain the state properties in our city in accordance with the rest of our beautiful city. Enough is enough."

The text of Phelan's letter to Commissioner Burrington:

"On behalf of the residents of one of the largest communities in the Commonwealth, I write to express my utter disappointment with the maintenance performance of the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR). I have included some pictures along Furnace Brook Parkway that are inexcusable.

"The DCR has not once, not once, sent a maintenance crew to Furnace Brook Parkway to maintain your property. This is a main thoroughfare in Quincy and its condition is disgusting.

"The condition of Wollaston Beach is again regrettable. Even during construction, basic maintenance is needed but not being performed. I have little faith that the renovated beach will be maintained based on the past performance of the controlling agency.

"Squantum Point Park is a waste of one of the most valuable pieces of real estate in Quincy. Little is done to improve or promote the park and the multi-million dollar pier sits idle with the exception of a few knowledgeable fishermen.

"For years, the former Metropolitan District Commission neglected to pay any attention to Quincy relative to other MDC communities. My hope of an improved situation under the DCR has proven to be naive.

"Three years ago, I petitioned the then-MDC to allow Quincy to maintain all State-owned property in Quincy in return for a reasonable allocation of funds. I will resurrect this effort in the hope of maintaining the highly-visible and important properties owned but not properly maintained by the State. The citizens of Quincy are not being treated fairly and I will not sit idly by as yet another administration neglects our great city.

"I request a meeting with you to discuss my concerns and my proposal to assume control of the DCR properties in Quincy.

"I look forward to your response."

Health Dept. Issues Tips On Coping

Heat Related Ailments Rise With Temperatures

By TOM HENSHAW

The heat wave that sent temperatures soaring into the 90s earlier this week also sent a larger than usual nuber of Quincy residents to the hospital with heat-related ailments.

"We have seen an increase in patients seeking care for heat-related concerns, including dehydration and respiratory ailments," said Dr. Robert Dart, the chief of emergency medicine at Quincy Medical Center.

"It is important for people of all ages and activity levels to stay well hydrated when temperatures are high and watch for signs of heat stroke."

If you were expecting relief over the weekend, you may be disappointed.

The Weather Bureau in Boston has predicted temperatures in the 80s for the rest of the week and the weekend with occasional showers Friday and early next week.

Demands Cooperation From Menino

McNamee Pursues Info On Pre-Release Center

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee is still pursuing reports that the city of Boston is planning to locate a pre-release center on Long Island in Boston Harbor, accessible by land only through Quincy.

McNamee's latest move is a letter to Boston Mayor Thomas Menino asking, among other things, for copies of all records of meetings and votes taken on the subject under the state's public records law.

"So there is no misunderstanding," added McNamee, "if you continue to ignore my requests for information, I will request the assistance of the district attorney."

Long Island is a part of Boston but connected to the Squantum section of Quincy and the mainland by a causeway to Moon Island and thence to Long Island by bridge.

McNamee made his original contact with Menino on June 12, citing as his source an anonymous Boston city employee who has access to such information.

He noted that any facility Boston places on Long Island, including the present homeless shelter, firing range and bomb disposal unit, has to be supplied over Quincy roads, mostly in his Ward 6.

"If there are to be any further institutional uses of Long Island, the city of Quincy and its citizens should be notified and be given an opportunity to comment on the proposed use," he said.

Specifically McNamee requested:

• All minutes, attendance records and votes taken at Mayor Menino's meetings regarding the past or future location of a pre-release center on Long Island.

• All minutes, attendance records and votes taken at Mayor Menino's meetings regarding the past or future location of a transitional program providing inmate 're-integration' on Long Island.

• All requests for proposals (RFPs) for construction.

City Pilot Program

Sidewalk Cafes Coming In August

The city will launch a pilot sidewalk cafe program in August and September.

The program will allow cafes and restaurants to provide outdoor seating where space and neighborhood concerns permit.

"We are excited to roll out this program in an effort to help our local businesses," Mayor William Phelan said. "We want Quincy to be an attractive place not only to visit, but also to do business. I believe that this new option will help allow residents to enjoy a sandwich or cup of coffee and enjoy the nice seasonal weather. Any place you see outdoor dining is usually a bustling, vibrant spot. That's what we want here."

Businesses would need approval from the police chief, building inspector and License Board before a sidewalk cafe license is granted. They must also comply with ADA standards relative to the provision of sidewalk accessibility and provide all necessary insurance.

"We are sensitive to the impacts and I am sure that the License Board will balance the positive with any impacts on the surroundings that this pilot program might have," Phelan said.

Similar programs in Boston and Cambridge have been highly successful, he noted.

Businesses looking to receive an application to extend their premises are asked to contact the License Board at 617-376-1134.

"This is merely a small step in our effort to make Quincy Center and all our business districts attractive places to visit and do business," Phelan said. "We are committed to fostering a strong business climate and enjoying all the ancillary benefits that come to our residents."

3-Year-Old In Fall From Window In ICU

Gitakrsna Gannavarapu was in critical condition.

Police said he apparently fell through a loose screen or an open window in a hallway outside his family's apartment where they had lived for less than a year after moving from India.

Phelan Pulls Back On State Land Takeover

Mayor William Phelan has decided to give the state one more chance to maintain properly state-owned land along Wollaston Beach, Furnace Brook Parkway and Squantum Point Park.

Phelan sent a letter last week to Commissioner Stephen Burrington of the state Department of Conservation and Recreation (CDR) asking for a meeting to discuss the city taking it over.

Instead, the Mayor got a personal phone call from Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey proposing a visit to the sites in question to check on the maintenance personally.

"She was taking it seriously," Phelan told his weekly news conference on Quincy Access Television.. "The lieutenant governor deserves a chance. Let's see how they do.

"If it falls into disrepair again we can send another letter."

Phelan said he felt that his proposal for the city to take over maintenance of the former MDC parklands in Quincy was necessary at the time

"The MDC (now the CDR) was looking for ways to make government more efficient," he said. "It could be more cost effective for the city to d the maintenance."

Phelan was particularly piqued by the condition of Squantum Point Park, which he called "a waste of one of the most valuable pieces of real estate in Quincy."

"The weeds along Furnace Brooke Parkway are six feet tall," he told Burrington, and conditions at Wollaston Beach are "regrettable."

"State-owned properties in Boston, Hull and Revere are well-maintained and we continue to get the short end of the stick," he said.

COUNCILLOR LEO KELLY and John Chenette, who served as chairman of the fundraiser, and oversaw volunteers, take a moment to enjoy the a float at Houghs Neck that was repaired, and is now available for public use.

Public Float Repaired, Now Open At Houghs Neck

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A float that needed repair at Houghs Neck is now available for public use, through volunteerism by Houghs Neck and Quincy Housing Authority YouthBuild Program.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly participated and served as the intermediate, joining the participating groups.

The 25 foot by 40 foot float, which was in need of replanking and redecking, has been available for public use for two weeks, he said. The float is docked at the end of the public landing in Houghs Neck, next to the Maritime Center.

The float may be used recreationally by swimmers, and as a public landing.

The project was funded by a fundraising by Maritime Center of Houghs Neck, and appropriations from the city, through the efforts of Kelly and Mayor William Phelan.

Among the participants were:

Patrick Kalinowski, John Payton, YouthBuild training coordinator Tom Shruhan, Harry Olson, David Fitzgerald and John Chenette, who served as chairman of the fundraiser, and oversaw volunteers, and Frank Whitty, Housing Authority modernization director and director for the YouthBuild Program, which provides training for future union carpenters.

"They did a terrific job," said Kelly. " Any carpenter or deck-layer would be proud of the work of the Youthbuild volunteers."

A Cookout to thank the volunteers is planned.

• All 2005 and 2006 interagency payments and/or credits from departments of government in Massachusetts for rent of facilities on Long Island.

McNamee said he is making the inquiries "in my capacity as Quincy's Ward 6 City Councillor representing the neighborhoods that are most directly effected by Boston's programs on Long Island.

"Because Long Island cannot be accessed without driving through Quincy, our main thoroughfares, public transportation hubs, and businesses play host daily to the elements (Menino) wants to keep out of sight in Boston."

"Why is it OK to make Boston nice for the tourists by exporting your problems to Long Island at the expense of our public safety?"

'Good Neighbor Guide' To City's Quality Of Life Ordinances

The Mayor's Office of Constituent Services has completed work on the city's first "Good Neighbor Guide," a handy booklet pertaining to the quality of life ordinances in the city.

The guide provides information on such topics as trash disposal, overnight parking, pet waste disposal, noise ordinances, snow emergencies, dumpster regulations, abandoned motor vehicles and more. The guide was published in English and Chinese.

"During our 'Neighborhoods First!' meetings, I was surprised to learn how many people simply did not know about the existing laws that we have to protect our neighborhoods," Mayor William Phelan said.

"This new guide will help our residents better understand the ordinances in an effort to prevent many of the smaller, aesthetic problems that can plague a neighborhood. I think we can make great strides in improving our neighborhoods through a series of small steps, but we need the cooperation of our residents."

The guide is currently being distributed through the follow-up "Neighborhoods First!" meetings. It will be distributed throughout public buildings in Quincy. To request a copy, call the Office of Constituent Services at 617-376-1500.

"I think education is an important component to improving our neighborhoods," Phelan said. "In conjunction with our new code enforcement officer position, our focus is squarely on improving the quality of life issues in our neighborhoods. I am confidence that our neighborhoods will grow even stronger in the next 12 months through the combination of citizen cooperation, the new guide and our code enforcement position."

Phelan launched his "Neighborhoods First!" effort in January, identifying the strength of Quincy's neighborhoods as the overall strength of the city. Other improvements include a $2.2 million sidewalk improvement project, $200,000 in new street-tree plantings and another $1 million in new street-paving to augment the initial $5 million spent as part of the pavement management plan.

"I have been thrilled at the response at our 'Neighborhoods First!' meetings and the enthusiasm that our residents have shown in getting involved in improving their neighborhoods," Phelan said. "Working together over the months ahead, we will accomplish great things in our neighborhoods."

Fund-Raiser For Mike Marks July 28

The friends of Mike Marks are holding a fundraiser for him Friday, July 28, beginning at 7 p.m. at Seapoint, 367 E. Eighth St., South Boston.

Mike, a Quincy resident, is battling cancer and has major surgery scheduled at the end of the month. His friends planned the event to provide him with some positive energy prior to his operation.

All funds raised will go to Mike to help him with his expenses as he will have to miss several months of work while recuperating and then undergoing chemotherapy.

Mike is the father of two young boys, Timmy and Danny, who are active in Quincy Youth Hockey and other sports.

Entertainment will be provided by DJ Gerry DeLuca. There will be a raffle with several prizes, many of which have been donated by friends and Quincy businesses.

Tickets are $20. They can be purchased at the door or by calling Moe Graney at 617-698-1728 or John Norton at 617-472-0658.

Child Car Seat Installation Program

QUINCY POLICE Department Crime Prevention Unit recently teamed up with the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau and Shaw's/Star Market to conduct a Child Car Seat Installation Program. The purpose of the program is to both install and inspect child car seats for the safety of the child.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 19, 1799, in Egypt, a French soldier discovers a black basalt slab inscribed with ancient writing. The Rosetta Stone contained fragments of passages written in three different scripts in the second century B.C. and held the key to solving the riddle of Egyptian hieroglyphics.

• On July 23, 1888, Raymond Chandler, creator of cynical detective Philip Marlowe, is born in Chicago. During the Depression, Chandler turned to writing at the age of 45 to support himself. He published his first novel, "The Big Sleep," in 1939.

• On July 18, 1925, Nazi leader Adolf Hitler publishes the first volume of his personal manifesto. "Mein Kampf," or "My Struggle," was a bitter narrative filled with anti-Semitic outpourings. The autobiographical work soon became the bible of Germany's Nazi Party.

• On July 22, 1934, outside Chicago's Biograph Theatre, notorious criminal John Dillinger is killed in a hail of bullets fired by federal agents. In just over a year, Dillinger and his associates robbed 11 banks for more than $300,000, and killed seven police officers and three federal agents.

• On July 20, 1940, Billboard magazine publishes its first "Music Popularity Chart." The first No. 1 hit was "I'll Never Smile Again" by the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra. From then on, Billboard published its list of top sellers once a week.

• On July 17, 1955, Disneyland opens. The $17 million theme park was built on 160 acres of former orange groves in Anaheim, Calif., and soon brought in staggering profits. Today Disneyland hosts more than 14 million visitors a year, who spend close to $3 billion.

• On July 21, 1967, actor Basil Rathbone dies. Rathbone was best known for his role as detective Sherlock Holmes. He first played Holmes in 1939 in "The Hound of the Baskervilles." Rathbone went on to star in 14 Sherlock Holmes movies in the 1940s, with Nigel Bruce playing Holmes' sidekick, Dr. Watson.

Jim Sheets And The Hospital

You could call it an irony in Jim Sheets' life. A good one, though.

SHEETS

"I'm feeling fine," the 71-year-old former six-term mayor says recuperating — but staying busy — at home after a heart attack June 14.

The irony is that he is credited with saving Quincy Hospital — now Quincy Medical Center — from closing seven years ago.

And now, he credits Quincy Medical Center with saving his life.

Sheets spearheaded an around-the-clock, around-the-weeks and around-the-months effort to keep the vital community facility open.

He generously gives credit to others.

Like Ted Kennedy, Paul Cellucci, former City Council President Peter Kolson, the union employees at the hospital who he says took a 10 percent cut in benefits and wages — and others.

But the saving of the hospital is considered as Sheets' finest hour as mayor and his legacy for posterity and Quincy history.

He knew the closing of the hospital would be a tremendous loss to the community.

It was centrally located, close and easy to get to in time of an accident or an emergency. And that it also served as a vital first stop in the event of something life-threatening that needed specialist attention at a Boston hospital.

He was determined to keep it open.

Things looked ominous for sometime in 1999. The hospital appeared to be sinking in financial troubled waters. A partner was needed, too.

By October, it all came together. The state approved a $12.1 million no-interest loan. And Boston Medical Center became Quincy's affiliation. And Quincy Hospital became Quincy Medical Center.

The hospital was saved.

Sheets knew it was very important to the community.

But little did he realize then how important it would be to him personally one day.

That day came in the early morning of June 14 seven years later — when he started to feel chest pains and was taken to Quincy Medical Center.

But doctors at Quincy Medical Center quickly diagnosed it as a mild heart attack and had him transferred by ambulance to Boston Medical Center where a stent was inserted in a 90 percent blocked artery.

"They call it the widow's artery or the widow's make artery," Sheets says. "A pretty important artery."

Sheets says he never thought back in 1999 that one day he would be transferred from Quincy Medical Center to Boston Medical Center by ambulance as a patient himself.

"I never dreamed that one day it would happen to me."

Sheets says his doctor told him that the quick diagnosis at QMC saved his life.

"I wonder how many other people in Quincy have had similar experiences," he says. "I'm sure a lot of lives have been saved."

Sheets recalls while in the operating room at Boston Medical Center doctors saying Quincy Medical Center did an excellent job in its diagnosis.

The heart attack kept him from attending the black-tie dinner fund-raiser for the Adams Family Memorial planned on the Mall in Washington, D.C.

He is regional director of the Adams Memorial Foundation and famed author-historian David McCullough is chairman of the Adams Memorial Foundation Board of Directors.

McCULLOUGH

McCullough presented Luke with the Adams Medal to bring to his father as a tribute to the work he has done. He is the first person to receive the medal.

Sheets, at home, is now in the process of wrapping up the financial details of the dinner and to determine the official amount raised.

And, got some good news last week.

"I took a stress test and my doctor (Guy Spinelli) said I came through it very well," Sheets smiles.

He's looking forward to seeing the Adams Family Memorial become a reality.

And to finish the book he started to write a year ago.

There will be a chapter on the Quincy Hospital-Quincy Medical Center.

MORRISSEY

SENATOR Mike Morrissey is hosting a summertime cookout tonight (Thursday) (6 to 9 p.m.) at the Waterworks, Marina Bay. Suggested donation $20 per person.

MULVEY

Mulvey, a Weymouth resident and Democrat, is challenging Republican incumbent Bob Hedlund, also of Weymouth, for the Plymouth-Norfolk district state Senate seat.

The district covers a lot of ground: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

It'll be interesting to see the Weymouth vote.

Fund Established For Family Of Tunnel Victim

A fund has been set up at Citizens bank for the family of Milena Del Valle, who was killed in the Interstate 90 tunnel collapse.

The account has been set up in the name of: Hispanic Community Church of Boston, Memorial Account for Yetty M. Del Valle.

The Hispanic Community Church of Boston, Melina Del Valle's church, is also known as Iglesia Hispana de la Comunidad.

Anyone interested in making a donation may do so by visiting any Citizens Bank branch.

Marine Corps Convention Aug. 6-12

The Marine Corps League will hold a national convention Aug. 6-12, at the Marriott Hotel, Crown Colony Drive.

An open house will be held by the William R. Caddy Detachment (a member of the Marine Corps. League), at Newbury and Kendall Streets. Steve Whalen, commandant, and 215 members will attend the convention.

In 1945 a group of active and honorably discharged marines met at the home of L. Dagfin and Gertrude Jorgenson at White Street in Quincy. October of 1946, the post received a charter from the Marine Corps League. It was decided to name the detachment after William R. Caddy, of Quincy, who attended North Quincy High School before enlisting in the marines at age 19.

He was assigned to Company J, Third Battalion, 26th Marines of the Fifth Marine Division. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously for his actions against the Japanese forces on Iwo Jima on March 3, 1945.

He received a citation from former President Harry S. Truman for his actions.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1916 POSTCARD is a view of the old Victorian styled Squantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach. The club was founded in 1890 and for several years it was housed in a small building on a lot of land at the end of Channing Street. When the state decided to build the Wollaston Boulevard along Quincy's mudflat shoreline, the club built this building in 1904 on pilings over the water. The state then dredged a channel to provide access to it at low tide. A serious fire badly damaged this building in 1930 but it was rebuilt and then was completely destroyed by another fire in 1976. The present contemporary clubhouse was dedicated here in 1978. In the foreground the youngsters are in the mouth of Sachems brook that at that time was an open stream all the way to its source at the Milton/Montclair line. Today, the brook is completely enclosed in pipe and ends in a concrete culvert that extends out from here. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Thank You, Whomever You Are

I just had to write and share a very unexpected event that occurred Sunday, June 9.

My eldest grandson, Alex R. Kenney, is leaving for the Army. My daughter and I wanted to have Sunday dinner with Alex, after taking a few pictures to celebrate his decision to join the armed services. It is with mixed emotions that I share this experience with Alex and my family.

Anyway, we headed to the "Outback" for dinner and took more pictures in the parking lot. I placed my keys on top of my vehicle, smiled for the camera as I embraced my beloved grandchild (that seems too young to be joining the Army at 18 years old).

After dinner I noted that I had lost my car keys. I was looking in the booth where we had sat, when the hostess asked if we were looking for keys and presented me with mine. I am usually a very organized person but under the circumstances, I had left my keys on the car.

Although I don't know who turned my keys in, I just had to write and thank the universe for it is still producing some fine folks- like my cherished grandson, Alex.

I guess it isn't just the Army that has a few good men (or women). I was emotional enough without trying to replace my keys of my vehicle.

Thank-you to whomever you are! I appreciate more than words can express, the gratitude I feel for your kind act in giving the young hostess my keys.

Witch Hunt Must End

America, Russia, England, France and China are the only countries internationally considered to be nuclear weapons countries by the Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty (NPT).

However, India and Pakistan have openly detonated nuclear weapons without the internationally recognized status of being permitted to possess them — they are not members of the NPT. North Korea has publicly declared that it possesses nuclear weapons, and we have knowledge that Israel has an arsenal of between 300 to 400 nuclear weapons.

Canada, Germany, Japan, Italy, Iran, Lithuania, the Netherlands and Saudi Arabia have signed the NPT. This treaty allows countries who sign it the right to develop nuclear technology for civilian purposes only — for the utilization of domestic nuclear power plants. This is a right that is guaranteed to them under the NPT as long as they do not develop a nuclear weapons program and as long as they only utilize it for domestic nuclear power. These countries have the technology to develop nuclear weapons within weeks.

Iran has not broken any laws or treaties. We have no proof that they are trying to develop nuclear weapons. Iraq was falsely accused of possessing "weapons of mass destruction," and we are at war because of it. All facts considered, why are we picking on Iran? This witch hunt must end.

Of all of the countries which possesses, or formerly possessed nuclear weapons or possess the technology to develop nuclear weapons, there is only one country that actually used nuclear weapons against another nation: America.

Reluctant Council Votes Revaluation By Outside Firm

Week Of July 17
41 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Revaluation by an outside firm won reluctant approval of the City Council.

First ignored for two months and then debated for another two and a half months, the measure won by a 6-3 vote of the City Council. At issue was an order appropriating $70,000 as the first of three annual payments for a tax equalization study.

Voting for the appropriation were Councillors Richard Barry, Walter Hannon, John Koegler, Francis McCauley, David McIntosh and Council President Joseph LaRaia. Opposed were Councillors George Burke, George McDonald and John Quinn.

Before approving the order at the four-hour meeting, the council defeated by an identical vote another effort to delay the decision.

TRAFFIC COMMISSION ESTABLISHED

The City Council unanimously supported a proposal by Councillor John Quinn to establish a five-member traffic commission. The commission would include the fire chief, police chief, public works commissioner, city engineer and planning director. The commission will study all proposed traffic and parking ordinances before they are enacted.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Red Sox found themselves in ninth place in the 10-team American League. The Sox, with a 32-54 record, were 22 games behind the league-leading Minnesota Twins.

Marionette Show At North Quincy Library

Rosalita's Puppets will present "Rosalita and the Giant Bugs," a marionette show featuring Rosalita and a variety of spiders, butterflies and bees, Monday, July 24 at 2 p.m., at the North Quincy Branch Library, 381 Hancock St.

This program is for children ages 4 through 7, accompanied by an adult. The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Library."

Art-to-go is a series of weekly art activities that travel throughout the city. Projects in this series are open-ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help, and free form enough for school-age children to add their own personal touch.

Drop in any time from 2-4 p.m. to create a project. Projects travel citywide. Supplies for the weekly project will be at the Main Library Children's Room on Mondays, Adam Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays. The project for the week of July 24 will be "Spinning Spiderwebs."

The annual summer storytellers series continues Tuesday, July 25 at 7 p.m. with storyteller Carolyn Martino presenting "Don't Bug Me I'm Reading!" This program is for families with children ages 5 and older, and will be presented in the large meeting room at the Main Library in Quincy Square. This program is sponsored in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

In the Main Library Children's Room, younger children ages 2 to 5 are invited to join storyteller Joan Goodman for a pajama storytime designed especially for them. The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

Quincy Access Television's Mark Crosby Wins Honors

The Hometown Video award was given at the National Conference of the Alliance for Community Media held in the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

The music video featured local musician Mike Duggan, who collaborated with other local musicians on the original composition. The piece was a component of a longer documentary, Turning Point.

Annual Arts Affair At Marina Bay Aug. 5

The 11th Annual Arts Affair will be Saturday, Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on the boardwalk at Marina Bay.

The free event will present art from 13 local art associations to the general public, and will include contests, prizes, and awards.

Judging will be from 10 a.m. to noon. Awards, ribbons, and cash prizes will be awarded in the categories of oil, acrylic, watercolor, mixed media, and photography. "Best of Show" will also be awarded a ribbon and cash prize. The awards presentation ceremony will begin at 2 p.m., while demonstrations will be held throughout the day.

Last year's event registered over 300 original works of art submitted by members of 12 South Shore and Boston art associations.

This year the South Shore Arts Center in Duxbury joins the roster which includes the Milton Art Museum, the Artist's Circle of the Fuller Museum in Brockton, and the Hull Artists Studio Connection, and art associations from Braintree, Canton, Hyde Park, Norwood, Quincy, Scituate, Boston, Weymouth, and West Roxbury.

The event will be rain or shine.

15 Quincy Students Receive Awards At BC High

Fifteen Quincy youths, all 2006 graduates of Boston College High School, recently won special awards at Senior Class Night.

They are:

Brian C. Cunningham, Patrick J. Devlin, Sean P. Farrell, Robert C. Gardiner, Jr., Gregory T. Jenkins, Nhan A. Ly, Stephen J. McDonagh, Richard J. McDonald, Jr., Frank F. Ng, Kevin L. Ouellette, Mark Pepjonovich, Brandon Ranalli, John P. Schiepers, Richard T. Sweeney, III, and Nicholas G. Venuti.

Cunningham won a Stephen Collins Award for Spanish; a Lawrence E. O'Rourke Award for English; a Botolphian Award. This award is given to students who served the school's literary community through their work as editors on The Botolphian.

Cunningham provided editorial insights, planned the layout, and oversaw the creation of the most recent issue; and a John P. Farricy, Sr. Memorial Award. This award honors John Farricy, former member of the Mathematics Department, who initiated this award himself in 1983. The award is provided by the B.C. High Teachers' Association and the Farricy Scholarship Fund to a student or students who have exemplified John's qualities of sustained effort in the pursuit of excellence.

Devlin won an Excellence award for Precalculus.

Farrell won an Excellence award for two subjects: Astronomy and Precalculus.

Gardiner won a Senior Leadership Team Award.

Jenkins won an Excellence award for Latin IV AP and a Magna Cum Laude award for his high score in the National Latin Exam.

Ly won an Excellence award for English IV and a Highest Honors award for his outstanding score in the National Test of Economic Literacy.

McDonagh won an Excellence award for English Language/Composition AP and was named a Commended Scholar as a result of his high score in the National Merit Exam.

McDonald won a Senior Leadership Team Award.

Ng won a High Honors award for his excellent score in the National Test of Economic Literacy.

Ouellette won an Excellence award for Latin IV AP; an award for finishing his four years among the top ten in his class; a Magna Cum Laude award for his high score in the National Latin Exam; a Blue Ribbon for his exceptional score in the National Greek Exam; a Boston University Greek Competition Scholarship; a Certamen award for his excellence in Latin/Greek competitions; a Director's Award for Concert Choir; a Director's Award for Liturgical Choir and a BC High Mothers' Guild Scholarship.

Ranalli won an Honors award for his high score in the National Test of Economic Literacy.

Schiepers won a Magna Cum Laude award for his high score in the National Latin Exam; a Green Ribbon for his high score in the National Greek Exam; and a Certamen Award for his excellence in Latin/Greek competitions.

Sweeney won a National Honor Society Award. This award is given to recognize students who reflect outstanding accomplishments in the areas of character, leadership, service and scholarship. The recipients have exhibited academic achievement and honorable and admirable character, as well as service demonstrating that they are willing to use their talents and skills for the improvement of the society.

Sweeney won an award for his outstanding work on the Student Council. And he won the coveted Jesuit Secondary Education Association Award for exemplifying the ideals for graduates of Jesuit High Schools: a person who is open to growth, intellectually competent, religious, loving, and committed to doing justice.

Venuti won an Honors award for his high score in the National Test of Economic Literacy; a Bowling Club Award This award is given to the players who best exemplify dedication, enthusiasm and focus to the sport of bowling; and a Matthew McDonough '95 Award.

The Matthew McDonough Scholarship Award is presented to a graduating senior who most emulates Matthew's value for life, family and friends. Nicholas Venuti demonstrates Matthew's passion for life and respect for all people. He is principled and honest as was Matthew.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1300 students from some 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

Frank McCauley Honored

Elaine duJardin Lions Club President

The Quincy Lions Club recently installed its officers for the year 2006/2007 at a clambake marking the club's 65th anniversary of service to the community.

New officers installed include: Elaine duJardin, President; Denis Tardo, first vice president; Joseph Reardon, second vice president; Dorothy Greene, third vice president; Michelle Lydon, secretary; and Kathleen Frost, treasurer.

To celebrate the Quincy Lion Club's anniversary, longtime club member and past president Frank McCauley gave a brief history of the club and its achievements since the club was founded in 1941. Following the presentation, outgoing president Joyce Hogan presented McCauley with the Lion of the Year Award in recognition of his dedication and service to the club.

Elaine duJardin praised Hogan for her tenure as president, and promised to continue the club's tradition of aiding blind and visually impaired individuals and raising funds to support eye research.

With more than 1.4 million members around the globe, Lions Club International is the largest nonprofit service organization in the world. The Quincy Lions Club, which meets twice a month at the Neighborhood Club, offers members leadership and networking opportunities while raising funds for local community service projects.

For more information on Lions Club membership, visit www.quincylions.org or call 617-328-1384.

Loretta DeGrazia Receives MetroSouth Chamber Award

Loretta DeGrazia, president of East Coast Petroleum Company of Stoughton, was recently presented the Metro South Chamber of Commerce Athena Award sponsored by the Chamber and Sovereign Bank.

This annual honor is presented by local chambers of commerce in both the United States and several other countries. The award honors DeGrazia for exemplifying business success, serving the community in a meaningful way and for assisting other women in developing their own leadership potential.

Striving to create a business in a "man's world", DeGrazia started her business with only sweat equity and her own two feet. She now runs a multi-million dollar organization, a full-service heating oil and air conditioning company. Over the years, she and the company have been extremely active in both civic and charitable activities.

Created in 1982 in Lansing, Michigan, the Athena Foundation is an international organization dedicated to creating leadership opportunities for women. The Foundation has relationships with chambers of commerce, universities, businesses and sponsors across the United States and around the world.

The Athena Foundation philosophy maintains that by elevating and honoring women of talent, expertise, solid values and leadership in a public way that they will serve as role models for other women inspiring them to also lead and to strive for excellence.

Historical Society Maine Clambake Trip July 26

Quincy Historical Society is offering a trip to historic York, Maine, and a traditional New England clambake at famed Foster's Clambake Pavilion, Wednesday, July 26.

The trip, in a Brush Hill bus, will leave the Adams Academy in Quincy Center at 8 a.m. and arrive in York around 10 a.m. The first stop is at Stonewall Kitchen, an award-winning emporium of New England specialty foods, ranging from "chocolatest" gift baskets, to homemade jellies and jams.

The bus will arrive at Foster's Clambake Pavilion at 11:30, and the clambake will begin at noon. The menu consists of clam chowder, fresh-dug steamed clams, steamed cultivated mussels, a Maine lobster, drawn butter, fresh corn-on-the-cob, roasted red-bliss potatoes, roasted onions, rolls and butter. Those who do not want lobster may substitute a barbecued half chicken with sweet and sour hickory sauce. Dessert is Maine blueberry crumb cake, and there's a choice of coffee or tea. The clambake is accompanied by live entertainment.

After the clambake, the trip will continue to Cape Neddick for a look at the Nubble Lighthouse, listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The trip will leave York around 3:30 p.m., and be back at the Adams Academy at approximately 5:30 p.m.

The price of the trip is $60 for Quincy Historic Society members, and $70 for non-members. Advance registration is required. For more information, call Quincy Historical Society at 617-773-1144.

South Cove Health Center Plans $2 Million Expansion

By MIKAELA SLANEY

South Cove Community Health Center is expanding to a 9,500 square foot location at 435 Hancock St.

South Cove purchased the first floor of the Granite Lofts Condo Complex, and will spend $2 million on renovations. The project is expected to be completed by November.

"It will bring vibrance to the Norfolk Downs area," said Mayor William Phelan. "The building has been vacant for many years, and South Cove Community Health Center, with over 7,000 patients and more than 30,000 visits (annually), will really give a boost to the local businesses in the area, and provide much needed services at the same time."

South Cove rented the previous location at 275 Hancock St. since 1995. The center is a nonprofit corporation that serves 20,000 patients per year in three clinical sites in Boston and Quincy.

South Cove provides primary and preventative health care services, focusing mainly on the Asian community. Eugene Welch, executive director of South Cove, said the new facility will be equipped with examination rooms, dental and eye care rooms, adult and pediatric rooms, and OBGYN. He said the center will assist the Asian community with bilingual staff members.

"We've been serving the Asian community in Quincy for 10 years and we're very proud to do that," Welch said. South Cove patients are 90 percent Chinese and six percent Vietnamese, with the remaining four percent other nationalities, he said.

Funding for the project is covered by a 20-year tax-exempt bond from the Massachusetts Health and Education Finance Agency. The bond is backed by Citizens Bank.

For more information, call Welch at 617-521-6713.

'American Idol' Ayla Brown Visits Bernazzani School

A real, live American Idol appeared at the Bernazzani School recently and sang three of the songs she performed on her way to the "Final 24" of the hit television show.

Ayla Brown of Wrentham agreed to come to the school as part of a fundraising effort on behalf of the fifth grade graduating class.

She spokes of her scholastic achievements, including her plan to attend Boston College on a basketball scholarship, and her experiences of American Idol before she was voted off in March.

She drew a round of cheers and applause when she sang "Reflections" from the Disney movie Mulan; the Celine Dion hit, "I Want You To Need Me," and her favorite "Unwritten" by Natasha Bedingfield.

More than 200 children attended the event and each received an autographed photo of Ayla Brown.

In addition to raising more than $2,000, the fifth graders had a class picture taken with their guest to be featured in the Class of 2006 yearbook.

Proceeds To Benefit Father Bill's Place

Online Auction Ends Saturday For Autographed Shaq Sneaker

An online auction of an autographed sneaker by NBA superstar Shaquille O'Neal is underway.

Interested persons can bid on the size 22 Reebok Pump at ebay.com through Saturday, July 22.

Generously donated by Uncle Sam Rounseville of Quincy, proceeds from the sale of the sneaker will benefit Father Bill's Place, an interfaith shelter for the homeless, 422 Washington St., Quincy.

The online auction helps kick off the 12th annual Father Bill's Place Food Fest & Auction to be held Tuesday, Aug. 1, at WaterWorks in Marina Bay, Quincy.

The Food Fest features more than 40 of the finest local restaurants, bakeries and win distributors sampling their wares for the 1,500 people who turn out for the event.

A SIZE 22 Reebok Pump sneaker signed by NBA superstar Shaquille O'Neal is being auctioned off online at Ebay.com through July 22.

The Food Fest & Auction is sponsored by a number of local companies, including William Gallagher Associates, The Patriot Ledger, New England Realty Group and Jay Cashman, Inc.

Tickets are $100 each and can be purchased online at fatherbillsplace.org or by calling the agency's Development Office at 617-376-2255.

FACTS ABOUT CRACKS IN HEELS

Dry skin can lead to cracked heels, or heel fissures, if left untreated. The affected area becomes yellow or dark brown, depending on skin tone. For many people, this cracking is purely a cosmetic problem, but it can lead to complications. Deep fissures, for example, can cause skin to bleed easily and become painful. Patients may find symptoms exacerbated while walking or when they wear thin soles or open-backed shoes. Infection is also a risk if the condition goes untreated. Other causes of cracked heels include inactive sweat glands, prolonged periods of standing, obesity, and surgery to the lower extremities. Heel spurs, flat or high-arched feet, abnormal gait, and misalignment of the metatarsal bones are also sometimes to blame.

Whether you're dealing with heel fissures or toenail problems, bunions or digital disorders, professional attention is the best assurance of a speedy recovery and prevention of future consequences. We are committed to delivering the most current state-of-the-art podiatric care in a relaxed, friendly environment. Excellence and personal respect are our unconditional commitments to each and every patient who seeks treatment at our office at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. We can be reached at 781-986-3668. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Seek podiatric care for any fissures that bleed.

Free Permitting, License Info Workshops Monthly

The City of Quincy, in partnership with Quincy 2000 Collaborative, is sponsoring free monthly informational workshops for business owners who have questions about the city's permitting and licensing process.

The workshops will be held on the last Thursday of the month from 8:30 to 10 a.m. The next one is scheduled for Thursday, July 27, at City Hall in the second floor conference room.

Representatives from city departments and the architectural, building and legal professions will be on hand to answer questions. Topics of discussion will include change of use restrictions and allowances, zoning and the Board of Appeal process, licensing and registration procedures, Board of Health rules and regulations, business signage and handicap accessibility requirements.

One-on-one assistance and professional referral information will be available during the informational workshop.

Those planning to open a new business or relocate an existing one and have questions on the permitting and licensing process are urged to attend the workshop. To pre-register or to find out additional information, contact the Mayor's Office at 617-376-1990 or Quincy 2000 Collaborative at 617-847-1454.

Edward Keohane Attends Funeral Homes Regional Meeting

Edward Keohane was among the members of Selected Independent Funeral Homes attending the association's recent regional group meeting in Mystic, Conn.

Keohane is owner of Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service located in Quincy and Hingham.

"It is always a valuable experience to get together with my independent funeral director colleagues," said Keohane. "This meeting offered a variety of informational seminars and opportunities to share insights and ideas, which often help our funeral home better serve the families of our community."

Seven such meetings are being conducted by Selected Independent Funeral Homes this spring in cities across the United States. Topics covered at the meetings focus on serving families who choose cremation, conducting military funerals and preparing against disasters.

Keohane, a past president, has been a member of Selected Independent Funeral Homes since 1968. The association was founded in 1917 and is the world's oldest and largest association of independently owned funeral homes. Its approximate 1,500 members represent the "best in class" and operate under the strictest standards. As a professional association, Selected Independent Funeral Homes actively promotes the use of best practices by its members to assist them in providing consumers with the finest care available.

"Over the years, the association's 'Code of Good Funeral Practice' has demonstrated the commitment members of Selected Independent Funeral Homes have to providing quality funeral services. Our members understand the responsibility they have to families and communities they serve," said George W. Clarke, executive director of Selected Independent Funeral Homes. "It's a long tradition of which we are very proud Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service is an important part."

South Coastal Bank Awards $500 Grant To Snug Harbor Community School

South Coastal Bank recently presented a $500 grant from its C.A.R.E.S. community giving program to the Snug Harbor Community School PTO in Quincy.

South Coastal Bank's C.A.R.E.S. giving program helps local not-for-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of Community, Achievement, Responsibility and Excellence in children through exposure to the arts.

Serving students from preschool through grade five in the Germantown section of Quincy, the Snug Harbor Community School PTO works to enhance the children's educational experience by raising funds to subsidize cultural arts programs not provided for by the school budget.

The PTO applied C.A.R.E.S. funds toward a performance by Odaiko New England, a taiko (Japanese drum) group dedicated to preserving and teaching the art of kumi taiko (ensemble drumming).

For more information on South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. or to download an application, visit South Coastal Bank's Web site, www.southcoastalbank.com, or contact community liaison Susan Lincoln at 781-681-7206.

Three-Day Event Opens Today

36th Annual Sidewalk Festival In Quincy Center

Let the fun and games begin.

And don't forget the bargains, too.

The 36th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival will bring them all to downtown Quincy beginning today (Thursday) and continuing through Saturday.

Vehicular traffic will be banned on Hancock Street from Granite Street to Hancock Court for the three-day event sponsored by the Quincy Business Association.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony opening the festivities will be held at 10 a.m. today at the top of Hancock Street with Mayor William Phelan officiating.

Then shoppers and others will be able to stroll down a Hancock Street that has been turned into a pedestrian mall amid the canopied booths in front of the stores.

Festival hours will be today and Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Entertainment is scheduled today and Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Featured performers for this year's festival include:

THURSDAY

Hannah the Clown, balloons and music, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. sponsored by the Bank of Canton.

Sidewalk Sam and Friends, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., sponsored by Norfolk Electric Company.

Part Time Lovers Band, a return engagement, 12 noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by South Shore Savings Bank.

The Garacci Group, a calypso concert, 5 to 7 p.m.

FRIDAY

Hannah the Clown, balloons and music, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., sponsored by the Bank of Canton.

Stop & Shop Jimmy Fund Rally, 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., to benefit the Jimmy Fund, sponsored by Stop & Shop.

Altar Nation, teen rock group, 12 noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by Senator Michael Morrissey.

Little Mister & Little Miss Hawaiian Tropic Model Search, 3 to 4:30 p.m., sponsored by BB ParadICE, Hancock TV & Appliance and Sherman Realty.

Miss Hawaiian Tropic Model Search Contest, part of an international pageant held in 65 countries, 5 to 7 p.m., sponsored by BB ParadICE, Hancock TV & Appliance and Sherman Realty.

SATURDAY

Hannah the Clown, balloons and magic, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., sponsored by the Bank of Canton.

Marla and her Reptile Show, a return visit, 11 a.m. to 12 noon, sponsored by the Flatley Company.

MIKE 93.7 FM, fun and games with the Mike Squad, 12 noon to 3 p.m.

The Walker Billys, musical fun, 1 to 4 p.m., sponsored by Stop & Shop Companies.

As per tradition, vendors will present their wares in an open air venue and many restaurants will be open and prepared for an invasion by hungry visitors.

A FAMILY FAVORITE, the 36th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival begins today (Thursday) and runs through Saturday. Hancock Street in Quincy Center will be become a pedestrian mall for the event, which is sponsored by the Quincy Business Association (QBA).

Exercise Plateau Can be Overcome

Q. I have heard of people hitting an exercise plateau, but I have always seen consistent results with my exercise program — until now. I am extremely active, exercising three to fours days a week. My fitness goals have been met in the past, but this last 3 percent body fat and few pounds are just not budging. What can I do to get over this plateau and start seeing results again?

A. Those last few stubborn pounds and percent of body fat have driven many exercisers bananas, especially if they are doing all they can toward their fitness goals. Don't throw in the towel just yet, as there may be a few changes you can make to your exercise program that you have not considered.

Add something new to your workouts. The results you have seen with your current workout routine are great, but your body may need a different challenge. After completing the same exercises for a period of time, your body becomes very efficient at doing them and requires less effort to complete them, even if you are increasing the intensity.

Try new exercises that work the same muscles. For example, as a change from using the leg press, try squats and lunges. Now, this does not mean you will never do leg presses again, it's just another option that may push your body — facilitating a change.

Also consider how active you are outside of your exercise program. If you are only active when you're at the gym, think about changes to your lifestyle that may encourage your body to change. Take the stairs instead of an elevator or escalator when possible, and park farther from a store or building so you can get more steps in throughout the day. Take time for fun activities with family and friends such as walking, riding bikes or even a friendly game of tennis.

Track your other lifestyle choices for any changes that may have occurred over the month. Changes in sleep, eating, stress or medical status can all affect how your body responds to exercise. Try one or all of the above suggestions to help you leap over your plateau. Small changes can make a big difference.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Tips To Stay Healthy In Extreme Heat

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MAMA) advises people to be cautious in extreme heat.

"A few common sense measures can reduce heat-related problems, especially for the elderly, the very young, and people with respiratory ailments who are more susceptible to the effects of high temperatures," said MAMA director Cristine McCombs.

MEMA offers tips to help keep cool and safe:

• Slow down, avoid strenuous activity. Do not try to do too much on a hot day.

• Wear lightweight, loose-fitting, light-colored clothing. Light colors will reflect heat and sunlight, and help maintain normal body temperature. Protect the face with a wide-brimmed hat.

• Drink plenty of water, regularly and often, even when not feeling thirsty.

• Limit the intake of alcoholic beverages. They can actually dehydrate the body.

• Eat well-balanced, light, regular meals. Avoid high-protein foods that increase metabolic heat.

• Stay indoors as much as possible.

• For those without air-conditioning, stay on the lowest floor, out of the sun. Electric fans do not cool the air, but they do evaporate sweat, which helps cool the body.

• Go to a place to get relief from the heat, such as air-conditioned schools, libraries, theaters, and other community facilities that may offer refuge during the warmest times of the day.

• Cover windows that receive morning or afternoon sun with drapes, shades, awnings or louvers. Outdoor awnings or louvers can reduce the heat that enters a home by up to 80 percent.

• Avoid too much sunshine. Sunburn slows the skin's ability to cool itself. When outside, use sunscreen lotion with a high SPF (Sun Protection Factor) rating.

• Never leave children or pets alone in a closed vehicle.

• Check on family, friends, and neighbors.

In normal weather, the body's internal thermostat produces perspiration that evaporates and cools the body. However, in extreme heat and high humidity, evaporation is slowed and the body must work extra hard to maintain normal temperature. Following these recommendations can prevent heat cramps, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

Heat cramps are muscular pains and spasms due to heavy exertion. They usually involve the abdominal muscles or legs and are caused by loss of water due to heavy sweating. Treatment includes getting the person to a cooler place to rest in a comfortable position. Give the person half a glass of cool water every 15 minutes.

Heat exhaustion typically occurs when people overexert themselves in a warm, humid place where body fluids are lost through heavy sweating. Blood flow to the skin increases, causing blood flow to vital organs to decrease, resulting in a form of mild shock. The skin will be cool and moist, appearing either pale or flushed. The victim may have a headache and/or experience nausea. There may also be dizziness. It is important to treat the victim promptly so the condition does not intensify into heat stroke. Get the person to a cooler place. Remove or loosen tight clothing and apply cool, wet cloths, such as towels or sheets. If the person is conscious, supply half a glass of cool water every fifteen minutes, making sure the person drinks slowly. Let the person rest in a comfortable position, and watch carefully for changes in his or her condition.

Heat stroke is the most serious heat emergency. It is life-threatening. The victim's temperature control system, which produces sweating to cool the body, shuts down. The body temperature can rise so high that brain damage and death may result if the body is not cooled quickly. The victim will have hot, red skin, with changes of consciousness. Their pulse will be rapid but weak, and they will experience rapid, shallow breathing. Body temperature can rise to 105F. If the person was sweating from heavy work or exercise, skin may be wet; otherwise it will feel dry. A person suffering from heat stroke needs immediate assistance. Call 911 and move the person to a cooler place. Immerse in a cool bath or wrap in wet sheets. Watch for breathing problems. Keep the person lying down and continue to cool the body any way possible. If the victim refuses water, is vomiting, or there are changes in the level of consciousness, do not give anything to eat or drink.

Vascular Screening Aug. 4 At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., will host a Stroke & Aneurysm Vascular Evaluation (SAVE) Screening Exam Friday, Aug. 4 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Conducted by Life Line Screening of America, the Stroke & Aneurysm Vascular Evaluation (S.A.V.E.) Screening Exam is offered free to people at high risk, including men over 60 or women over 65, who have a family history of abdominal aortic aneurysm (AAA) or a personal history of smoking, high blood pressure, or cardiovascular disease.

Call 1-866-220-SAVE (7283) for screening criteria and appointments.

Milton Hospital Hosting Blood Drive July 24

The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive Monday, July 24 from 1 to 7 p.m. in the Nangeroni Center at Milton Hospital, 92 Highland St., Milton.

According to the American Red Cross, someone needs blood in the United States every two seconds. However, only five percent of those eligible donate blood in a given year, and there are no substitutes or alternative sources for blood. Most people have blood to spare, yet there is still not enough to go around.

The American Red Cross's blood donation website, www.givelife.org, notes that blood is needed for emergencies, and for treatment of cancer, blood disorders, sickle cell anemia and other illnesses, as well as in response to disasters. Nearly five million people depend upon blood transfusions every year.

Appointments can be made by calling 1-800-448-3543, or by visiting www.givelife.org.

For more information, contact the Milton Hospital Public Relations Department at 617-313-1220.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

"MINI" IMPLANTS

"Mini" dental implants are often called "single-day implants" because they allow for the stabilization of lower dentures in a single day. Made of titanium and approximately the size of a toothpick, mini implants can be screwed into place in the jaw, sometimes without the need for an incision in the overlying gum. Their chief advantages over traditional implants are that they do not require months to structurally integrate into the jawbone and require less bone to make a good purchase. In most cases, four to six implants are needed to anchor the denture. Existing dentures can be revised to fit securely in place over the mini implants. In two hours or less, the denture is firmly anchored in place.

Dental implants have improved the quality of life for millions. When getting implants, it is important to pick a dentist who has experience in performing implant procedures. We can take care of all your dental needs, including implants. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where all the members of our staff are dedicated to serving you - we will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Our concern is your comfort and confidence - our goal is to help preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Battles Norwood In Both Games

Morrisette Bows In First Round

Legion Baseball

By CHRIS POISSON

Manager Ray Cattaneo wished his Morrisette American Legion baseball team could have played one more game in the first round of the District 6 playoffs.

If Norwood hadn't rallied for a 5-4 victory in extra innings last Saturday at Adams Field to complete the sweep, Cattaneo liked Morrisette's chances in the third and deciding game.

"It's frustrating," Cattaneo said. "I would've liked to have played one more game and see what happened. We would have gone against their third starter and I would've pitched Steve Connnolly. You never know."

Morrisette, which finished the regular season with a 10-7 record and earned the fourth seed in District 6 East, dropped the first game at Norwood, 6-3, last Friday before suffering the heartbreaking loss. Three years ago, Morrisette also lost two straight to Norwood in the first round.

"I was pleased with the season as a whole," Cattaneo said. "I didn't know what to expect. We only had two pitchers in Matt Haskins and Steve Sullivan and we had to go look for some more. Brian Sullivan and Steve Connolly threw some good games.

"In the beginning we played some tough games and gave away a lot of runs. But we tightened up our defense as the season went along and played well. A lot of the younger kids played well. It's a little different than high school and they hung in there."

Morrisette played stellar defense against Norwood, committing one error and allowing no earned runs. But it put too many extra runners on base with 10 hit batsmen and Norwood took advantage.

"We were in both games," Cattaneo said. "We stayed right with them. We shot ourselves in the foot with the hit batsmen and they all seemed to score. Our defense played well and other than the hit batsmen, our pitchers did fine. They got out of some jams."

In the second game, Norwood took a 1-0 lead in first inning and added a pair in the fourth before Morrisette responded loudly with five hits in the bottom half.

Brian Sullivan walked and Joe Garland and Ricky Salvucci each singled to load the bases. Jonathan Pelletier, Mike Burke and Joe Lousarian each followed with RBI singles to tie the game.

Joe Vialpando plated Pelletier with a sacrifice fly to left field for a 4-3 lead, but a runner was doubled up at second base to slow down the momentum.

Morrisette couldn't hold onto the slim lead as Norwood tied the game in the seventh to force extra innings where it pushed across a run in the eighth for the win.

Morrisette had a chance in its last at-bat. With two outs, Pelletier and Burke each singled to put runners on the corners but Lousararian hit a hard ground ball right back to the pitcher to end the season.

Haskins started and gave up four runs in 6 1/3 innings and Steve Sullivan gave up a run in 1 2/3 innings of relief.

In the first game, Morrisette caught a tough break in the third inning. Down 1-0, it loaded the bases with no outs but failed to score when Ray Marchand ripped a line drive that the second baseman made a leaping catch for the out and then threw to second to double up the runner to end the inning.

"That was a tough one," Cattaneo said. "We would've went ahead. That would've been at least two runs and if the ball goes in the gap three runs."

Norwood scored four times in the bottom half off starter Steve Sullivan for a 5-0 advantage. In the sixth, Morrisette got on the board when Marchand crushed an RBI triple and scored on Brian Sullivan's single.

Norwood made it 6-2 with a run in the bottom half and Morrisette closed out the scoring with a run in the seventh. Pelletier and Vialpando singled with two outs and with Marchand up, Pelletier stole third and scored on an errant throw.

Morrisette's final game of the regular season against Canton last Wednesday at home was canceled due to rain. The previous day, a seventh-inning rally came up short in a 4-3 loss at Hyde Park.

Connolly gave up three earned runs on five hits in a 65-pitch outing. Hyde Park scored a pair of runs in the first inning and added runs in the second and third for a 4-0 lead.

In the seventh, Marchand led off with a pinch-hit single and with one out Salvucci reached on a fielder's choice. He stole second and scored on Lousararian's single.

Lousararian stole second and third and crossed home on Haskins' pinch-hit single. Vialpando singled and Brian Sullivan (3-for-3) followed with an RBI single to make it 4-3 with runners on the corners, but Morrisette couldn't push across the tying run.

Elks Cal Ripken Major League Champs

After leading the league with a 14-1 record in the regular season, the Elks defeated Rotary Club, Keohane's and Quincy.com in the playoffs before falling to Quincy.com, 4-3, to set up a rematch in the championship game.

SPORTS

In that game, pitching took over as Mike Morrison and Anthony Fonte of Quincy.com dueled through six scoreless innings.

With two outs in the bottom of the seventh, Ryan Doherty drew a walk, Phillip Toomey blasted a long single to the fence and Austin Tobin walked to load the bases. And Zach Stearns, with a full count, provided the heroics with the game-winning hit.

During the season, the Elks were led by a core group of talented 12-year-olds: Connor Doherty, Ryan Doherty, Morrison, Terrence Rooney, Stearns, Tobin and Toomey. Returning Elks are Tommy Garland, Patrick Buell and Alex Loud along with rookies Matt Davis, Tom Largey and Dan Guarante.

Head coach Mark Tobin, assistants Andy Hollatz and Bill Toomey along with all the players thank the Elks organization and all the other sponsors for their continued support of Quincy Youth Baseball and other activities in the community.

FAN APPRECIATION

Summer is no time for your vehicle's cooling fan (or any part of the cooling system) to fail. This can result in an engine-overheating situation that can leave you stranded. In front-wheel-drive cars, the fans are usually driven by electricity, since the engine is mounted transversely, which points the engine toward the side. In rear-wheel-drive vehicles, with longitudinally placed engines, the fan is usually driven by a belt. In either case, failure of the fan to work places the car in jeopardy of overheating. This is the first place to look in the event that the engine temperature gauge goes into the red zone. Give it a look, and arrange for a technician to make the repair.

During these summer days, your cooling system is put under extra stress. Not only is the temperature hotter, driving trips longer, but the AC is usually on. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we strive to keep your car in perfect running order, especially during the hot days of summer. If you have issues with your cooling system, or just to have it checked please come to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, or call 781-843-1550. This summer we are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: The radiator cooling fan should come on within a minute or so of the air-conditioning being turned on.

TEAMING UP to host a three-day basketball camp for 50 students were, from the left, Peter Waisgerber, vice president of financial development and communications of the South YMCA; Kathy Quigley, director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center; and Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating.

DA's Office, Germantown Center, YMCA Team Up For Hoop Clinic

The Norfolk District Attorney's Office, in partnership with the Germantown Neighborhood Center and the YMCA, held a three-day basketball camp last week for Quincy boys and girls.

Fifty participants took part in the camp at Quincy High School. They were coached in both basketball training and positive attitudes on and off the court, benefiting from individual and group instruction, skills and conditioning training, organized games, and distinguished guest speakers.

Those attending camp particularly enjoyed the championship basketball game, where they had the opportunity to show off the new skills they'd learned to their parents and coaches on the last day of camp.

The program featured four speakers, including Jeff Bretsch, girls' basketball coach at Quincy High School who spoke on form shooting; Bob Fisher, boys' basketball coach at Quincy who gave a motivational speech on success on and off the courts; Ken Hardee, head coach of the Eastern Nazarene College women's basketball team who spoke on ball handling; and District Attorney William Keating.

The District Attorney's Office wants to thank all of the young basketball stars and their parents who made the camp a wonderful experience with their talents, showmanship and teamwork, and looks forward to running another basketball program next summer.

FIFTY STUDENTS participated in a three-day basketball camp last week at Quincy High School. The program was sponsored by the Norfolk District Attorney's Office, the Germantown Neighborhood Center and the YMCA.

Gold Medal Winner

MARYELLEN BIRCHMORE of Quincy won a gold medal in the 25-meter walk at Habilitation Assistance Corp.'s recent 18th annual Special Olympics. She also received the Shaw Award for high spirits.

Wollaston Teams Surging In Senior Babe Ruth

The Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth baseball teams are both surging as the regular season nears the end.

Last week, Wollaston I (7-6-1) went 4-1-1 to move into third place and Wollaston II (7-8) went 3-1 to move into fifth place in the nine-team league. The top four teams qualify for the playoffs.

Wollaston I started the week with a 9-9 tie Monday against then league-leading Cedar Grove. The offensive stars were John Orlando (4-for-4, three runs), Phi Nguyen (2-for-3, two runs, RBI) and Paul Doolan (2-for-3, three RBI). Mike Crifo pitched well to preserve the tie.

The next evening it beat Wollaston II, 12-2, as starter Joe Cuervals and reliever Eric Anglehart (save) held them to three hits. Joe Griffin (three hits, two runs, four RBI), Doolan (two hits, three RBI), Steve Matos (hit, two RBI) and Orlando (hit, two runs) led the offensive attack.

On Thursday, Mike MacPherson limited Braintree II to a hit in six scoreless innings in an 8-1 victory. Orlando went 4-for-4 with a triple, RBI and two runs. Griffin (2-for-3, RBI) and MacPherson (2-for-3) contributed to the offense.

Doolan continued Wollaston I's strong pitching performances by hurling a three-hit shutout against second-place Hanover. He struck out six and walked none. Griffin (two hits, two RBI, two runs) and Crifo (2-for-3, three RBI) led the offense. Dan O'Connell, Anthony Gilbody and Nguyen each had a hit and run scored.

Wollaston I began the weekend with a heart-breaking, 2-1 loss to Hingham Saturday, but closed out the week by beating the talented Braintree I squad, 3-0. Griffin limited Hingham to five hits and an earned run. He also tripled and scored the only run on a single by Matos. In the seventh, Wendell Cosgrove led off with a single, advanced to third on an error and a walk but was left stranded.

The next day, MacPherson won his second game of the week with a five-hit shutout over Braintree I. Orlando doubled, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Doolan's squeeze bunt. Crifo and Mark DeMelin both singled and scored on wild pitches.

Wollaston II started the week with the loss to Wollaston I. Dave Regan, Brendan Carnell and Danny Myers (RBI) had the only hits. Nick Masone and Tom Pepe scored the runs and Rob DeAngelis had the other RBI.

Wollaston II bounced back Thursday with an eight-inning, come-from-behind 5-4 victory over Cedar Grove. Matt Edgerly held them to four hits over 5 1/3 innings and Myers earned the win with 2 2/3 innings of hitless relief.

Cedar Grove scored an unearned run in the top of the eighth but Wollaston II responded with RBI hits by Masone and Myers (two hits, two RBI). Other stars were Carnell (two hits, two runs), Edwin Nunez (double, RBI), Rob Mann (hit) and Eric Moreschi (hit).

Wollaston II won by forfeit over Hingham Friday and it closed the week Sunday with a 12-1 win over Braintree II. Mann notched the victory, limiting Braintree II to a pair of hits. Moreschi closed the game without allowing a hit or run.

Leading the way were Nunez (three hits, two doubles, three RBI), Myers (two hits, three RBI) and Regan (two hits, two runs, RBI). Other contributors were Edgerly (two runs, RBI), Alex Tragellis (double, RBI) and Danny Munkley (double, RBI), Chris Timmins (run), Pepe (run), Chris Doyle (run) and Brendan Carey (RBI on squeeze bunt).

Grindlay Memorial Fund Trip To PawSox July 29

The Gerald Grindlay Memorial Fund will hold its fourth annual trip to see the Pawtucket Red Sox at McCoy Stadium Saturday, July 29.

Tickets are $33 and include game admission and an all-you-can-eat barbecue from 4 to 6 p.m. The game vs. the Buffalo Bison is scheduled for 6:05 p.m.

In addition, the PawSox are giving away Jonathan Papelbon Bobbleheads to children ages 14 and under.

All proceeds benefit the Gerald Grindlay Memorial Fund. Over the past few years, the proceeds have been used to fund book awards for local students entering private high schools. This year's book award winners were Kyle Roche and Victoria Barney of St. Ann's School in Wollaston.

To purchase tickets or for more information, contact Michael Grindlay at 617-479-2663 or Catherine Grindlay at 617-293-8417.

Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge July 30

The eighth annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge will be held Sunday, July 30, beginning at 10 a.m. at the southern end of Wollaston Beach.

Registration costs $125 per team. Interested teams should sign up by calling Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, co-organizer of the tournament, at 617-376-1355, or by visiting Tony's Clam Shop or calling 617-773-5090.

Up to 16 co-ed adult teams can compete in the tourney. Teams must consist of three men and three women. One male and one female alternate on each team are permissible.

There will be three nets with constant play in the double-elimination tournament. Local sponsors contribute to provide free volleyball challenge T-shirts to the first 100 players registered and prizes for the winners and runners-up.

Proceeds will go to the Wollaston Beach Clean-up Fund designed to promote educational and recreational events along Wollaston Beach as well as scholarships for high school volleyball players from Quincy public schools.

Gutro's team won the championship last year.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're not Sheepish when it comes to asserting your opinions on what you think is right or wrong. Be assured that you're being heard, and something positive will follow.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your sense of justice makes it difficult not to speak up about a recurring matter involving a co-worker. But, once again, you need facts to back you up before you can act.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Romance is still dominant, and if Cupid misfired before, don't worry. He'll take better aim at someone new this time around. Expect favorable news about a financial matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The zodiac's Moon Children can expect things to work out pretty much as planned. One negative note involves a minor relationship problem that suddenly turns serious.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're suddenly being asked to make choices between two practically equal offers. Which one to choose? Easy. The one most likely to gladden your Lion's heart.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Once again, you're confronted by a workplace problem you thought you'd already resolved. This time, you might need to go higher up to find a just resolution.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good for you: You're determined to stick with your goals and ignore those naysayers who might try to discourage you. You're on the right track. The challenge now is to stay on it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You'll soon get news that is supposed to help you with a troublesome situation. Use your sharp Scorpion instincts to determine if the information is reliable.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) If you learn someone has betrayed your trust, don't just accept it and walk away. You need to know why that person decided to do what he or she did.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A painful family relationship problem could finally begin to heal. Be prepared to show more flexibility than you might like. But it could be worth it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good idea to enhance your career skills so you'll be prepared to accept a more responsible position when it's offered. A friend returns a favor just when you need it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Show that strong, steely backbone that you usually hide, and demand to be included in any family decision-making that could affect the well-being of a loved one.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can be happy being alone at home. But you also love exploring the world outside and meeting new people and sharing new ideas.

Conway Dinner, Auction To Benefit Homeless

The Jack Conway & Co. Real Estate firm is getting ready for the 7th annual "Dishin it up for the Homeless" dinner and auction to benefit the MainSpring Coalition for the Homeless, based in Brockton.

The event is held each year to raise funds for the four shelters operated by the MainSpring Coalition: The MainSpring House in Brockton, Conway House in Middleboro (named after Jack and Patti Conway), Montello House, and Evelyn House in Stoughton.

The facilities are staffed 24 hours a day, 365 days per year. Each year MainSpring Coalition serves more than 1,500 homeless men, women, and children in Southeastern Massachusetts, and is the only organization of its kind in the region.

This year, Jack Conway, his wife Patti, and granddaughter Corrie will be the special honorees at the dinner and auction.

"The success of our organization is built on the shoulders of Jack and Patti, and all the people in Conway Country," said MainSpring interim Director Jerry Ryan. "The ultimate goal of MainSpring is to end homelessness in our neighborhoods and because of the support of the Jack Conway Company, the federal government looks to us to take the lead in that endeavor," said Ryan.

"Dishin it up for the Homeless" has raised over $500,000 since its inception, and organizers are confident of another huge success this year. "The entire community comes together for this worthwhile event each year, and Im sure this year will be no exception," said company Chairman Jack Conway.

Items for the live and silent auctions include gift certificates to area restaurants and spas; local works of art, vacation getaway packages, and many sports related items. This year's auctioneer will once again be Susan Wornick of WCVB-TV, Channel 5.

The fundraiser will be held on Thursday Nov. 2 at Christina's Function Hall on Washington St., Route 1, in Foxboro beginning at 6:30.

Tickets are $100 per person and a table of 8 for $800. For ticket information or to donate auction items, contact Auction Committee Co-Chair Dawn Stevens at the Jack Conway Company at 781-871-0080, ext. 318.

12 Luxury Condominiums To Be Built

Flavin & Flavin Sells Insurance Agency Property On Quincy Ave.

Michael Flavin of Flavin & Flavin Real Estate in Quincy recently sold the well-known Tobman Insurance Agency's property at 488 Quincy Ave. and East Howard St. to local real estate developer Thomas Fitzgerald.

Fred Tobman, who purchased the property in 1978, ran the Tobman Insurance Agency from the property's location until the recent property sale. The property is located directly across from the Quincy Fore River shipyard proposed development site and will be developed and replaced with 12 luxury condominium homes containing 1,600- to 1,800-square feet.

Construction is scheduled to begin in August.

The Tobman Insurance Agency has relocated to newer and modern office space at 12 McGrath Highway in Quincy Center.

Michael Flavin, marketing agent for Fitzgerald, said the new condominium homes will have panoramic and water views, garage parking, and upgrades usually associated with higher priced homes.

Flavin & Flavin is marketing Fitzgerald's 26 luxury condominiums at the site of the former Golden Bowl Restaurant on Franklin St., Quincy, now known as "Presidents Crossing" with 60 percent of units sold.

Leaky Roof? Check Flashing

Q. During the heavy rains recently, a leak developed in one of our second-floor bedrooms. I can't find the source of the leak, and it's in an improbable place. The only thing that might have happened is that the leak is near enough to the chimney that it ran along the outside of the chimney to the ceiling and then pooled above the bedroom. But I can't see any damage from the attic, and the shingles on the roof look all right. Do you have any suggestions on resolving this? — Dan L., Medford, Mass.

A. My first thought is that a leak has developed in the flashing around the chimney. Flashing is a soft metal (aluminum or copper) used to seal joints between the roof sheathing and things jutting through the sheathing, like chimneys or vent stacks, as well as the joints where the sides of the roof meet. It is tapped into place with a hammer or mallet so that it conforms tightly to the materials next to the joint, overlapping by a few inches. Then a weather-resistant sealing compound is applied to the flashing to hold it in place and provide additional protection from water and debris.

The trouble is, housing materials, sealants and soft metal all expand and contract and deteriorate over the years, and even the most flexible of materials eventually cannot cover the little gaps that appear. Sometimes these gaps are not easily seen; sometimes, in heavy, wind-driven rains, water is forced into crevices one never thought of, causing a little bit of damage that becomes bigger with each rain, wind or snowstorm.

Check the flashing around the chimney, looking for cracks, gaps, warping of the metal or other damage. Visually inspect the outside of the chimney as well for cracks in the masonry or gaps in the mortar (another serious issue that needs immediate attention if discovered, due to the risk of house fires). Make your way along the joints of the roof — anywhere two sides meet — to inspect the flashing and sealants.

Damaged flashing can be temporarily patched if another long period of rain is forecast, but this patch will fail quickly. So plan on replacing the metal flashing in the damaged area completely, as soon as a couple of warm, sunny days are expected. You can do this yourself, with the correct materials and tools, or if extensive damage is noted, contact a roofing contractor.

Choosing Exterior For A Home

(NAPS) When building or remodeling a home, there are many things to consider, from small details like the style of bathroom tiles and kitchen cabinets to more significant, lasting decisions, such as the exterior facade of a home.

In the past, exterior options were limited and one look or profile was used for the entire home. Today's exterior product market offers a wide range of options, from accessories to coveralls.

Choosing a home's exterior can be one of the most significant decisions in the life of a home. For a one-of-a-kind look, take advantage of design options:

• Use siding profiles such as board and batten or shake siding to highlight dormers or gables, the triangular portion below the roof peak.

• Accentuate the front of a home by combining siding products such as vinyl, brick, stone, stucco or insulated siding, the latest advancement in maintenance-free siding. This offers the opportunity to highlight a home's unique architecture while hiding imperfections.

• Add accessories such as window trims and decorative corner post systems to create added charm.

• Incorporate multiple color options to bring a home to life... choose a subtle shade as a cover-all with light trim. For example, an evergreen trim can be the perfect complement for a beige cover-all.

• Select a siding product that offers not only the desired look, but also the complementary options to create a visible expression and a lasting impression.

Recently, many homeowners have discovered insulated siding or solid core siding as the ideal design option for any home exterior. Available in a range of styles and colors, including a complete line of trim accessories and profiles such as a vertical board and batten and beading siding, insulated siding supplies the perfect complement or contrast for any home exterior such as brick, stone or stucco.

Made popular by six- or seven-inch profiles, insulated siding offers the wide design and authentic cedar grain texture of real wood, but without the maintenance hassles. Its rigid foam core backing allows for the design of architecturally correct profiles and better energy efficiency for added savings.

Expert Help With Downsizing

Most of us move more than once during the course of our lives, and often it's to a larger living space as the family expands. But eventually a move will involve that horrible word: downsizing.

Downsizing can send a chill down the spine of the heartiest of us because it might mean getting rid of a lifetime of possessions and cramming the rest into a tiny space.

It doesn't have to be painful, however, and whether you're going into a smaller home, apartment, condo or retirement residence, help is available. The National Association of Senior Move Managers, founded by Nancy Loyd and Mary Ann Brewer, owners of Busy Buddies, Inc., is an affiliation of movers who walk you through the whole process. According to their Web site, they will:

• Develop a game plan for the move. The move manager comes to your home and determines just what services are necessary. The first step is sorting what goes and what stays.

• Generate customized floor plans in advance so you can see where every piece of furniture will go — or not go. The manager actually goes to the new place and makes a detailed drawing of the available space.

• Arrange for disposal of items you won't be taking with you, through consignment, garage sale, donation, auction or estate sale. The manager has contacts to help with all those.

• Oversee the movers and the schedule, and arrange for shipping.

• Pack up the current residence and unpack at the new residence, and you don't have to lift a finger. If necessary, arrangements are made for a motel the day of the move.

• Handle related requirements, such as help with choosing a realtor and getting the current residence ready to be sold.

How painless!

Portable Generator Safety

To keep families safe, the Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) and Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) offer a helpful new video and recommend taking the following precautions:

• Contact a licensed electrician to install a generator to make sure it meets local codes. Do not connect generators directly to household wiring without an appropriate transfer switch installed.

Power from generators connected directly to household wiring can backfeed along power lines and electrocute anyone coming in contact with them, including lineworkers making repairs. Other tips include:

• Make sure the generator is properly grounded.

• Keep the generator dry.

• Make sure extension cords used with generators are rated for the load, and are free of cuts and worn insulation and have three-pronged plugs.

• Do not overload the generator. A portable generator should be used only when necessary and only to power essential equipment or appliances.

• Never operate the generator in enclosed or partially enclosed spaces. use carbon monoxide detectors in nearby enclosed spaces to monitor levels. Generators can produce high levels of carbon monoxide very quickly, which can be deadly.

• Use a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI) to help prevent electrocutions and electrical shock injuries.

• Make sure fuel for the generator is stored safely, away from living areas, in properly labeled containers and away from fuel-burning appliances. Before refueling, always turn the generator off and let it cool down.

• Turn off all appliances powered by the generator before shutting down the generator.

• Keep children away from portable generators at all times.

Electricity is a powerful tool. It can also be a hazard. Better safety standards have reduced electrical hazards that cause deaths, injuries and property damage. But good safety habits are still the best prevention against electrical hazards.

Visit www.electrical-safety.org for more information on electrical hazards and precautions.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We have seen a lot of changes over these last few years and sometimes the challenge to accept changes is one of the greatest issues affecting society today.

The ability to accept changes can determine to a great extent, our behavior and the improvements we make in our lives. Those changes which benefit us are the easiest to accept and are usually unnoticed by most people. We sometimes call these changes progress.

Sometimes it is difficult to accept changes that do not please us or that create inconveniences. To many of us, great changes, political-economical-social, are less worrisome than the small changes. Minor changes affect our daily activities, and could create stress due primarily to our inclination to magnify them. We should all have the obligation and responsibility to acknowledge and to accept changes which bring us and our country to the place we belong in this world.

All Property Owners Should Know Nicole's Law

By STEPHEN COSTELLO

Approximately 480 deaths occur in the U.S. each year as a result of unintentional carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning.

Carbon monoxide, also known as the "silent killer," is an odorless, colorless and tasteless gas that seeps into the homes of its victims, causing flu-like symptoms and even death. According to a study published in January 2006 from Christopher R. Henry of the Minneapolis Heart Institute Foundation, exposure to carbon monoxide poisoning weakens the heart muscles, which in turn, increases the risk of heart failure.

The Massachusetts State Legislature is giving voices to the victims of this killer. The state recently passed Nicoleís Law, named for Nicole Garofalo, who died from CO poisoning after a snowdrift blocked the vent to a gas boiler, filling the home with the poisonous gas.

In the hope to end the "senseless" deaths caused by CO, Nicole's Law mandated the installation of carbon monoxide detectors in all owner-occupied residential homes by March 31, 2006. However, because of the added time and cost for residential investment property owners to meet the regulations, their deadline has been extended to January 1, 2007.

The deadline to inform fire departments regarding their individual installation plans was set at May 15, 2006. Although the new law is very clear in regard to residential owner-occupied dwellings, many residential investment properties owners are unclear about the details of the new regulations and the requirements they will have to satisfy to be in compliance with this new law. I hope this article will help.

What do commercial properties owners have to do to meet the new mandates?

According to the Massachusetts Department of Fire Services, under the provisions of Nicole's Law, all residential properties that have fossil-fuel burning equipment, an attached garage or enclosed parking area must have working carbon monoxide protection. A detector is required within 10 feet of each bedroom door and one on each habitable level.

Generally, unfinished basements and attics do not require CO detectors.

Both homeowners and landlords have the option of using the battery operated, wall plug-in (with battery back-up), hardwired (with battery back-up) or wireless detectors that are allowed by the Fire Safety Code. If you choose to install combination smoke and CO detectors, the Code requires that they signal with a voice-type alarm and that any unit installed within 20 feet of a kitchen or bathroom utilize photo-electric type smoke detection.

STEPHEN COSTELLO

Carbon monoxide detectors do not go inside garages, but must be installed within the adjacent living space.

The regulations allow for an alternative compliance for multiple dwelling units that have a minimal source or no source of CO inside individual units. According to the Department of Fire Services, this allows owners to target the CO alarm protection to only those areas that could be potential sources of CO such as, rooms that contain boilers, hot water heaters, central laundry areas and enclosed parking areas.

Who will enforce the law in commercial properties?

Landlords are mandated to inspect, maintain, and if necessary, replace all CO alarms. This inspection will be required annually, as well as at the beginning of any rental period or if a complaint is issued. Landlords are also required to replace batteries in these alarms at least once a year.

Tenants will report any problems with the detectors to the landlord immediately, and should learn to recognize the difference between the smoke alarm and the CO detector.

The Department of Public Health is required to adopt and enforce Nicole's Law on landlords as part of the State Sanitary Code.

Fire departments are required to inspect all residences for CO detectors upon sale and transfer or if a complaint is issued.

How much will it cost?

Homeowners can expect a typical cost of $20-30 for the battery-operated CO detector, which can be found at most local hardware and home supply stores. Many landlords have raised concerns about implementation of the law in regards to proper installation, inspection, effectiveness and costs relating to material and labor for hardwiring a CO system. According to Roxanne Pratten, Owner of Prattenís Design and Construction Inc., Medford, Mass., landlords can expect an estimated cost of $200-$250 per unit, when combining labor and costs to hardwire the system. If residential property owners choose not to hardwire these systems, they may install battery operated detectors within each unit and where CO detectors are required. However, since landlords are mandated to replace these batteries annually, in the long run, the cost of installing a hardwired system may be more cost efficient.

Fire department fees must also be taken into consideration. The cost for separate or joint inspections of CO alarms and smoke detectors are $50 for single-family homes or units, $100 for two-family dwellings, $150 for three- to six-unit dwellings and $500 for six- or more unit buildings. This cost is only incurred at the time of installation, during sale and transfer or if a complaint is issued. Although property owners may suffer the initial costs installation and inspection of these units, the upkeep of the CO detectors will be minimal.

What happens if someone does not comply?

According to the Department of Fire Safety, if one does not comply with the regulations outlined in Nicole's Law the local fire department can bring that landowner to court and penalties will be issued. The law also provides penalties for any person who tampers with these life safety devices. There is no set fee, as it will be up to the individual town fire department and the court to determine how much the penalty will be. In extreme cases where a landowner neglects to install a CO detector and one dies as a result of CO poisoning, the landowner will be held responsible for that person's death.

With more than 3,000 cases of CO poisoning reported in Massachusetts each year, the hope is that Nicole's Law will help prevent future senseless deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning. For all property owners, but particularly if you are a landlord, you need to understand your responsibilities under this new law and the costs you will incur to be in compliance.

Heat Related Ailments Rise With Temperatures

Even with a dash of cooling rain, those readings can be just as dangerous to your health.

Mayor William Phelan told his weekly news conference on Quincy Access Television that the city has not yet found it necessary to open emergency shelters for heat victims.

"There are enough shelters in elder housing and the malls now," he said. "But if the heat becomes unbearable, call the Elder Services hot line at 617-376-1240 or call 911. Don't wait to feel ill."

Many among us, the elderly particularly, are prone to heat stress, such as heat stroke and its milder form, heat exhaustion.

Symptoms of heat stroke, which can be fatal, include an extremely high body temperature, red, hot and dry skin, rapid pulse, throbbing headache, dizziness and nausea.

Heat exhaustion is characterized by heavy sweating, paleness, muscle cramps, weakness, dizziness, headache, fainting, fast and weak pulse and fast and shallow breathing.

But, even as the temperatures flirt with the 100-degree mark, you can do something to prepare for it.

Here are some tips from the Quincy Health Department on protecting your health when the temperatures soar:

Drink plenty of fluids. Don't wait until you're thirsty to take a drink. During heavy exercise on a hot day, drink two to four glasses (16-32 ounces of cool fluids an hour.

Don't drink liquids that contain caffeine, alcohol or large amounts of sugar for these actually cause you to lose body fluid. Avoid cold drinks since they can cause stomach cramps.

Warning: If your doctors generally limits the amount of fluid you drink or has you on water pills, ask him how you should drink while the weather is hot.

Replace Salt & Minerals. Heavy sweating removes the necessary salt and minerals from the body. A sports beverage can replace the salt and minerals you lose in sweat.

Warning: If you are on a low-salt diet, talk with your doctor before drinking a sports beverage or taking salt tablets.

Wear Appropriate Clothing & Sunscreen. Wear as little clothing as possible when you are at home. Choose lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.

Protect yourself from the sun by wearing a wide-brimmed hat along with sunglasses and by putting on sunscreen of SPF (sun protection factor) 15 or higher 30 minutes prior to going out.

Sunburn affects your body's ability to cool itself and causes a loss of body fluids. It also causes pain and damages skin.

Schedule Outdoor Activities Carefully. Try to limit your outdoor activity to morning and evening hours. Try to rest often in shady areas so your body's thermostat will be able to recover.

Pace Yourself. If you are not used to activity in a hot environment, start slowly and pick up the pace gradually.

If exertion in the heat makes your heart pound and leaves you gasping for breath, stop all activity.

Get into a cool area or at least into the shade, and rest, especially if you become lightheaded, confused, weak or faint.

Stay Cool Indoors. Stay indoors, if possible, in an air conditioned room.

If your home does not have air conditioning, go to a shopping mall or public library. Even a few hours spent there can help your body stay cooler when you go back into the heat.

Call the Health Department to see if there are any heat relief shelters in your area.

Electric fans may provide comfort but when the temperature is in the high 90s, fans will not prevent heat-related illness.

Take a cool shower of bath is a better way to cool off. Use you stove and oven less to maintain a cooler temperature in your home.

Use a Buddy System. When working in the heat, monitor the condition of your co-workers and have someone do the same for you.

If you are 65 years of age or older, have a friend or relative call to check on you twice a day during a heat wave.

If you know someone in this age group, check on him or her at least twice a day.

Monitor Those at High Risk. Some people are at greater risk of heat-related illness than others.

Infants and children up to four years of age are sensitive to the effects of high temperatures and rely on others to regulate their environments and provide adequate fluids.

People 65 and older may not compensate for heat stress efficiently and are less likely to sense and respond to change in temperature.

People who are overweight may be prone to heat sickness because of their tendency to retain more body heat.

People who overexert during work or exercise may become dehydrated and susceptible to heat sickness.

People who are physically ill, especially with heart disease of high blood pressure or take medication for depression, insomnia or poor circulation, may be affected by extreme heat.

Visit adults at risk at least twice a day and closely watch them for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke. Infants and small children need even more frequent watching.

Adjust to the Environment. Be aware that any sudden change in temperature will be stressful to your body.

You have a greater tolerance for heat if you limit your physical activity until you become accustomed to the heat.

If you travel to a hotter climate, allow several days to become acclimated before attempting any vigorous exercise, and work up to it gradually.

Use Common Sense. Remember:

- Avoid hot foods and heavy meals.
- Drink plenty of fluids and replace salts and minerals.
- Dress children in cool, loose clothing and shade their heads with hats.
- Limit sun exposure during mid-day hours and place of severe exposure.
- Do not leave infants, children or pets in a parked car.
- Provide plenty of fresh water for your pet and leave the water in a shady area.

'Saturday Night Fever' At Mound St. Beach

Beach chairs and blankets will be the order of the day tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. when the John Travolta film "Saturday Night Fever" is shown under the stars at Mound Street Beach.

The presentation is sponsored by Mayor William Phelan and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, Leo Kelly, chairman.

There will be refreshments for sale and a bingo game and prizes.

Mound Street Beach is in Quincy Point with adequate parking and close to an MBTA bus route.

Could Save 'Hundreds Of Thousands Of Dollars'

City's Bond Rating Increased To A+

Mayor William Phelan announces that Standard and Poors has increased the City of Quincy's bond rating from "A" to "A+."

The improved rating could result in hundreds of thousands of dollars in potential savings in city debt payments, Phelan noted.

"The rating increase is more great news for Quincy and its residents," Phelan said. "We continue to improve our city's financial strength and it is being recognized. The rating increase will help us save significant taxpayer dollars going forward."

Standard and Poors cited Quincy's low debt burden, continued strong property-tax base growth, growing revenue flexibility, higher reserve levels and excess levy capacity as reasons for the improved rating.

In May, Phelan added $5 million saved from Fiscal year 2005 to the city's Stabilization Fund, strengthening the city's financial portfolio. The city's Unreserved General Fund Balance, he said, has gone from a $5 million deficit in 2001 to a positive $13.1 million at the end of Fiscal Year 2006; an $18 million turn-around since he took office in 2002.

"Early on, we developed a road map to improve the city's finances and we have executed it with the help of our departments and members of the City Council," Phelan said.

"By strengthening our reserves, we are ensuring that we have money saved for any 'rainy-day' occurrences and we are actually saving money by paying less on our debt. Simply put, we are saving money by saving money."

Standard and Poors also cited the city's flexibility in excess levy capacity, or money below what is allowed by state law to tax its properties as a reason for the increase. The city has an unused levy capacity of $6.3

Building Code On Windows Eyed In Wake Of Boy's Death

By TOM HENSHAW

The death of a 3-year-old boy who fell from a sixth floor window in a Quincy Point apartment complex has touched off a new interest in the code that governs buildings in the city.

Gitakrsna Gannavarapu died Sunday in Boston Medical Center, nine days after he plunged from the window in the hallway where he lived in Faxon Commons, 1015 Southern Artery.

Two years ago, a 4-year-old youngster was seriously injured when he fell four stories from a window in the same building, which had been cleared of any code violations.

Building Inspector Jay Duca said Mayor William Phelan has asked several department heads to meet Tuesday, Aug. 1, to consider guidelines to prevent such accidents from happening again.

The City Council may get involved, too.

"I was interested to learn that the building code does not cover windows that are a definite threat to youngsters," said Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

"This is something we should address in the fall."

The problem with possible city action, he said, is that the building code is a state function.

"I'm not sure that there is anything the city can do," he said. "But it is an opportunity for us if we have the authority."

Raymondi said he plans to contact the Building Department and the Legal Department "to see what is most appropriate to draft and get direction for action in the fall."

Building Inspector Duca said he didn't know how much the city could do since the state has control of the building code.

"I don't know if we can have an ordinance that doesn't conflict with the state building code," he said.

"We'd like to offer informational guidelines on what to look for in windows or anything we can put together to educate people."

The Gannavarapu boy apparently fell through a loose screen or an open window in the hallway outside apartment in which his family had lived for less than a year after moving from India.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY INCLINE
(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

First Railroad Met, Solved Problems Similar To Big Dig

By TOM HENSHAW

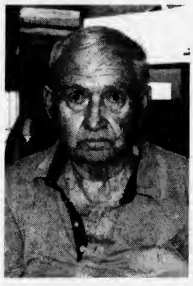
The tales of loose bolts and epoxy that are emerging from Boston almost daily in the scandal surrounding the Big Dig had their counterparts in Quincy many, many years ago.

"They solved that one quickly," said Dick Muzzrole, who has devoted many of his 85 years to studying, maintaining and promoting the world's first commercial railroad in West Quincy.

The cars that carried Quincy granite for the Bunker Hill Monument in 1827 rode on granite ties or sleepers with wooden rails topped by strap iron three-sixteenth of an inch thick.

When the wooden rails were replaced by granite in 1830, it was discovered the bolts or spikes that held the strap iron to the granite rails tended to loosen.

"They solved that by enlarging the hole and putting in bolts that expanded inside the granite rail," said Muzzrole.



RICHARD MUZZROLE

Bolts were made expansive by splitting them and inserting a shim. A similar principle is employed in today's mollyscrew

Another problem emerged when the rails crossed public highways and the stress added by the traffic on the roads also caused bolts to loosen.

"They didn't have epoxy in those days," said Muzzrole, "so Gridley Bryant had them pour lead around the expansion bolts in the strap iron to hold them more securely."

Any similarity between the Big Dig and the Granite Railway ends there.

The three-mile Granite Railway cost $33,158.95 to build, about $100,000 if you include the land, wharf, cars and other equipment. And for many years its maintenance cost was less than $10 a year.

City Democrats To Canvas Voters For MassVictory '06

They have signed on to join MassVictory '06, a grassroots organizing effort sponsored by the State Democratic Party to boost voter participation and turnout for the election.

Democratic City Chairman Chuck Phelan has urged fellow party members to meet at 9:30 a.m. at Caddy Park on Quincy Shore Drive for instructions, neighborhood maps and literature.

Then they will fan out throughout Quincy's neighborhoods until 1 p.m.

Following the canvas, there will be a cookout at the home of Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis at 33 Shawmut St., West Quincy.

Educating Youngsters Against Drug, Alcohol Abuse

Helicopter Takes D.A.R.E. Program To New Heights

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Quincy campers waved at pilots of a National Guard helicopter as it landed in Pageant Field, Friday morning.

The helicopter landing was part of Quincy Police Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) Program that teaches elementary and middle school children the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse. D.A.R.E. officers John P. Grazioso and Don Sautter run the camp with 16 participating high school students who serve as peer leaders. This year 112 children are attending the Quincy Police D.A.R.E. Summer Program, during the last two weeks of July.

"My feeling is that the more education they get now, the better the decisions they'll make later on," said Grazioso.

Pilots Duks Nguyen and Francis Hoban explained different features of their helicopter, the OH58 Kiowa, which was flown in from Barnes International Guard Airbase in Westfield.

"We use (the helicopter) for search and rescue. We're a bunch of grownups doing kids things," said Nguyen.

"We call this our toy," said Hoban.

"This is our office and this is our view, and it changes every day," said Nguyen.

When the officers briefed the campers on the dangers of staying off drugs, campers quickly gave responses. "You guys have a really good D.A.R.E. program," said Hoban.

During the school year, Grazioso and Sautter instruct the D.A.R.E curriculum to approximately 850 upcoming 6th grade students at 11 public and four parochial elementary schools, and 750 upcoming 8th grade students at 5 public middle schools.

The D.A.R.E. curriculum consists of a number of exercises that help participants go through the steps of making good decisions: Define (figure out what the problem is), Assess (what are the choices), Respond (pick out the best choice) and Evaluate (decide why was the choice a good one). Students learn to recognize and resist peer pressure, and how to solve a disagreement in a peaceful way.

Participating campers gave the program positive reviews:

"It's been fun and we've learned a lot," said Shannon Callaghan, Central Middle School.

"We've learned more reasons not to take drugs," said Meredith Flaherty, Central Middle School.

"People get into car accidents, and people can get hurt using it," said Breeah Langton-Tabbi, Woodward School.

"I've learned how to resist drugs and alcohol, and there's so many bad things that can happen if you take drugs and alcohol, and if you abuse it," said Tyler Wayne, Point Webster Middle School. The Quincy Police D.A.R.E. program, in cooperation with the Quincy Public Schools and Parochial Schools, has been taught in Quincy since 1989.

For the past 13 years, the Quincy Police D.A.R.E. Unit has sponsored a summer D.A.R.E. Program for elementary school children who complete the program during the school year. This summer camp gives many children the opportunity to attend camp, who otherwise would not be able to, due to financial reasons, or family situation.

The campers said that so far in the camping program, they went to a PawSox game, visited an underground prison on George's Island at Boston Harbor, and are planning to visit Canobie Lake Park, and Skatetown U.S.A.

Phelan Appoints New City Treasurer/Collector

Quincy has a new city Treasurer/Collector.

Mayor William Phelan announces the appointment of Gloria Williams, town of Pembroke Treasurer/Collector, who will assume her duties in August.

A hiring committee selected Williams from a list of candidates.

"Ms Williams has an exemplary service record in both the public and private sector," said Phelan. "She has direct experience and success in many of the areas that we are looking to improve. I am excited that she is taking the position and I look forward to working with her."

Williams served as the Treasurer/Collector in Duxbury prior to her current service in Pembroke. She also has nine years experience in financial management for the Stop & Shop Company.

Williams' public sector record includes increases in investment returns, increased collection of outstanding revenues, and the implementation of automated and online services for a more customer-friendly approach.

"Gloria impressed the selection committee with her ability to improve all facets of the Treasurer/Collector departments that she ran," said Phelan. "She brings the professionalism, experience and skill set that we are looking for and I fully expect we will continue to improve our performance in this area."

Tom Largey, who has been serving as temporary Treasurer/Collector will return to his post as the mayor's Executive Secretary/Chief of Staff.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 25, 1894, actor Walter Brennan is born. Brennan worked in vaudeville before World War I, then headed to Hollywood after the war. He became the first actor ever to win three Academy Awards, for "Come and Get It" (1936), "Kentucky" (1938) and "The Westerner" (1940).

• On July 24, 1901, William Sydney Porter, otherwise known as O. Henry, is released from prison after serving three years for embezzlement from a bank in Austin, Texas. Porter began writing stories to support his young daughter while he was in prison. He specialized in stories about everyday people, often ending with an unexpected twist, as in "Gift of the Magi."

• On July 28, 1932, during the Great Depression, President Herbert Hoover orders the U.S. Army to evict thousands of Bonus Marchers from the nation's capital. An estimated 20,000 marchers had assembled in Washington to cash in their World War I veterans' bonus certificates. The camps were set on fire, and the veterans were driven from the city.

• On July 26, 1942, actor Gene Autry is sworn in to the Army Air Corps during his radio show, "Gene Autry's Melody Ranch." He served as an officer until 1945, when he resumed his show, which ran until 1956.

• On July 27, 1974, Russian ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov makes his U.S. debut in a performance of "Giselle" with the American Ballet Theater in New York. The dancer had defected from the Soviet Union while on tour in Canada earlier in the year.

• On July 29, 1981, nearly 1 billion television viewers in 74 countries tune in to witness the marriage of Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, to Lady Diana Spencer, a young English schoolteacher. The marriage ended in divorce in 1996.

• On July 30, 1994, Jesse Timmendequas is charged with the murder of 7-year-old Megan Kanka in New Jersey. Kanka's death inspired Megan's Law, a statute enacted in 1994 requiring that information about convicted sex felons be available to the public.

The Charmed Ward 5 Seat

You might say Doug Gutro is sitting in what has been a charmed political seat.

That's the Ward 5 city council seat from which several predecessors have gone onto bigger things.

There's little doubt that Gutro, now the city council president, is interested in the mayor's office.

GUTRO

Not for a run next year against incumbent William Phelan but when he sees what looks like the opportune time to make a run.

Gutro should find inspiration in the modern history of that Ward 5 seat and five of its former occupants.

BURKE

POWERS

It has produced a mayor, three district attorneys, a Congressman and a judge.

Myron Lane, George Burke, William Delahunt, Walter Hannon and Warren Powers started their political careers as Ward 5 councillor.

Lane, who held the seat in 1936-1941, made an unsuccessful bid for mayor but later became Norfolk County district attorney.

Burke (1960-1963) moved up to councillor at-large and state representative and was elected district attorney in 1966 — the first Democrat to ever hold that post.

Hannon (1964-1971) succeeded James McIntyre as mayor in 1972 when the latter stepped down to become counsel to the Massachusetts senate.

Delahunt (1972-1973) defeated Powers for the seat which Hannon left to run for mayor. He completed the term and went on to become district attorney and then congressman — the first congressman from Quincy since John Quincy Adams.

Powers came back to win the Ward 5 seat in 1973 and went on to become a judge. He is now the presiding justice of Wrentham District Court.

Gutro might like to keep that in mind when he thinks about his political future.

SPEAKING OF George Burke, he will be inducted into the New England Basketball Hall of Fame at a ceremony Oct. 6 on the University of Rhode Island campus.

This is another tribute for his exploits as an outstanding player while at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Burke not only is in the UMass Hall of Fame but it has been named in his honor.

And the No. 32 jersey he wore in the 1950s and Julius Erving wore later, was retired.

The two No. 32s hang across from one another in the Mullin Center where the basketball games are played.

Bill, a retired Quincy police officer, and Jean organized the tournament about 15 years ago. They have also played major roles in other parish activities throughout the years.

An Appreciation Award was presented to them by Guido Pettinelli, also a retired police officer, and Lou Rizzo, tourney chairman, on behalf of St. John's Parish.

MEMA Issues Safety Tips For Storm-Caused Power Outages

"The severe winds experienced during hurricanes and tropical storms have the potential to cause power outages throughout the Commonwealth," warned Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency Director Christine McCombs.

"These strong winds have the capability to topple utility poles and snap tree limbs causing them to fall on power lines and disrupt electrical service."

(MEMA) has the following tips for dealing with possible power outages:

• Check flashlights and portable radios to ensure that they are working, and there are extra batteries. A radio is an important source of weather and emergency information during a storm.

• Water supplies can be affected by power outages (especially with a well-water pump system). Fill a bathtub and spare containers with water. Water in the bathtub should be used for sanitation purposes only, not as drinking water. Pouring a pail of water from the tub directly into the bowl can flush a toilet.

• Set the refrigerator and freezer to their coldest settings (remember to reset them back to normal once power is restored). During an outage, do not open the refrigerator or freezer door unnecessarily. Food can stay cold in a full refrigerator for up to 24 hours, and in a well-packed freezer for 48 hours (24 hours if it is half-packed).

• To protect against possible voltage irregularities that can occur when power is restored, unplug all sensitive electronic equipment, such as TVs, stereo, VCR, microwave oven, computer, cordless telephone, answering machine and garage door opener. Review the process for manually operating an electric garage door.

• Be extra cautious when going outside to inspect for damage after a storm. Downed or hanging electrical wires can be hidden by trees or debris, and could be live. Never attempt to touch or move downed lines, and keep children and pets away from them. Do not touch anything power lines are touching, such as tree branches or fences. Always assume a downed line is a live line. Call a utility company to report any outage related problem.

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency is the state agency responsible for coordinating federal, state, local, voluntary and private resources during emergencies and disasters in the Massachusetts.

Beechwood On Bay Offers Cooling Center For Seniors

This is the time of year when the popular clinics, clubs, workshops and other such programs are not necessarily the only attractions at Beechwood on the Bay.

It's the air conditioning at the Senior Center where those most at risk can gather to cool off when the temperatures reach for the high 90 degree mark.

"Air-conditioning is the number one protective factor against heat-related illness and death," reminds the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Beechwood opens at 7:30 a.m. each day and closes at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. There are evening programs Tuesday and Thursday until 9 p.m.

To check on Cooling Center hours, call Maryann Mahony, the Senior Center coordinator, at 617-471-5712.

"Our drop-in center is cool and welcoming," said Mahony. "Quincy seniors are invited to stop by to participate in some or all of our summer activities."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of the Quincy Homestead on Hancock Street at the corner of Butler Road. The house was home to five generations of Quincy families, but was popularly known as the Dorothy Q. or the Dorothy Quincy House for many years. She was to marry John Hancock here, but the start of the Revolutionary War disrupted their plans and they were married in Connecticut instead. To the left of the house just out of view was a dam that caused the Furnace Brook to create the large pond in the foreground. During the Depression, WPA workers took out the dam and narrowed the brook here with granite embankments. The homestead recently became a National Historic Landmark. Criticizes McNamee's Methods On Pre-Release Center

I'm still trying to figure out just what has been motivating Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee in his continued attacks against the City of Boston. (McNamee Pursues Info On Pre-Release Center, July 20).

This is the second time in recent weeks that my ward councillor has blasted Mayor Tom Menino and now has threatened to sic Norfolk County D.A. Bill Keating on him.

One cannot demand cooperation and expect to really get it, can they? McNamee has cited an anonymous Boston city employee who has alleged access to information that Boston is planning to locate a pre-release center at Long Island.

Last time I heard, Boston City Hall held no prisoners. Any inmates inside the City of Boston are the responsibility of DOC or Suffolk County run by Sheriff Andrea Cabral. If McNamee is concerned about rumors of soon-to-be released inmates coming to Long Island, why contact the mayor? Call the county sheriff.

The last time I was on Long Island was more than four years ago when I escorted a DMH client to a program on Long Island. Both the City of Boston and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts along with private human service vendors run programs out on Long Island.

Back when I was a child, there was Long Island Hospital which one could access through Quincy or by a ferry from the North End of Boston.

Many times thanks to a NIMBY (not in my backyard) mentality, it is difficult to place programs helping folks cope with numerous life issues when people say keep them somewhere else. Long Island became "somewhere else."

Rather than threaten Boston with legal action, how about cooperating a bit better? Is Boston really dumping its problems on us or is Long Island a place where people can begin to re-enter society?

Unfortunately, Long Island isn't attached to Dorchester. One must enter Quincy to get to it. For that reason alone, both cities must work with each other.

How many Quincy residents have used the services provided on Long Island? Does McNamee even know?

If, however, there is a problem to be addressed between the two cities, it would be better addressed by a summit between our Mayor Bill Phelan and Boston's Mayor Tom Menino.

Finally, rather than starting a press release war against Boston, perhaps McNamee could contact his Boston counterpart, District Councillor Maureen Feeney, across the Neponset Bridge, who actually is the city councillor representing Long Island on the Boston City Council.

Connector's Fate In State's Hands

This Week
1981
25 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

The fate of the controversial East-West Connector is in the hands of the state.

The upwards of 150 people who packed the City Council Chamber at City Hall for a State DPW hearing appeared to be split just about equally for and against the federal- and state-funded project. The road would connect Southern Artery with the Ross Parking Area.

Proponents argued the proposed roadway was needed to offer easy access to the downtown business district from the proposed Burgin Parkway extension. Opponents claimed the connector would be too disruptive to existing businesses on Hancock Street.

The two candidates seeking to succeed Mayor Arthur Tobin, Councillors Francis McCauley and Daniel Raymondi, expressed opposition to the plan.

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR McINTYRE MALL DEDICATION

Mayor Arthur Tobin named a committee to plan for the dedication of McIntyre Mall, named in memory of Police Captain William McIntyre. Tobin said, "The McIntyre family has made lasting and significant contributions to the history and the growth of our city." The late Captain McIntyre was the father of former Mayor and Sen. James McIntyre.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Red Sox, along will all other Major League Baseball teams, were on strike. The strike was in its 47th day with the players' compensation a major stumbling block in the negotiations with the league's owners. (The strike would be finally settled after 49 days.)

'Two Of A Kind' In Concert Sunday At Thomas Crane Library

The husband and wife folk duo "Two Of A Kind" will present an interactive concert for all ages Sunday, July 30 at 3 p.m. on the Thomas Crane Public Library lawn, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Two of a Kind delights audiences of all ages with their music, good humor and audience participation.

This award-winning, nationally touring duo specializes in interactive musical programs for children and eclectic folk songs for adults.

THE FOLK DUO "Two of a Kind" featuring husband and wife David and Jenny Heitler-Klevans will perform in concert Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Center.

David and Jenny Heitler-Klevans have been singing together since 1987. Their beautiful harmonies accompanied by David's powerful, rhythmic guitar playing and Jenny's multi-ethnic percussion instruments create magic on stage.

The concert will last one hour and will be held in the library's atrium if the weather is inclement.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Indian Language Film Featured At Library Aug. 3

The Indian film, "A Peck on the Cheek," in Tamil and Sinhala with English subtitles, will be shown Thursday, Aug. 3, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The screening in the library's community meeting room is another in the series of foreign films selected from the world's top festivals, including Cannes and Sundance.

The films are not subject to rating by the Motion Picture Association of America, but they are not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

"A Peck on the Cheek" tells the story of Amudha, who is not told she is an adapted daughter until she is 9 and sets out to find her biological mother.

The search takes the family to strife-torn Sri Lanka, where Amudha comes face-to-face with reality and reconciles herself to it.

Another foreign film, "Spare Parts," in Slovenian with English subtitles, an official selection at the Cannes Film Festival, is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 17.

For more information about the film series, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Arts Affair Aug. 5-6 On Marina Bay Boardwalk

The 11th annual Arts Affair on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay featuring hundreds of works of art will be held Saturday, Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 6 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Last year's event registered over 300 original works of art submitted by members of 12 South Shore and Boston art associations. This year, the South Shore Arts Center in Duxbury has been added to the roster, joining the Artists' Circle of the Fuller Museum in Brockton, Art Associations from Braintree, Canton, Hyde Park, Milton Art Museum, Norwood, Quincy, Scituate, South Boston, Weymouth and West Roxbury, as well as the Hull Artists Studio Connection.

Judging will take place Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to noon. Judges will award ribbons and cash awards in the categories of oil, acrylic, watercolor, mixed media and photography. "Best of Show" will also be awarded a ribbon and cash prize.

An awards presentation ceremony begins at 2 p.m. Aug. 5. There will be artists demonstrations throughout the day.

On Sunday, Aug. 6, the Arts Affair continues from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There will be artists demonstrations throughout the day.

The event will be held rain or shine.

Admission is free and parking is free.

The Arts Affair is made possible with the support of numerous sponsors and advertisers, and with the dedication of dozens of hardworking volunteers.

'Flashing Fireflies' Highlight Monday Night Crafts For Kids

Registration will begin Monday, July 31, for the third of four Monday night craft programs for older children at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The first of the programs, entitled "Flashing Fireflies," will take place Monday, Aug. 7, at 7 p.m. in the Children's Room of the Main Library, 40 Washington St.

The craft programs allow older children to work on more detailed and complicated projects. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents only.

Registration will also begin Monday, July 31, for an evening story/craft program for children ages 8 and older at the Wollaston Branch Library, 41 Beale St.

The program will take place Wednesday, Aug. 9, at 7 p.m. and will consist of a story and a chance to make beaded backpack pulls, bracelets and necklaces.

Call the Wollaston Branch at 617-376-1331 to register.

The project for the week of July 31 in the Arts-to-Go series of art activities will be "Winged Ladybugs."

The programs travel throughout the city's library branches with projects easy enough for preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free for enough for school age kids to be creative.

Youngsters are encouraged to drop in any time between 2 and 4 p.m. to create a project.

Supplies for the weekly projects are available at the Children's Room of the Main Library on Monday, Adams Shore on Tuesday, Wollaston on Wednesday and North Quincy on Thursday.

The annual Summer Storytellers Series continues on Tuesday, Aug. 1, at 7 p.m. when storyteller Sharon Kennedy presents Inca, Aztec and Maya Folktales.

Kennedy spent the summer of 2005 in Ecuador and Peru collecting stories from shamans and healers in the rainforest and the Andes Mountains.

He program is for families with children ages 5 and older and will be held in the large meeting room at the Main Library, sponsored in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council.

At the same time, younger children ages 2-5 with an adult are invited to join storyteller Joan Goodman for a pajama storytime in the Children's Room of the Main Library.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

million or 4.5 percent which was cited by Standard and Poors as "above average for municipalities in Massachusetts."

Standard and Poors also considered Quincy's tax-base growth potential as a reason for the upgrade, citing the Crown Colony on-ramp project, the Quincy Center Concourse, the redevelopment of downtown Quincy and Quarry Hills Golf Course as examples of positive improvements to the local tax base.

The city's improved financial management practices were also cited, including monthly budget reviews, a formal five-year capital improvement plan, a new debt management policy and a formal operating reserve policy to maintain total reserves.

"This is great news, but we are far from done," Phelan said. "We will continue to improve our city's finances through sound fiscal management so that we can continue to make concurrent improvements in the quality of life in our city to include new sidewalks, beach improvements, street paving, better schools, park renovations and much more. I look forward to the challenge."

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trouth, the friendly visitor coordinator.

$100,000 Grant To Train For Workforce At Quincy College

Quincy College has received a grant of $100,000 from the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board to provide free career and educational training programs to eligible students from the South Shore.

The programs, which are slated to be offered this fall, include certificate programs in both Allied Health/Phlebotomy and Exercise Science/Personal Training, an Early Childhood Education initiative that can lead to state certification.

Also available will be non-credit options in Computer Skills Training for those who are returning to the workforce and Welding, which will be offered in collaboration with the Quincy Public Schools.

"The primary goal of the initiative, dubbed 'Workforce Scholars of the South Shore,' is to provide income-eligible students with free career training leading to certification in one of five high-demand occupations," said Joe Bradley, executive director of College and Community Development

In order to be eligible for the program, students must be GED of high school graduates ages 18-21 (17-21 for Computer Skills Training), demonstrate financial need and live on the South Shore.

The priority application deadline for Workforce Scholars candidates is Monday, July 31. Interested students should call 617-984-1647 to discuss application requirements.

Quincy College and the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board will host a Workforce Scholars of the South Shore kickoff banquet in September.

Residents Win Right To Buy Affordable Townhouse

A single mother of two teenage boys won the right to purchase an affordable Washington St. townhouse at the First Time Homebuyer Housing Lottery, held Monday at the new City Hall.

The Affordable Housing Trust Committee held the lottery for a newly constructed two-bedroom 1.3 bath townhouse located close to Quincy Center. The lottery was open to Quincy residents that met household income requirements and received a mortgage pre-approval from a participating bank. The applications of seven residents were approved to participate in the lottery.

"Affordable housing is the most pressing issue facing Massachusetts today," said Mayor William Phelan, who drew the winning lottery ticket. "Quincy does it's part. It's a worthwhile program, and it's going to make someone very happy."

Janice Tucker, Homeownership Center Director at Neighborhood Housing Services, said that she had the opportunity to speak with the winner of the lottery drawing who said she was "thrilled." The winner was not present at the drawing.

The affordable housing unit was created under the city's Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance, which requires developers of 10 or more housing units to earmark 10 percent of new housing units as affordable.

Agencies that assisted with the lottery include: Vantage Development, the Zoning Board, the Affordable Trustfund Committee, Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, Quincy Community Action Programs, Bank of America, Bank of Canton, Citizens Bank, and Eastern Bank.

Quincy Medical Center Recognized For Implementing Quality Cardiac, Stroke Care

Quincy Medical Center, a 232-bed community teaching hospital serving residents of Quincy and the South Shore, is one of 173 hospitals in the United States recognized by the American Heart Association and American Stroke Association's Get With the Guidelines program, for performance achievement in cardiac patient care.

The hospital was featured in an American Heart Association/American Stroke Association-sponsored advertisement in the July 10th edition of US News and Word Report.

The American Heart Association/American Stroke Association's Get With the Guidelines program is a quality-improvement program that helps hospitals to insure that patients consistently receive cardiac and stroke care, in accordance with the most up-to-date guidelines and recommendations. The program utilizes three modules to support hospitals in applying evidence-based guidelines to treat patients with coronary artery disease, stroke, and/or heart failure.

Upon meeting criteria specific to each module, hospitals are recognized for performance achievement if at least 85 percent of their cardiac or stroke patients (without contraindications) are treated and discharged according to the American Heart Association/American Stroke Association's guidelines and recommendations.

The recent American Heart Associations/American Stroke Association's advertisement recognizes Quincy Medical Center's commitment and success in performance achievement and continued efforts in the Get With the Guidelines program.

"Get With the Guidelines is about saving lives. The American Heart Association/American Stroke Association wanted to recognize Quincy Medical Center's efforts to implement and maintain the appropriate standards of protocol in cardiac care for patients," said Gregg C. Fonarow, MD, American Heart Association volunteer chairman for the national Get With the Guidelines Steering Committee.

Quincy Medical Center provides South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work side-by-side community physicians to ensure the continuity of care.

QUINCY DUNKIN' DONUTS Franchisees Victor and Octavio Carvalho were recently presented with "The Community Business Partnership Award of 2006.". Victor and Octavio Carvalho were given this award for their outstanding work with the Germantown Neighborhood Center, and the programs they helped conceptualized to benefit the center. These programs include the Dunkin' Holiday Toy Drive, Breakfast with Santa and the Dunkin' Food Pantry which is currently going in participating Dunkin' Donuts shops until Labor Day. From left to right are Ralph Yohe, president of the South Shore YMCA; Quincy Dunkin' Donuts Franchisee Victor Carvalho and Mayor William Phelan.

Birthday Celebration To Hail Amelia Earhart

The Beechwood Community Life Center, home of the Aviation History Information Center, will celebrate the birthday of aviatrix Amelia Earhart at two luncheons this week.

The first is a luncheon for seniors today (Thursday) at 11:30 a.m. and the second is a special brunch Friday, July 28, at 10 a.m. Registration is needed for both events. Call 617-471-5712.

Earhart, who vanished along with her navigator, Fred Noonan, on the Pacific Ocean leg of her plan to fly around the world, was born July 24, 1897, in Atchison, Kansas.

She was the first woman to cross the Atlantic Ocean by air in 1928 and the first woman to fly a plane solo across the Atlantic in 1932, only five years after Charles Lindbergh.

AMELIA EARHART

She was also part owner of Dennison Airport, which flourished on the site of the Squantum Naval Air Station, in the 1920s and '30S and frequently flew out of the field.

Some of the men and women who knew Earhart shared their recollections with a group of aviation history buffs at a recent meeting in the Aviation History Center.

Freda Hadayia, who attended an after-school community center in Boston where Earhart was a social worker, recalled her as a caring individual who took students to cookouts at her sister's house in Medford.

Hadayia also recalled her mother making Syrian meat pies for Earhart, who tucked them inside her famous brown leather jacket for snacking during a flight.

The multi-talented Earhart, who was a various times a nurse's aide, journalist, photographer, teacher and truck driver, reportedly was not a very good cook herself, although some say she had a wicked secret recipe for pancakes.

Kumo Gupto is the newest member of their board of directors. The museum is free and open to the public through early winter. Their activities include canoeing on the Neponset River, walks and hikes through 54 Quincy quarries. For more information call 781-326-0079.

Think Again Think Blue Campaign At Wollaston Beach Sunday

The Think Again, Think Blue campaign will hold a presentation on the damaging effects of water pollution, during the Volleyball Challenge, Sunday between 10 a.m. and noon at Wollaston Beach.

The national campaign focuses on the collective effects of water pollution by using yellow rubber ducks as symbols that represent pollution that is otherwise invisible to the naked eye.

City Council President Douglas Gutro said that he will try to help the campaign in any way that he can. He said that the campaign will present an oversized rubber duck that will serve as a "magnet" to draw the attention of children. He said that they will also float rubber ducks in a pool, and hand out pamphlets informing people of what they can do to reduce pollution.

"You can see the cumulative effects of it," said Gutro. "It's brilliant in terms of resonating with people."

The campaign is held through the efforts of the Massachusetts Bays Estuary Association, of which Paula Jewell is executive director.

For more information on the campaign, or to become involved, visit www.ThinkAgainThinkBlue.org. For information from the Massachusetts Bays Estuary Association, call 781-378-1610.

Choosing A New Apartment

Singling out an apartment that best suits one's needs can be extremely exhausting.

The Better Business Bureau, Inc. (BBB) gives suggestions to assess a particular apartment or narrow down the search to just a few options. The advice is particularly important for those renting their first apartment.

• Before meeting with the property manager or landlord, check out their business Reliability Report at www.bosbb.org. This report will tell their standing with the BBB, whether they were labeled satisfactory or unsatisfactory, customer experience, complaints made with the BBB, and how the company resolved, or did not resolve those complaints.

• When meeting a potential landlord, bring a resume copy and at least three current references. Call references ahead of time to let them know they may be contacted by potential landlords.

• Credit history is also important, and potential landlords will need a copy of credit reports. For a credit report or to verify that reports are accurate, visit www.experian.com, www.equifax.com, or www.transunion.com.

• Visit the apartment and surrounding area, most do this on the same day they meet their landlord. Be ready to thoroughly walk through the apartment.

• Examine the potential lease and make sure every term is acceptable. For example, does it have high penalties for early termination? Or does the lease allow pets?

• Does the rent cover utilities? If not, find out the average utility cost of the building. Review copies of heat, electric, gas, and water bills to get an idea of the cost per month.

• Be sure to know what the security deposit covers, and how much it can be refunded.

• Get a list of rules and regulations.

• Is the apartment affordable? Add up costs, an apartment that appears to be one price per month may cost more.

• Narrow options, but don't limit the choice to the first apartment that seems perfect.

This is a checklist for researching the apartment:

1. Visit the apartment and surrounding area, most do this on the same day they meet their landlord. Be

Olivia King, Paige Mitchell In Quincy Office

Jack Conway & Co. Awards Top Producers

Awards Ceremonies to celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the company were held at the Radisson Hotel on Plymouth Harbor, and at Lombardos in Randolph.

In the Conway Quincy office, Olivia King received the award for being tops in listings for her office for the first half of the year, and Paige Mitchell was honored for being top selling agent for that period.

Conway President Richard Cahill said he was extremely proud of the agents accomplishments, stating, "These associates are a tribute to their colleagues, clients, and families and we are proud to have them represent us in Conway Country."

The ceremonies also focused on the importance of obtaining a quality, affordable higher education. Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, President of Bridgewater State College was the keynote speaker at the Plymouth rally, and Dr. Charles Wall, President of Massasoit Community College spoke to the gathering at the event in Randolph. Conway Company Chairman Jack Conway said his company believes in the power of education, "Both of these fine institutions offer our citizens the opportunity to advance themselves without damaging themselves financially," said Conway. "We are proud to recognize them as valuable members of "Conway Country."

The Jack Conway Company was founded in Hingham Square in 1956 and operates 45 sales offices from Boston to the South Shore, South Coast, and Cape Cod. The company also runs Conway Financial Services, a mortgage company.

Ceiling Fan Does Double-Duty

Q. I read your article about adjusting a wobbly ceiling fan and saw the tip about having the blades push downward in the summer. How do you do that? Do they need to spin in a certain direction, or do I have to do something else? — A.N., Sonoma, Calif.

A. Most ceiling fans have a small switch located on the base unit, near the fan blades, to change the direction in which the blades rotate. The fan blades are canted (tilted) at a shallow angle. As air meets the resistance of the flat part of a blade, it is redirected along that resisting angle and flows in that direction as it passes the edge of the blade. (Not for long, though — but long enough to be felt in an average-sized living area.)

When you flip the switch and reverse the direction in which the blades rotate, the airflow direction is reversed as well because it is now meeting the flat part of the blade at a different angle.

Switching the direction of the blades is a neat and sometimes cost-efficient way to keep a room comfortable year-round. In the summer, a nice downward breeze from the ceiling fan can make even a non-air-conditioned room feel cool. In the winter, directing the flow upward will gently "stir" the air, moving hot air from the ceiling to the rest of the room and reducing stuffiness without creating a breeze, which can be uncomfortable in January. The main benefit is that the thermostat may not need to be set as high (or as low) to maintain a comfortable temperature.

Be sure to turn the ceiling fan off and wait for the blades to stop spinning before flipping the directional switch. Then, try the fan in both directions and note the differences in the room's temperature and/or comfort level.

Classic Homes GMAC Real Estate Moves To New Wollaston Office

Classic Homes GMAC Real Estate, providing real estate services on the South Shore, has moved its office to 12 Beach St., Wollaston.

"Servicing the real estate needs of the residents of the South Shore for 18 years from our Wollaston center location has been very gratifying," said Barry Rabinovitz, president of Classic Homes GMAC Real Estate. "Therefore, we decided on focusing our search to purchase real estate in the same general area and were lucky enough to be able to negotiate the sale of a prime corner in the center of Wollaston business district, across the street from the post office.

"We're thrilled with the location," Rabinovitz said, "only a block away from our former office, and the convenience of the intrinsic benefits of our new office including our new parking lot. This allows us to not only grow our team of sales partners, but also to continue to service our clients from a comfortable home base and gives us continuity."

Rabinovitz added, "We're extremely proud of what our firm has achieved and look forward to many more years of helping people with their real estate needs and giving them the premier service they deserve."

Classic Homes GMAC Real Estate, formerly Sylvia Roffo Real Estate/Better Homes and Gardens, is celebrating its 18th year in business in Wollaston Center. The company provides service in the purchase, sale, rental, and property management of residential real estate in the Quincy and South Shore areas.

Independently owned and operated, it is also a member of one of the largest real estate organizations in North America.

ready to thoroughly walk through the apartment. Ask permission to take pictures or even video tape the walk-through for reference later on.

2. Examine hardware appliances. Inspect their condition and inquire about what comes with the apartment, otherwise, they may need to be repurchased later on.

3. If there are problems with hardware or appliances, find out what repairs will be done by the landlord, and if they will be done before moving in. Choose an apartment that is in good condition.

4. Ask how the grounds are maintained, and inspect them.

5. Make sure the neighborhood is safe. Check locks on doors and windows, and the security of the complex and/or building.

6. Meet potential neighbors. Ask them questions about the property, neighborhood, and landlord. Find out if they are people you can live with, apartments can be close quarters.

Be Power-Outage Prepared

(NU) – The risk of power outages increases in the summer.

Besides keeping flashlights, batteries and other emergency supplies around, what else should you do in the event of a blackout?

One consideration is to protect your appliances and electronic equipment by investing in an automatic home standby generator. It can power up to 12 circuits within 30 seconds of power loss and operates on propane or natural gas.

Carrier Corp. offers an automatic unit with quiet operation at about half the cost of what such generators were just a few years ago.

Interested in learning more about the Quincy Medical Center (QMC) Cancer Walk Sunday, Sept. 17? Considering forming a walk team, but not quite sure how to start?

Attend the QMC Cancer Walk Team Kick-Off Meeting Tuesday, Aug. 8, at 5:30 p.m. in Conference Room B&C at QMC, 114 Whitwell St.

Enjoy refreshments donated by the 99 Restaurant in North Quincy, and:

• Learn more about the annual QMC Cancer Walk, which benefits the Marie A. Curie Fund, a permanent, endowed fund at QMC, focused on encouraging prevention and early detection of cancer and enhancing access to vital cancer screenings and services for uninsured and underinsured men and women.

• Pick up pledge forms, posters and other team-building materials.

• Learn how to create a free, online fund-raising web page for you and your team.

• Hear tips and creative ideas to enhance your team's fund-raising efforts.

• Order customized T-shirts for your walk team.

The QMC Cancer Walk will be held Sept. 17 at Pageant Field, Quincy. Event registration will begin at 8 a.m. with the 4-mile, non-competitive walk kicking off at 9:30 a.m.

For the second year, the Quincy-based Rural Lodge of Massachusetts Freemasons will offer their Child Identification Program (CHIP), free of charge, throughout the walk day.

In addition to the seaside stroll, the fun family day includes a post-walk celebration including lunch donated by Outback Steakhouse of Quincy, musical entertainment by DJ Suzie Cue, as well as clowns and face painters.

To register for the Team Meeting or to learn more about the QMC Cancer Walk, contact Amy Klotz, development officer, at 617-376-5493.

STICK WITH CINNAMON

If you have bad breath, you may want to consider chewing cinnamon-flavored chewing gum. According to one study, chewing on cinnamon gum for 20 minutes reduced the amount of odor-causing bacteria in the mouths of study participants by half. Regular gum, on the other hand, had no such effect on the bacteria that cause the sulfur odor of bad breath. It seems that the key ingredient in cinnamon is cinnamic aldehyde, which is a plant oil that fights the offending germs. In addition, the scent of cinnamon gum appears to mask the odor of bad breath. In theory, sucking on a cinnamon stick should have the same effect. Cinnamon is already known to lower blood sugar, cholesterol, and triglyceride levels.

This column on the benefits of cinnamon has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We can provide you with complete general dental services, from a professional cleaning (preventative) to full mouth reconstruction (repair), periodontal treatments, and cosmetic dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular preventative dental health care. Let us help you preserve your teeth. Our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. FROM START TO FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Getting Started on a Home Treadmill

Q. I am a 46-year-old female. I am 4 feet 11 inches tall and was weighing 242 pounds. I recently bought a treadmill, but I have not exercised in the past 20 or more years. I am not a smoker or drinker and see a doctor regularly. My problem is I don't know where to start. Please help to guide me to start right.

A. The treadmill you purchased can be a great way to exercise at home, IF you use it. The benefits of using a treadmill include improving cardiovascular function and efficiency as well as calorie expenditure. Many at-home treadmills become expensive clothes racks, so you must USE the treadmill and any other exercise equipment in order to see results.

The question "Where do I start?" has been asked by almost everyone wanting to begin an exercise program. Your starting point will depend on your fitness goals, experience and fitness level. Each of these factors is important and can help shape a beneficial fitness routine to guide you toward your fitness goals.

If you have never walked on a treadmill before or if it has been 20 years since your last bout of exercise, you may have to learn how to walk safely and comfortably on the treadmill first. Begin by walking at a slow enough pace so that you feel like you are in control; hold on for balance, but not for dear life. You should feel as if you are walking on the tread belt, and not like the treadmill is pushing you along.

After you get the hang of walking on the treadmill, try walking without holding on (only when you feel comfortable) and swing your arms to help you walk. Choose a speed that you can maintain but is challenging. You don't have to run on a treadmill, and only do so after you have walked at a speed that is just under a slight jog.

Most treadmills have preset training options that change the speed and incline throughout an established time goal. You can use these preset programs once you feel comfortable using the treadmill with no incline and at a moderate pace. After a while you will be able increase the speed and incline to change intensity.

You can judge if you are working hard enough by your breathing. You should be able to carry on a conversation comfortably during your workout, but that doesn't mean you shouldn't push yourself.

The addition of exercise to your current nutrition plan should help you continue toward your fitness goals and help your body not only lose weight, but become more fit.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Advance To State Tournament

11-Year-Old National Team Wins District Championship

The 11-year-old Quincy National Baseball team recently captured the District 3 Championship to advance to the state tournament in Foxboro.

Throughout the district tournament, the National team won with excellent pitching, defense and great hitting.

In the first game, Quincy blanked Weymouth North, 9-0, behind a no-hit performance by the pitching staff. Alex Loud started by throwing two innings and striking out everyone he faced. Adam Cook (three innings) and Rudy Tryon (one inning) finished out the dominating show.

Offensively, Loud and Tryon (each with two hits, RBI), Patrick Verhault (three hits, two stolen bases), AJ Skinner (hit, RBI) and Colin Edgerly (hit, stolen base) provided a comfortable lead.

In the second game, Quincy defeated Halifax, 8-2. Taking the mound were Alex MacIsaac (four innings, one run) and George Whitley (two innings). Once again the bats came alive behind Tryon (double, two RBI) and Cook (hit, RBI).

Defensively, Loud played outstanding at shortstop with Brian Gibson playing solid in right field.

In the semi-finals, Quincy earned a 6-1 win over undefeated Weymouth South, the host of this year's district tournament. Loud went six innings, allowing one run on six hits and punching out seven.

Tommy Garland (two hits, RBI), Brian Furey (two hits, two RBI) and Verhault (two hits, RBI) delivered in the clutch to help Quincy advance to the championship.

Who ever Quincy faced in the championship would have to beat them twice. It ended up facing cross-town rival Quincy American, which featured a strong pitching staff, defense and offense.

In the first game of the championship, Quincy American edged Quincy National, 5-4. Garland pitched well, giving up five runs on four hits and fanning 10 in six innings of work. Offensively, MacIsaac had two hits and a stolen base and Verhault had a pair of hits and two RBI. Jon Calla provided a huge RBI single and a diving play in left field.

In the deciding game, the Nationals sent its ace, Loud, back to the mound and he stepped up in the 10-0 win. He pitched six inning of shutout ball, limiting the Americans to two hits while striking out seven.

The bats were on fire with Verhault (two hits, two RBI), Garland (two hits, two RBI, stolen base) and MacIsaac (two hits, three runs) leading the attack. Chris Kerin hit a bases-clearing double in the first inning. Defensively, Verhault and Bobby King played flawlessly at their positions.

Two QHS Athletes To Compete In National Track And Field Junior Olympics

Quincy High School athletes Adams Jean-Baptiste and Jeff Pereira will compete this weekend in the National USA Track and Field Junior Olympics at Morgan State University in Baltimore, Md.

Representing the Quincy Track Club, Jean-Baptiste will compete in the high jump and Pereira in the 110-meter high hurdles. Both will compete in the 15-16 age division. Some 5,000 athletes from all 50 states are expected to participate.

ADAMS JEAN-BAPTISTE

JEFF PEREIRA

They qualified by virtue of a top three finish at the Region One Championship in Kingston, N.Y., July 9.

In addition to being members of the Quincy/North Quincy cooperative spring track team, they both play football and Jean-Baptiste is also a member of the basketball team. Pereira runs indoor track during the winter.

They participated in the recent Bay State Summer Games where Pereira took third in the 110 hurdles with a time of 16.10 and Jean-Baptiste placed seventh in the high hump. They also spent last weekend at the Elite Track Clinic run by Wheaton College head coach Paul Souza, the National USATF High Jump coordinator.

Quincy Track Club Kelly Memorial Meet At BHS

The Quincy Track Club will host the 30th annual Frank Kelly Memorial Youth Track Meet Friday, Aug. 4, at 6 p.m. at Braintree High School.

Sanctioned by the New England Association of USA Track and Field, the meet is being hosted at Braintree as there is no suitable track in Quincy.

The meet is open to boys and girls ages 5 to 14. Registration will begin at 5 p.m. and cost is $5 per child (free for Braintree Track Club members). Ribbons will be given to all competitors.

Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament Here Aug. 4-6

Four teams from Quincy will be among the 10 teams participating in the sixth annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament Aug. 4-6 at Adams Field.

Other teams participating are Cedar Grove, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hanover and Scituate.

The tournament is played in honor of the late Patrick White, who played many years in Quincy Youth Baseball and most recently in the Babe Ruth League. He died last November after battling Rhabdomysarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, for more than six years.

The tournament will feature teams with players ages 15 and under. There will be games played Friday evening and all day and evening Saturday and Sunday. Admission is free and all are welcome to attend.

The tournament committee is accepting prizes to be raffled off at the tournament. For individuals interested in contributing a prize contact Cindy Ouellette, tournament co-director, at 617-471-2760.

For individuals interested in volunteering, contact Jane Warwick, tournament co-director, at 617-822-8820 or Roseann Russell at 617-472-4811.

Those interested in making a contribution can contact Bob Griffin, tournament co-director, at 617-472-4811, or mail the contribution to Bob Griffin, 4 Avon Way, Quincy, MA 02169. Make checks payable to The Jimmy Fund/QYBL.

Funds raised will benefit the Pediatric Solid Tumor Program within Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care Services.

Quincy Babe Ruth Hosting 15-Year-Old State Tourney

Quincy Babe Ruth is hosting the 15-year-old Eastern Massachusetts State Tournament this week at Adams Field.

Eight teams are participating in the tournament, including: Quincy, Milton, Norwood, Saugus, Burlington, Arlington, Taunton and Gateway (Wareham, Marion, Swansea).

The semi-finals were scheduled for yesterday (Wednesday) and the final game will be played today (Thursday).

Softball Clinic For Children 8-17 Aug. 7-11

"Big Time Softball" clinic for children ages 8 to 17 will be held Aug. 7 to 11 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Lakeside Park in Braintree.

The clinic will feature seven high school and college coaches and 10 college players.

Cost is $165 per person. For more information or to sign up, visit sbgsl.com or contact Mike Harrison, coach at LaSalle College, at 978-887-3259 or Mike Sedar, head coach of Quincy High School, at 781-848-3788.

OF PRIMARY CONCERN

While seatbelt use has been credited with saving about 15,000 lives during the past year, 6,000 more people would be alive today if they had buckled up during the same period. To help save lives, 22 states have primary seatbelt laws that enable the police to stop vehicles and write citations if they see an unbuckled driver or passenger. In other states, there are less effective secondary enforcement laws, which only allow law enforcement officers to write a seatbelt citation if the vehicle is stopped for another violation. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, on average, states with primary seatbelt laws have compliance rates 11 percent higher than states with secondary laws.

Seatbelts save life. This is a proven fact, and seatbelts could save your life. Most cars these days are equipped with many safety features like seatbelts and airbags. Morrisette In Good Shape For Next Season

By CHRIS POISSON

Manager Ray Cattaneo believes his Morrisette American Legion baseball team should be in good shape by the time next season rolls around.

Morrisette recently wrapped up the regular season with a 10-7 record to get back to the playoffs, where it performed well but ended up being swept by Norwood in the first round.

Cattaneo, though, will only lose a handful of players from this year's squad compared to the extreme makeover last offseason when nine rookies were added to the roster.

"We should be in decent shape next year," Cattaneo said. "We have a good nucleus coming back. We'll be more experienced and it makes a difference when you get into the playoffs."

Although it loses Steve Sullivan, Brian Sullivan, Matt Haskins, Ray Marchand and Brandon Ranalli, Morrisette will bring back its entire outfield and most of its infield.

Returning to the outfield are Joe Garland in left, 15-year-old Joe Vialpando in center and Mike Burke in right. Ranalli, a speedster, split time in the outfield.

The infield will feature 15-year-old Ricky Salvucci at third base, Joe Lousararian at shortstop, Chris Boyd at second base and Jonathan Pelletier will take over at first base.

Also returning next year are Joe Ferris, Patrick Totten and Alex Tragellis, who did well in their limited playing time.

That only leaves one position on the offseason shopping list — someone to replace Marchand behind the plate.

Morrisette will need to make significant changes to its pitching staff as it will lose its top three starters: Steve Sullivan, Haskins and Brian Sullivan.

Steve Connolly and Pelletier, who made several starts this year, will step up in the rotation. Cattaneo said Garland will probably pitch next year and the rest of the staff will be filled out by whatever players come out of the Senior Babe Ruth or Babe Ruth leagues.

"We should be decent if we all play to our potential," Cattaneo said. "A lot of them will be playing in high school. But some of the older kids go to college and don't play and it takes a while to get going when they come back."

Cattaneo thanked his coaching staff for its work this season. The staff included head coach Steve Maze and assistants Andy Santos and Ray Cattaneo, his grandson.

"Steve Maze did a great job all year with the kids," Cattaneo said. "He worked hard at it and he was there for them all the time. He did a great job handling the team. I gave him a little bit of advice once in a while. He would ask me in situations and I'd give him my thoughts. After 38 years it just comes natural to you."

Local Qualifiers To Represent State At Hershey National Track, Field Games

Once again qualifiers from the Quincy Recreation Department Hershey's Track and Field Games will represent Massachusetts at the Hershey's National Championship Aug. 3-6 in Hershey Park, Pa.

The 4x100-meter relay team for girls ages 9 to 10 — comprised of Sydney Turner, Bridget Carey, Marissa Balsamo and Lauren Thorne — won the state championship and was notified it would be going to the national finals.

Each state champion has their time and distance compared to the New England states and one province in Canada with the top times going to the nationals.

Thorne will not be available for the nationals and Libby Doyle of Quincy who also participated at the state championship will replace her, said Recreation Director Barry Welch.

"The Hershey's program has been in existence for over 25 years and is a grassroots program that has over 1 million youngsters competing in the U.S. and Canada," Welch said.

"Learning, participation, enjoyment and physical exercise are the elements of this fine program. With our participation we hope that we may positively shape the direction and future of our youth. We are indebted to the support of the Hershey Chocolate Company."

With a large group of Quincy qualifiers at the state championship, Eric Lee of Milton, a Quincy Track Club member, was undefeated in the three events he was eligible to compete in. He was crowned champion in the ages 9 to 10 long jump, the 100-meter dash and the 50.

Other Quincy qualifiers and their results at the state championship:

• Matthew Roach, 12th in the boys ages 11-12 softball throw with a distance of 105 feet, 5 inches and 15th in the 400-meter run with a time of 1-minute, 26.8 seconds.

• Essien Benjamin, 15th in the boys ages 11-12 standing long jump (5-03).

• Ben Albertson, eighth in the boys ages 9-10 softball throw (95-06).

• Chinedu Okoye, fifth in the boys ages 13-14 200-meter dash (28.39) and seventh in the softball throw (129-08).

• Leigha Okoye, fourth in the girls ages 11-12 100-meter dash (15.03) and seventh in the standing long jump (7-03).

• Mary Schwartz, third in the girls ages 13-14 1,600-meter run (6:14.56) and sixth in the 800-meter run (2:49.80).

• Erin Richardson, third in the girls ages 11-12 softball throw (111-03).

• Meaghan Murphy, eighth in the girls ages 9-10 50-meter dash (8.83).

• Marissa Balsamo, ninth in the girls ages 9-10 200-meter dash (35.89) and third in the standing long jump (6-05 1/2).

• Libby Doyle, 10th in the girls ages 9-10 200-meter dash (35.90).

• Julia Nee, third in the girls ages 13-14 200-meter dash (29.99).

• Sydney Turner, fourth in the girls ages 9-10 400-meter run (1:21.02).

• Briana Mullaney, fifth in the girls ages 11-12 800-meter run (2:56.73).

Steve Clancy Golfing In Ouimet Fund's Marathon

Steve Clancy, assistant pro at Granite Links, will play in the Ouimet Fund's Golf Marathon XIV at Stow Acres Country Club Wednesday, Aug. 9.

Fund-raisers and players have begun fund-raising campaigns for the marathon in support of the Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund, which is considered the "Golf Charity of Massachusetts."

The marathon is a fund-raising event in which golfers, clubs and organizations in Massachusetts play a minimum of 100 holes of golf or more in one day at Stow Acres. Players and fund-raisers solicit pledges and contributions in support of their efforts on behalf of the fund.

The event is America's largest golf marathon and has held that title for the past 13 years. Last year, 48 golf clubs, individuals and organizations raised more than $300,000 for the fund.

The Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund was founded in 1949 and since that time has awarded more than $15 million in need and merit based college tuition assistance to more than 4,100 young people.

Ouimet scholars have served at least two years as caddies or helpers in pro shop and course superintendent operations in Massachusetts, and many of them have gone on to outstanding positions of leadership in business and professional careers.

For more information, contact the Ouimet Fund at 774-430-9090.

Andrew Paine Wins Gold Medal In Bay State Games

Andrew Paine of Quincy recently participated in the 25th annual Bay State Summer Games as a member of the Metro boys' volleyball team.

The team won the gold medal in the Boys' Scholastic Division and also received the prestigious Bay State Games/New Balance Team Sportsmanship Award.

Wollaston I In Playoff Hunt, Wollaston II Eliminated

Wollaston I is battling South Boston for the final playoff spot in South Shore Senior Babe Ruth baseball league action.

Wollaston I (7-7-1) is in that position thanks in large part to Wollaston II's 11-1 victory over South Boston (8-6) last Monday.

In its only action last week, Wollaston I lost to Marshfield, 7-5, despite strong relief pitching by Eric Anglehart. Mike Crifo sparked a last-inning rally by knocking in three runs with a triple, but the comeback ended with the tying run at the plate.

Wollaston II (8-8) completed its season and is mathematically eliminated from the playoffs.

Wollaston II beat South Boston with solid pitching, error-free defense and strong hitting. Matt Edgerly limited them to two hits over four innings to pick up his third of the season. Eric Moreschi held them scoreless to close out the game.

Brendan Carnell (RBI, three runs) and Dave Regan (two RBI, run) each had three hits. Rob Mann added two hits and two RBI. Also contributing with hits were: Edwin Nunez (run), Edgerly (run), Danny Myers (two runs), Dan Munkley (three RBI, run), Dave Griffin (run) and Rob DeAngelis (RBI, run).

This was Wollaston II's second year in the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League, where it posted a 3-14-1 record a year ago. The improvement was due to excellent pitching, better defense and timely hitting.

Leading the pitching staff were: Edgerly (three wins), Myers (two wins), Moreschi (win, two saves) and Mann (win).

Supporting the pitching was the team's defense, particularly during the last half of the season. The team was strong up the middle with Myers in center field; Alex Tragellis, Munkley and Tom Pepe at shortstop; Chris Timmins and Chris Doyle at second base; and Nick Masone and Brennan Carey behind the plate.

DeAngelis played all four of the middle positions. Fleet-footed Steve McCarty and Paul Oldham made outstanding catches throughout the season in right field.

Carnell was the top offensive star, leading the team in almost every category: .563 average, 18 hits, 11 runs, 10 RBI and .632 on-base percentage. Regan followed with a .455 average, 20 hits, 10 runs and six RBI.

Two of the youngest players on the team made significant contributions: Nunez (.458 average, 11 hits, three runs and five RBI) and Griffin (.462 average, six hits, .563 on-base percentage).

Other top performers included: Mann (.324 average, 11 hits, six runs, five RBI), Masone (.316 average, four runs, four RBI), Edgerly (.305 average, 11 hits, nine runs, eight RBI) and Tragellis (.286 average, five runs, .524 on-base percentage). Over the second half of the season Myers, DeAngelis, Munkley and Moreschi got hot at the plate.

The Garden Bug

Dragonflies are considered beneficial, as they prey on mosquitoes.

The larvae live in lakes, ponds, streams, and wetlands, but the adult stage is airborne, flying at speeds of up to 60 miles per hour!

Dragonflies do not bite or sting humans.

Some prehistoric dragonflies' wingspans measured almost 30" wide.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You face the possibility of raising your relationship to another level. However, your partner might demand that you make promises for which you're not sure you're ready.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) As changes continue, expect things to get a little more hectic at your workplace. An unexpected travel opportunity could open new career prospects.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Confront the person who caused your hurt feelings and demand a full explanation for his or her actions. You'll not only recover your self-esteem, but you'll also gain the respect of others.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That personal problem in the workplace is compounded by someone's biased interference. Stand your ground, and you'll soon find allies gathering around you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You don't accept disapproval easily. But instead of hiding out in your den to lick your wounded pride, turn the criticism into a valuable lesson for future use.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That former friend you thought you'd cut out of your life is still affecting other relationships. Counter his or her lies with the truth. Your friends are ready to listen.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) What appears to be an unfair situation might simply be the result of a misunderstanding. If you feel something is out of balance, by all means, correct it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A stalled relationship won't budge until you make the first move. Your partner offers a surprising explanation about what got it mired down in the first place.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A coworker shares some startling news, but before you can use it to your advantage, make sure it's true. The weekend favors family matters.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your usual conservative approach to family situations might not work at this time. Keep an open mind about developments, and you might be pleasantly surprised.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Plans might have to be put on hold because of a family member's problems. Don't hesitate to get involved. Your help could make all the difference.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Relationships in the home and in the workplace need your careful attention during this period. Be careful not to allow misunderstandings to create problems.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a keen, insightful intellect and enjoy debating your views with others who disagree with you. You also love to solve puzzles — the harder, the better.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

How often do you doubt something you hear? How often do you have doubts about your abilities or have doubts about the abilities of others? Many people today flounder in a mire of doubt, uncertainty and fear about 'how things are going' – 'where are we going' – . . . We all have doubts at times about ourselves and others. It is only human. Doubting has always been and will always be a human characteristic. When in maturity we find ourselves gripped with uncertainty or struggling in desperation we are bound to have doubts. Couldn't it be said that it is better to have honest doubts than no doubts at all? Couldn't it be said that some doubts torment us only because we have too little faith and this holds true whether it applies to doubts about people, science and religion.

Obviously then, the best way to reduce doubts is to increase faith. Sounds simple. It is.

Sheila Eileen Lynch, 23

Graduate Student In Biology

SHEILA EILEEN LYNCH

A funeral Mass for Sheila Eileen Lynch, 23, of Quincy, a graduate student in biology at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia, will be celebrated Friday at 10 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Miss Lynch died July 22 at home of a sudden illness.

A lifelong Quincy resident, she attended Sacred Heart School, North Quincy, and participated in Sacred Heart basketball, Quincy Youth Soccer, Squantum softball and gymnastic programs.

She also enjoyed sailing on Quincy Bay with her family and friends, and transferred this love of the sea to working several summers as a deckhand on excursion vessels in Boston Harbor and to George's Island, where she learned to "dock dive" into Boston Harbor on hot summer days between ferry trips.

A 2001 graduate of The Newman School in Boston, she was a member of the John Henry Newman chapter of the National Honor Society and a four-year basketball and soccer player, winning most valuable player, scholar-athlete and Independent School League all-star honors.

As class valedictorian, Miss Lynch urged her classmates to use their talents and abilities to serve those less fortunate than themselves.

She graduated from The College of the Holy Cross in Worcester in 2005 with a bachelor's degree in biology/pre-med. At the time of her death, she was a second-year student in the graduate program in biology at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia involved in research into the biology of plant growth.

A research fellow, Miss Lynch taught science to elementary school students in the Philadelphia schools through the Wagner Museum.

She lived ideals of service that were instilled by her parents, Patricia (Coen) and Joseph H. "Harry" Lynch. As the devoted older sister of an intellectually handicapped sibling, Miss Lynch developed a strong interest in helping others similarly handicapped. She became an active participant in the Best Buddies program both at Holy Cross and at St. Joseph's.

She was also involved in the Appalachia Spring Break Program, participating in service trips in each of her four years.

"Sheila was kind, warm, exuberant, boundlessly energetic and intellectually inquisitive," her father said. Her mother recalled a comment from Sheila's seventh grade teacher, Gail Besse of Sacred Heart School in Quincy: "It's amazing how much Sheila manages to learn, given the amount of time she spends talking to classmates."

Sheila was home from Philadelphia to fulfill her jury duty this week.

In addition to her parents, Miss Lynch is survived by her sisters, Elizabeth, Kathleen, Susanna and Alexandria; her brother, Joseph; her grandfather Edward Coen of Waltham; and many uncles, aunts, cousins and friends.

Funeral hours are today (Thursday) from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Lydon Funeral Home, 644 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Burial will be in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Docket No. 06D0798AN1
ORDER FOR SERVICE BY PUBLICATION
MARTY LEE, Plaintiff
v.
PHUNG THI KIM NGO, Defendant

Upon motion of plaintiff for an order directing PHUNG THI KIM NGO the defendant herein, to appear, plead, or answer, in accordance with Mass. R. Civ. P./Mass. R. Dom. Rel. P. Rule 4, it appearing to the Court that this is an action for ANNULMENT.

Pursuant to Supplemental Probate Court Rule 411, an Automatic Restraining Order has been entered against the above named parties, and that the said defendant cannot be found within the Commonwealth and that HER present whereabouts are unknown; that personal service on said defendant is therefore not practicable, and that said defendant has not voluntarily appeared in the action:

It is Ordered that said defendant is directed to appear, plead, answer, or otherwise move with respect to the complaint herein on or before the 22ND day of SEPTEMBER, 06. If you fail to do so this Court will proceed to a hearing and adjudication of this matter.

It is further Ordered that the accompanying summons be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in the QUINCY SUN ON JULY 12TH, 19TH & 26TH, 2006, a newspaper published in QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS 02169, 1372 HANCOCK STREET, the publication to be 60 days at least before said return day. It is further Ordered that a copy of the summons be mailed to the defendant at HER last known address by registered or certified mail.

Date: JUNE 28TH, 2006.

BEATING THE HEAT - Youngsters in the Quincy Recreation Department's Learn to Swim Program enjoy their time in the pool at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. Forecasters expected temperatures to soar to near 100 degrees mid-week before cooling off later in the week.

City's Recommendations:

How And Where To Keep Cool!

The highest temperature ever recorded officially on earth was the 136 degrees Fahrenheit experienced at Al'Aziziyah in the Sahara Desert in Libya on Sept. 13, 1922.

By TOM HENSHAW

No, that record is not going to be threatened in Quincy. It will only seem that way, particularly to senior citizens, as the thermometer flirts with the 100-degree mark during the current heat wave.

The situation is serious enough to lead Mayor William Phelan to issue, through Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele, a list of things to do when the heat and the humidity are not only uncomfortable but downright dangerous.

• Find an air conditioned spot and stay there.

Good bets are the Thomas Crane Public Library and its branches, Adams Shore or North Quincy (but not ACless Wollaston); South Shore Plaza or any other mall; the Senior Center at Beechwood on the Bay.

Or the community rooms at the senior housing complexes, like 1000 Southern Artery, Martensen Street, Pagnano Towers or Tobin Towers.

If you are a senior citizen and you don't know which way to turn, the Council on Aging and the Emergency Management Agency can direct you to the proper air conditioned location. Call 617-376-1244 if you need assistance.

• Drink plenty of fluids, preferably water, never those containing caffeine or alcohol.

Food Poisoning Another Hot Weather Risk

The hot weather presents another risk, that of food poisoning.

Jane Griffin, the clinical dietitian at Quincy Medical Center, noted that "bacteria, whether in food or in the air, grows faster in warmer weather."

"In addition to the commonly known hazards of consuming spoiled mayonnaise or mayonnaise-based salads, other food at risk for contamination include rice, melon, meats and other produce," she said.

"As a general rule, keep hot foods hot (at least 140 degrees), cold foods cold (between 38-40 degrees) and frozen foods frozen (below 0 degrees).

"The danger zone for bacteria growth is between 40 to 140 degrees.

"To prevent foods from hitting the danger zone, make sure that your refrigerator is set to the proper temperature — generally between 38 and 40 degrees, and never leave food on the counter to thaw."

For Redevelopment

$5M From State For Downtown

Quincy is receiving $5 million from the state for redevelopment in the downtown area.

The announcement was made Tuesday by the Quincy State House delegation, Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin.

The money is part of the state's Economic Stimulus Law which provides for local and statewide economic initiatives.

"This money is a direct appropriation and will be immediately available to the city unlike bond monies where the city would have been on a waiting list to get funding," Morrissey said.

"The city," he added, "has enormous discretion and flexibility on the use of the money in the downtown area."

The $5 million is earmarked specifically for the redevelopment of downtown Quincy. It is part of the Legislature's proposal to provide direct assistance to statewide and local economic initiative projects. The city can use the monies to pay for design and engineering of roads, parking structures or infrastructure work, which could include the concourse.

"The Legislature gave the city enormous flexibility in how to use this money; thereby giving the city more options on how to advance the downtown redevelopment," Tobin said.

"This funding is also very important to help reduce the city's bonding and the costs associated with this project," Ayers added.

"The earmark was vetoed by the Governor in early July, but the legislative delegation was able to secure an override of the Governor's veto before the end of legislative session on July 31," Tobin said.

Quincy Democrats Turn Out To Raise November Votes

Some 22 members of the Democratic City Committee turned out Saturday morning to kickoff their part in the statewide Victory '06 campaign

The committee people went door-to-door to about 1,000 homes in Quincy in the interests of voters participation in the November election.

The canvassers were led by State Treasurer Tim Cahill, who will be running for reelection, and Joe Kennedy, who spoke on behalf of his uncle, Senator Ted.

The program, funded by the Democratic National Committee and organized through the State Democratic Party, will continue until Election Day in November.

The next Quincy Victory '06 effort is planned for Saturday, Aug. 19, with canvassers meeting at 9:30 a.m. in Caddy Park on Quincy Shore Drive.

Following the canvas, participants gathered at the home of Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis for a cookout and pool party sponsored by Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Steven Tobin and Ron Mariano.

Arts Affair Saturday, Sunday On Marina Bay Boardwalk

The 11th annual Arts Affair on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay featuring hundreds of works of art will be held Saturday, Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 6 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Last year's event registered over 300 original works of art submitted by members of 12 South Shore and Boston art associations. This year, the South Shore Arts Center in Duxbury has been added to the roster, joining the Artists' Circle of the Fuller Museum in Brockton, Art Associations from Braintree, Canton, Hyde Park, Milton Art Museum, Norwood, Quincy, Scituate, South Boston, Weymouth and West Roxbury, as well as the Hull Artists Studio Connection.

Judging will take place Aug. 5 from 10 a.m. to noon. Judges will award ribbons and cash awards in the categories of oil, acrylic, watercolor, mixed media and photography. "Best of Show" will also be awarded a ribbon and cash prize.

An awards presentation ceremony begins at 2 p.m. Aug. 5. There will be artists demonstrations throughout the day.

On Sunday, Aug. 6, the Arts Affair continues from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There will be artists demonstrations throughout the day.

The event will be held rain or shine.

Admission is free and parking is free.

The Arts Affair is made possible with the support of numerous sponsors and advertisers, and with the dedication of dozens of hardworking volunteers.

Mature Driver Safety Course Sept. 7, 14

A two-day safe driving course for the mature driver will be held Sept. 7 and Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Marina Place, 4 Seaport Dr., North Quincy.

The course is $10, payable in advance. Checks may be made payable to the AARP. Lunch will be served.

For more information or to make a reservation, call the Council on Aging office at 617-376-1506.

State Budget Cuts May Doom DOVE Shelter

DOVE, the city's shelter for battered and domestically abused women and children for the past 28 years, may have to close Oct. 1 in the face of drastic cuts in state funding.

"This was totally unexpected," said Ginny Kurtzman, chair of the board of DOVE, which is an acronym for Domestic Violence Ended. "We're obviously not a priority of DSS.

"For the last 20 years, DSS (the Department of Social Services) has funded us for about $250,000 a year. They have cut us completely for next year. We could be forced to close Oct. 1."

The cut represents slightly less than one half of the facility's budget for the year.

Sen. Michael Morrissey and the Quincy legislative delegation plan to meet with DSS Commissioner Harry Spence Tuesday, Aug. 8, at 10 a.m. in an effort to restore at least part of the funding.

The cuts in funding for DOVE reflect cuts in DSS funding in the state budget for fiscal 2007, which in turn forced DSS to reassess its allocations to centers for abused women like DOVE.

"We know of other shelters in the state that have had their funding cut," said Kurtzman. "We could lose two or three shelters that we know of."

While the DOVE shelter, which is the second largest in the state with 18 beds, may be forced to close Oct. 1 the services its staff provides will continue, said Kurtzman.

"We will still be able to take battered women and their children in," she said, "and we will try to put them in another shelter, if we can find one."

Kurtzman said DOVE served some 275 women and children last year and had to turn away another 250 for lack of space. It operated on a budget of about $600,000.

How To Keep Your Pets Safe And Healthy

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Now in the dog days of summer, don't forget that animals are also affected by heat exposure.

Don Conboy, animal control officer, said that pet owners should be aware of the signs of heat-related illnesses, and how to keep pets safe.

Pet owners are advises to:

• keep pets in the shade.

• provide plenty of fresh, cool water.

• watch for changes in behavior.

• do not extensively exercise animals outside.

• most importantly never keep them in a car without air-conditioning, for even a minute. "It can be like an oven at this time of year," Conboy said.

Warning signs of heat exposure include excessive panting, and noticeable sluggishness. If a pet has been affected by the sun, and shows noticeable changes in behavior, Conboy advises pet owners to take them to a vet right away.

Conboy said that so far the animal shelter seldom gets calls about heat-stricken animals, and that most Quincy pet owners are keeping their pets safe. "So far so good," he said.

Conboy also warns pet owners of the coyote population which may harm pets that are left outside.

"We've had (coyotes) for a few years, it's nothing new. The only difference is there's not as many places to hide, because there's so much building going on. I encourage people not to let cats out at all because there's nothing good out there for cats. Keep an eye on them and bring them in as soon as you can."

Conboy said that other outdoor dangers for cats include cars, dogs, raccoons and foxes.

To contact the animal control office, call 617-376-1349.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 2, 1876, "Wild Bill" Hickok, one of the greatest gunfighters of the American West, is murdered while playing poker in Deadwood, S.D. Hickok held a pair of black aces and black eights when he died, a combination that has since become known as the Dead Man's Hand.

• On Aug. 6, 1890, at Auburn Prison in New York, William Kemmler becomes the first person to be executed by electrocution. A charge of 700 volts was delivered for 17 seconds before the current failed. Inventor George Westinghouse, an innovator of the use of electricity, remarked, "They would have done better with an ax."

• On Aug. 4, 1901, legendary jazz trumpeter Louis Armstrong is born in New Orleans. Armstrong's innovative music established the instrumental solo as the backbone of jazz. Among his many hits were "Blueberry Hill" and "What a Wonderful World."

• On July 31, 1930, the radio mystery program "The Shadow" first airs. The show featured a crime-fighting superhero, the Shadow, and became famous for its trademark opening line: "Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men? The Shadow knows ..."

• On Aug. 3, 1958, the U.S. nuclear submarine Nautilus makes the first undersea voyage to the geographic North Pole. The Nautilus dived at Point Barrow, Alaska, and traveled nearly 1,000 miles under the Arctic ice cap to reach the North Pole. It then steamed to Iceland, pioneering a shorter route to the Atlantic and Europe.

• On Aug. 5, 1962, movie actress Marilyn Monroe is found dead in her Brentwood home in Los Angeles. She was discovered face down on her bed with a telephone in one hand. An autopsy found a fatal amount of sedatives in her system, and her death was ruled probable suicide.

• On Aug. 1, 1971, the "Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour" debuts. The hit show, featuring music and comedy routines, was set apart from similar shows by the sarcastic banter between diminutive Sonny and his statuesque wife, Cher.

A Beauty Spot That Almost Wasn't

You don't have to go very far to find a scenic spot in the heart of a city.

It's right here, outside City Hall.

Constitution Common and McIntyre Mall make a beautiful picture postcard setting.

Benches invite passersby to sit and relax awhile. Read a magazine or newspaper. Get a little sun. Or watch the youngsters laughing as they see their reflections in the mirror-like polished Quincy Granite Gazing Ball.

Executive Director Tom Koch and his Park Department crew have beautified the area with flowers: pink wave petunias, blue salvia and silver mound.

KOCH

And the Granite Ball is now the crown jewel.

But this pretty scene of flowers and greenery and the ball might not have been if it were not for former Mayor Walter Hannon.

HANNON

During his administration (1972-75) some in the business community were pressuring him to black-top the land for a municipal parking lot.

Hannon didn't budge. "No way," he told them. That ended that. And led to today's peaceful and beautiful setting.

McIntyre Mall, adjoining Constitution Common, was dedicated Oct. 25, 1981 when Arthur Tobin was mayor.

Many today think it was named for late Mayor James McIntyre but it actually honors his father, late Police Captain William McIntyre.

But the former mayor was honored when old City Hall was dedicated the James R. McIntyre Government Center Nov. 3, 1985 during Mayor Frank McCauley's tenure.

An appropriate tribute as McIntyre's office as mayor was in old City Hall during his 1966-1971 administration.

The 9 1/2 ton Granite Ball is back home where it belongs, thanks to those who campaigned for its return and especially, Mayor William Phelan, who brought it back.

PHELAN

City Hall was the original site of the ball, so designated by the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association when it presented the ball to the city on its Tercentenary Celebration June 12, 1925. The association stipulated that Mayor Perley Barbour and his successors serve as custodians of the ball.

In 1937, Mayor Tom Burgin moved it to the Fore River Bridge traffic rotary where it remained for 68 years.

As the years went by the ball became less visible at the rotary with shrub growth. Motorists heading up or down the bridge risked an accident looking at the ball instead of the road.

Its placement there also deprived children of seeing the ball close-up and the delight of catching their images in its polished surface.

It was there for 68 years until Phelan, as custodian, ordered it back to City Hall.

The ball was rededicated June 15. And, in the few weeks since then, more people of all ages have had more enjoyment out of it at City Hall than the 68 years it was at the Fore River traffic rotary.

FAGERLUND

Mike Fagerlund, who for something like 50 years, strongly advocated the return of the ball to City Hall, has brought another one there.

This is a small replica sitting on a handsome pedestal and dating back to the 1920s — perhaps to the Tercentenary Celebration itself.

Nils Johnson, a former Quincy insurance agency executive now living in Florida and a friend of Fagerlund's, heard that the ball had been returned to City Hall.

Johnson had a small replica of the ball and told Fagerlund he would send it to him "to do what was best for it."

Fagerlund suggested the mayor's office and Johnson agreed. Fagerlund presented it to Phelan who proudly has it on his desk.

But like the larger ball, the mayor becomes the custodian of this one, too. It's to remain on the desk of mayors that follow Phelan.

But it will always be a "thank you" to Phelan for bringing the bigger one back home.

GABRIELI

The other was at the Fox & Hound Restaurant where he pitched in as a busboy in support of a minimum wage increase.

RAYMONDI

The first is the sixth annual Neighborhood Cookout at the Martensen Street Senior Citizens Complex this Saturday from noon to 3:30 p.m.

The second one is the sixth annual "Avalon Beach Bash" Saturday, Aug. 12 from noon to 4 p.m.

Free hotdogs, hamburgers, ice cream, cold drinks. Music and entertainment by DJ Joe Fasci, clowns, face painting at both events.

Both are supported by the Quincy Citizens Police Academy Alumni Association, Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and Wal-Mart.

Have fun.

Blood Pressure Clinics Free For Seniors

Weekly blood pressure screenings for elders will be held every Monday from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Gail Crawford, a registered nurse, will donate her time and talents to assisting senior citizens in having their blood pressure taken weekly.

Appointments can be made but walk-ins also are accepted. For more information, call 617-376-1506.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1908 real photo postcard shows a group of employees of the Boston Gear Works in Norfolk Downs on their way to an outing at the old Rocky Point Amusement Park in Warwick, Rhode Island. Connections between the various local street railway companies along the way allowed groups like this to go on on-day excursions without changing cars. Open-sided trolleys like the one shown here were widely used in the summer months. But, it still must have been pretty warm inside the car if you were wearing a jacket, necktie and hat as these fellows were. This picture was taken from the west side of Hancock Street near Hayward Street. The barely visible three-decker on the left is now the site of the North Quincy Post Office. Massachusetts Is In Frightening Shape

Recent network news about the Big Dig cast Massachusetts in an ignominious light, an object of national scorn- with good reason.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is in frightening shape. The horrific collapse of the I-90 tunnel ceiling July 10 is only a mere indication of what is ailing this state. It has been a decade and a half since higher-office-seeking, caretaker governors have been ineffectively overseeing the affairs of Massachusetts including the Big Dig. One after another, they have demonstrated their disinterest in leading this state and its citizens. Once in power here, they could not wait to run for Ambassador to Mexico, Ambassador to Canada, Massport Executive and President. That Milena Del Valle had to die for us Bay Staters to see how far our leaders have abandoned us and our state is a true tragedy for us all.

To make matters worse, the current Attorney General was charged with recovering much of the billion and one half dollar cost from the world-power engineering firm of Bechtel/Parsons. He hired a high-priced detective agency and then promptly put the issue on the back burner until Mrs. Del Valle's death, only perhaps because of his own candidacy for governor, forcing him to come to the front and take some action. Because of his lackadaisical attitude and the general boredom of the governors, this Commonwealth has sunk to many new lows.

The national report issued just a few weeks ago naming Massachusetts as number 49 out of 50 states in the way that repairs and maintains its state parks and recreation areas is just one indication of the apathy. Thanks to the gubernatorial and legislative leadership, The Department of Conservation and Recreation supposedly devoted to this task has almost no staff and it shows- really shows.

Since the mid- 1990s, it has been well-known among state and local government circles that half of the bridges in this state are in severely weakened condition. The number of bridge inspectors has been slashed. No one even looks at the other 50 percent to see if they have deteriorated too.

The pockmarked, potholed roads of the Commonwealth are legendary among our own and out-of-town drivers.

The recent spate of deluging rainfalls has revealed another infrastructure weakness: the old and many earthen dams which dot our Commonwealth, only half of which have even been inspected in the past five years. We citizens should not have to hold our collective breath every time we have a huge rainfall, waiting to see if we will have to be evacuated or if our homes will be swept away because some aging dam from 1887 may collapse.

Now comes the problems with the Big Dig, numbering in the high hundreds- and we've only been looking at it closely for a few days!

Mass Pike board members, Jordan Levy, former Mayor of Worcester, and businessman Christy Mihos, both tried for years to get people's attention about the construction irregularity at the Big Dig. They were rewarded by both Governor Jane Swift's and Governor Mitt Romney's legal tactics to oust them. The former inspector General, Quincy's Robert Cerasoli, was also vilified by the gubernatorial incumbent, when he issued four voluminous reports from 1994-2001, which expressed concern about the project costs and its construction and engineering problems. In 1994, former Transportation Secretary Fred Salvucci, testified that the Bechtel/Parsons, based on negative history, required very close scrutiny.

Now everyone is calling for the head of Matt Amorello. Yes, he must fall on the sword for his secrecy and uncooperative attitude, but there are others. Does anyone remember the haughty, unremorseful James Kerasiotes who tried to shield his own Board and the general public from the Big Dig's construction and financial woes?

The Massachusetts legislature has also laid back on all of these infrastructure problems. Instead of taking care of the people's business and performing its role as one third of our leadership, it has ignored the plight of our infrastructure and of the world's largest engineering project. What do we get from the legislature? More attention and time to their outside jobs than to government and their concern over legislative pension like Ruane's, the gay marriage amendment, and so on. I'm no Chicken Little, but in less than a week the number of problems identified with the project climbed from one to almost 1000, and they're just beginning to look.

So here we are at a crossroads, prompted by the tragic death of an innocent mother of three. IF this state were a child being cared for in an unfit home, by unfit individuals, a state agency would remove the child from the home. We are in charge of our own safety and we must take it back. I hope that we will all remember that in September and November when it is time to vote.

Some Praise For Sal

Reply to Ken Bennett's letter of July 27:

In regards to your comments regarding Mr. Sal Giarratani, I don't know him personally but he seems to care so much about the city of Quincy that he took the time to write about so many things.

Sometimes I disagree with Mr. Giarratani's opinions, but I wish there were more Sal Giarratani's.

So, Ken, enjoy your summer!

Council Decision On Home Depot Center

By FRANK McCAULEY

The long-awaited decision on a proposed home improvement center in West Quincy will be made Aug. 5 when the City Council meets as the special permit granting authority.

Six votes are necessary to approve the project proposed by Home Depot.

This Week
1991
15 Years Ago

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio will present his report on the project earlier. Fabrizio noted he has not lobbied his colleagues one way or another on the merits of the project.

(Note: The City Council approved the project with 32 conditions by a 7-1 vote. Councillor Peter Kolson was the lone dissenter. Councillor Patricia Toland did not attend the meeting.)

QUINCY COLLEGE TO OPEN PLYMOUTH CAMPUS

Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson announced the college will open a new campus in Plymouth Oct. 7. He said the new campus will provide Plymouth area residents with a strong higher education facility and he noted, "We have been receiving increasing numbers of applications from the Plymouth area."

Quincy College, a fully accredited community college, is currently the second fastest growing college in the state. The Quincy campus enrolls more than 4,000 students annually.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Boston Red Sox were in third place in the seven-team East Division of the American League. The Sox, with a 48-52 record, were 9 games behind the division-leading Toronto Blue Jays. Jack Clark hit three home runs including a grand slam in the Red Sox' 11-10, 12-inning victory over the Oakland A's.

Boston Landmarks Concert At Adams National Park

The Boston Landmarks Orchestra will perform its annual free concert tonight (Thursday) on the lawn of the Beale Estate, Adams Street.

The concert will begin at 7 p.m. and is open to the public.

"I want to thank State Street, the Adams National Historical Park, and the Boston Landmarks Orchestra for bringing this wonderful event to the people of Quincy," said Mayor William Phelan.

"This is rapidly becoming a Quincy tradition and I strongly encourage resident to join us for an amazing evening. The setting and quality of performance combine to create an unequaled summer concert event."

Prior to the concert, Phelan will host his annual "Garden Part," a fundraiser to benefit tourism efforts in Quincy. Tickets are $100 per person, $150 per couple. Call 617-376-1990 for more information.

The Boston Landmarks Orchestra will feature the classical music of Antonin Dvorak. They will be joined by cellist Jan Muller-Szeraws for the performance at the Adams National Park. Charles Ansbacher is the Conductor of the Boston Landmarks Orchestra.

In the event of inclement weather, the performance will be held in the Quincy High School performance auditorium.

Tickets Still Available For Beechwood Cruise

Tickets are still available for the Beechwood Community Life Center's 10th Annual Harbor Cruise Aug. 9.

Sharron Beals, Executive Director of Beechwood said: "This special Quincy cruise aboard a three decker Boston Harbor Cruise liner can accommodate over 300! This cruise is the only time that a liner this size will depart from Marina Bay dock this summer."

"This August cruise has become a very popular and fun-filled summer event. Last year tickets sold out and we expect the same community response this summer," said Judy Paul, Beechwood Center president. "This is an important fundraiser for our center, and we are grateful for the widespread community support."

Tickets for the cruise can be purchased at Beechwood or from members of the Cruise Committee:

Judy Paul, Jane Gallahue, William Macdonald, Donald Uvanitte, Gwendolyn Bulmer, George Klier, George Dolbec, Nancy Ross, Bill Farrell, Brendan Smith, Caryn Smith, Michael Joyce, Brian Spillane, and Sharron Beals.

The Cruise will be aboard one of Boston Harbor's largest ships departing from and returning to the Marina Bay (MDC) Dock. The three-hour cruise features complimentary food, DJ, and a cash bar. Passengers board at the Marina Bay MCD dock at 6:30 p.m., and the ship departs at 7 p.m. Cost is $30 per person or $50 per couple. Special group rates are available for corporate, business and family friends. Small business groups, family celebrations and neighborhood parties are especially invited.

Tickets can also be purchased at the center, or from members of Beechwood's Development Committee. For more information call 617-471-5712.

Discussion Of Award-Winning 'The Hours' Aug. 11 At Library

The Second Family Book Group will host a discussion of Michael Cunningham's Pulitzer and PEN/Faulkner award-winning novel, The Hours, Friday Aug. 11 at 9:30 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Library, 40 Washington St.

Cunningham draws inventively on the life and work of Virginia Woolf to tell the story of a group of characters struggling with the conflicting claims of love and inheritance, life and death, creation and destruction. The novel moves along three separate but parallel stories, each focusing on the experiences of a particular woman during the course of one apparently unremarkable, but in fact pivotal day.

Nicole Kidman won an Oscar for her portrayal of Virginia Woolf in the film adaptation. If participants would like to watch the film before hand the discussion can also include a comparison of the novel and film.

Copies of the book are available for checkout at the main library in Quincy Square. This book group meets on the second Friday of each month in the children's room at the main library. Parents may bring their children and age-appropriate activities will be available to entertain the children while participants talk.

Art Exhibit To Feature 'Faces Of Forest' Photos

Quincy photographer Suzanne Neville Reynard will present "Faces of the Forest," an exhibit of nature photography during the month of August at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

A public reception will be held Sunday, Aug. 6, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Reynard's elemental images of rocks, trees, logs, plants and water in the forests and marshlands in various local parks reveal the faces of people animals and mythical creatures.

She learned to capture her imagination through the lens of a camera at the Massachusetts College of Arts, where she received a Fine Arts in Photography degree.

A free Introduction to the Internet class will be offered on the fourth Wednesday of each month this summer in the Computer Lab of the Main Library.

The next class scheduled for Aug. 23 at 10 a.m. No advance registration is required.

The class will cover basics such as Web browser features and how to do a Google Web search. You must have experience using a mouse and keyboard.

For further information, call 617-376-1316 or stop by the reference desk on the second floor of the Main Library.

The Japanese anime film "Naruto, Vol. 1" will be presented Thursday, Aug. 10, at 7 p.m. in the Main Library.

The program is intended for adults and teens ages 13 and older and is not suitable for younger audiences.

CYNTHIA ANTONOPOULOS stands at the gateway to her lush garden of pink, purple and blue cottage plants on Manet Avenue in Houghs Neck ready to greet fellow members of the Wollaston Garden Club.

Wollaston Garden Club Members Enjoy Tour

More then 30 members of the Wollaston Garden Club recently toured each others gardens, visiting the Wollaston School's peace garden as well as four others on their annual summer tour.

Organizer Linda DellaCroce planned the event to begin with a visit, led by Diane Foley, to the peace garden created by grade five students on the Highland Avenue side of the Wollaston School.

Then Garden Club members , who each made a contribution to a four-course dinner, proceeded to four different gardens around the city, with a part of the progressive dinner in each garden.

GAIL MORGANELLI shows off the comfortable shade garden that she and her husband have created with shade perennials and annuals in the backyard of their home on Furnace Brook Parkway.

The tour began at Anneli Johnson's house on Garfield Street where some of the garden is constructed on large boulders and is full of summer phlox and raspberries for the picking.

Johnson demonstrated her rain barrel set-up and explained how she recycles rain water in the garden.

The next garden belonged to Gail Morganelli on Furnace Brook Parkway where she and her husband have created a shade garden with perennials and annuals in her backyard.

Morganelli is particularly proud of her pink mallow that was part of a club plant sale with plants harvested fro the Josiah Quincy House.

The third garden was that of Cynthia Antonopoulos. the Massachusetts Horticulture Society's "master gardener," on Manet Avenue, a garden full of plant treasures and pieces of art.

Every nook and cranny is filled with cottage plants like mallow, poppies, veronica. hollyhocks and hydrangeas in all shade of pink purple and blue.

The last garden, the dessert, on the tour was Janet Clifford's seaside garden on Shelton Road. It's new, barely two years old, and landscaped with flowing and curving lines.

Clifford kept two old trees to anchor her garden and has planted traditional garden favorites like sedum, hosta and delphinium.

"As the tour ended," said club spokesman Pat Artis, "Garden Club members reflected on what they had seen and enjoyed. They were remained how much peace, tranquility and beauty comes through gardening and in our many different city gardens."

Joseph, Mary Marchese Celebrate 45th Anniversary

JOSEPH and MARY MARCHESE

The couple was married May 20, 1961 at St. Paul's Church, Dorchester. The anniversary was celebrated with a dinner party in their honor, attended by many family members and friends. Included among the guests were best man Dr. Paul Canney of Hingham, and usher Jack Aylward of Quincy. Also present was the maid of honor, Dr. Theresa Corcoran, and bridesmaid Anna Corcoran, both of Marshfield.

The couple has three children and six grandchildren. They are Michael Marchese and his wife Kathy Marchese, of Hanover, their daughters, Paige and Lindsay Marchese; Joseph C. Marchese and his wife Molly Marchese, of Springfield, GA; and their daughters Katie and Ella; and Molly Mullin and her husband Chris Mullin, of Quincy, and their children Kevin and Rachel Mullin.

Thelma Rice Honored For Service At St. Chrysostom's

Mrs. Thelma Rice, a parishioner at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, was recently honored for serving on the Parish Altar Guild for 48 years, the last seventeen as Directress.

Rice began her ministry in 1958, and stepped down this past January to allow the "younger generation" a chance to share in the experience.

Rice was given a citation from the city by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, and one from State Representative Bruce Ayers for her service and commitment to the community.

Rev. David Hefling, St. Chrysostom's Rector, presented Rice with a bouquet of flowers and a gift certificate from the parish, and wrote a blessing for her which was used during the morning's liturgy.

Nhan Ly Wins Medical Scholarship

Nhan Ly of North Quincy is one of six Boston College High School 2006 graduates who received a scholarship to the prestigious National Youth Leadership Forum in Medicine.

The forum is a summer program in July for honors high school students interested in a career in medicine. The students will spend ten days at a hospital learning about a broad range of medical topics from physicians and medical faculty.

The scholarships, valued at $3,000 each, are sponsored by Mass General Hospital.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1300 students from some 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

For more http://www.bchigh.edu.

The National Youth Leadership Forum on Medicine introduces outstanding high school students to the world of medicine. The 10-day program introduces students to professionals from some of the nation's top medical centers and faculty from renowned institutions of learning.

With close cooperation from many prestigious and technologically advanced hospitals, research facilities and medical schools, the forum challenges students to learn about a broad range of topics, including educational requirements, career options, clinical practice, and complex ethical and legal issues facing the medical profession today. Students discuss global epidemics, cures for life-threatening diseases, life as a resident, medical specialties and primary care with current physicians and patients.

Each program culminates in a simulation that challenges students to consider a specific issue in public health and to present pertinent recommendations for achieving public awareness and concern for each issue.

PAIN IN THE ARCH

Do you feel pain or tenderness in the arch of your foot? A common foot condition, arch pain or strain is often triggered by plantar fasciitis. Other causes include a structural abnormality or a direct injury. Individuals with flat feet who overpronate, or turn their feet inward excessively, are most susceptible to straining the plantar fascia. This thick, fibrous tendon spans the length of the sole of the foot and connects to the heel bone. It can become strained due to overpronation or other types of excessive action. Arch pain, along with heel pain, are primary symptoms of plantar fasciitis, especially in the morning when getting out of bed or after prolonged rest periods.

The first step in treating any foot problem is an accurate diagnosis. This requires a comprehensive history, physical exam, and, in some cases, x-rays and lab tests. Depend on it – whatever is causing your foot pain, whether it's arch pain or an injury, a hereditary condition, or any number of ills that can plague the feet – you can count on us for relief. For family podiatry that combines state of the art technology and old-fashioned care an compassion, call 781-986-3668 for an appointment at 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are now also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: If you have flat feet, wearing customized orthotics to support the arch can help prevent arch pain.

To Benefit Medication Safety Program

Quincy Medical Center Golf Classic Raises $184,000

South Shore business and civic leaders again took to the links on Tuesday, June 27 for the 17th Annual Quincy Medical Center Golf Classic, raising nearly $184,000 to support the advanced, high quality compassionate care at Quincy Medical Center.

Proceeds from this year's Classic specifically will benefit the Medication Safety Program at Quincy Medical Center, a proactive performance improvement initiative to enhance patient care and safety.

Held at Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills in Milton/Quincy, this year's Classic included a sold-out golf tournament, offering players either a Scramble or Best Ball format, as well as a cocktail reception, buffet dinner, raffle drawings, and an awards presentation, held in Granite Links' new clubhouse.

Lead sponsors for the event were:

- Host Sponsor – Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills
- Presenting Sponsor – Mintz Levin Cohn Ferris Glovsky and Popeo, PC
- Dinner Sponsor – Fallon Ambulance Service
- Cocktail Reception Sponsor – South Shore Savings Bank

"Through the long-standing support of our sponsors, Golf Committee members and volunteers, our tournament has become a signature event on the South Shore — raising more than $1 million, over the years, to support the advanced, high quality health care services delivered each day at Quincy Medical Center," said Dr. Gary Gibbons, President and CEO.

Quincy Medical Center is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work side-by-side community physicians to ensure the continuity of care.

Quincy's Christine Foley Commencement Speaker

28 Residents Graduate Fontbonne Academy

Twenty Quincy residents were among the 154 graduates who recently received diplomas at Fontbonne Academy's 49th commencement.

Local graduates are:

Lauren Jennifer Austin, Lauren Elizabeth Barbadoro, Ashley Maria Blake, Catherine Marie Bulka, Nicole Michelle Bulka, Erin Kathleen Cain, Colleen Ann Cleary, Alison Marie Dahlquist, Kaitlin Marie Downing, Shealin T. Doyle, Julianna Elise Eagles, Kelsey Rose Finn, Mary Bridget Flaherty, Christine Elizabeth Foley, Kara Marie Garland, Rachel Marie Gendreau, Jessica Ho, Victoria Papaz Holland, Nina X. Liang, Caitlin Marie McGrath, Kaitlin Erin McGrath, Erin Colleen Noonan, Laura Pepdjonovic, Jennifer Lee Perchard, Lauren Marie Quinn, Danielle Elizabeth Rines, Amy Sandonato, and Laura Ashley Wright.

Among the ceremony's highlights was a speech by Honor Speaker Christine Foley of Quincy. In her address, Foley underscored the diversity of her class and called her fellow graduates to remain true to themselves while facing the challenges that lay ahead for the "modern woman."

"Our diverse personalities and talents are our gifts that we share with each other . . . As a class, our ability to accept one another despite these differences shows strength, maturity and integrity . . . Cherish and embrace diversity, because conforming to society undermines the past four years you spent here at Fontbonne enriching your talents."

Foley closed with a challenge for her fellow classmates: "So embrace your duty to the modern woman . . . I have no doubt in our ability to change the world and make the modern woman the proud, powerful, and beautiful woman that she deserves to be."

Having come together from 35 different cities and towns throughout Massachusetts, Fontbonne Academy's Class of 2006 will disperse to more than 75 different colleges and universities across the United States and beyond.

The 154 young women who make up Fontbonne's Class of 2006 are aspiring toward careers in art, business, communications, education, engineering, law, medicine, technology, and everything in between. Members of this class earned a combined total of upwards of $4.3 million dollars in scholarships and grants and received acceptance letters from institutions of higher education such as Boston College, Boston University, Brown University, Carnegie Mellon University, the College of the Holy Cross, Cornell University, Fairfield University, Fordham University, Harvard University, Hofstra University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Northeastern University, Princeton University, Purdue University, Rutgers University, Seton Hall University, Tufts University, Syracuse University, the University of Notre Dame, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and Yale University, among others.

HONOR SPEAKER Christine Foley of Quincy addressed the hundreds gathered at Fontbonne Academy's 49th Commencement. Foley encouraged her classmates to embrace that which makes them unique and to continue to share their talents with those around them.

Quincy Farmers' Market Celebrates 25 Years

Restaurant owners, caterers and professional and amateur chefs recently attended the first annual "A Taste of the Quincy Farmers' Market" at the Quincy Farmers' Market.

"Our 25th anniversary celebration provided a great opportunity for those interested in the best and freshest foods to talk to local growers about their seasonal offerings," said Anneli Johnson, market manager of the Quincy Farmers' Market. "The Quincy Farmers Market features locally grown fruits, vegetables, herbs, cut flowers, potted perennial and annual plants and herbs, as well as bread and cheese.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Discover Quincy Executive Director Mark Carey, and Quincy 2000 Collaborative Executive Director Dean Rizzo were on hand to offer congratulations to the farmers. Local historian James Cooke spoke about the country's forefathers, local farmers John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and Dr. Wayne Wescott of the South Shore YMCA, a well-known fitness expert, spoke of the importance of eating a variety of fruits and vegetables for optimum health.

Representatives from Almquist Flowerland, Five Loaves Bakery, David Freitas and Sons Farm, Pond Street Perennial and Herb Farm, Serving Ourselves Farm, The Shepherd's Gate Dairy Goat Farm, and Stillman Farm and Greenhouses were on hand to offer tastings and information on this year's products. Chef Charles de Varennes of Quincy's Heritage Cafe grilled market vegetables and made fresh gazpacho for shoppers. Erin Conner of Quincy's Eatin' Healthy restaurant talked to the shoppers about the fruit and vegetable offerings. Julie Loebardt of Quincy's Get Fresh Rotisserie & Grill Restaurant provided two of her own recipes and spoke to shoppers about choosing and preparing fresh food and herbs. Music was provided by the Mancini String Duo.

ANNELI JOHNSON, the guiding spirit behind the Quincy Farmers' Market, receives a City Council citation from Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly in recognition of the 25th anniversary of the weekly Friday market in the John Hancock Parking Lot.

Quincy College To Host Two Fulbright Scholars In Strategic Languages

Quincy College has been awarded a grant from the Institute for International Education (IIE) in New York City to host two Fulbright Foreign Language Teaching Assistants (FLTAs) during the 2006-2007 academic year.

The FLTAs, who are from China and Lebanon, will teach beginning and intermediate courses at Quincy College in Mandarin, Chinese and Arabic, two less-commonly taught strategic languages. The FLTAs will also serve as cultural ambassadors by accompanying students to cultural-enrichment activities in Boston and participating in a Fulbright forum series to be hosted by Quincy College.

The inclusion of these languages at the college serves to help meet both local and national needs.

"Asians now make up almost 20 percent of the Quincy population and this number will continue to grow. Within this diverse group, many of the recent immigrants are from China," said Joseph Bradley, Executive Director of College and Community Development. "We live and work in a global economy and it is important that our students have access to languages that are spoken around the world."

Marsha Frith, Senior FLTA Program Manager, said "Quincy is the only community college in Massachusetts hosting FLTAs."

The college has been listed by the IIE over the last several years as one of the top 40 community colleges nationwide for international enrollments. A number of private colleges such as Boston College, Boston University, Merrimack College, Brandeis University, Tufts University, the Five Colleges, Wheaton College and Williams College are hosting FLTAs in either traditional or strategic languages.

"This is the first year the program has made a serious push to include community colleges," said Frith.

Quincy College currently provides traditional foreign language courses including Spanish French, and Italian, and will begin offering the new Mandarin, Chinese and Arabic courses during the Fall 2006 semester. The tuition for a three credit, language course is $447. To register for the Mandarin, Chinese or Arabic language courses, contact Enrollment Services at 617-984-1650.

How And Where To Keep Cool!

Don't wait until you're thirsty to take a drink. Drink as much as four glasses (32 ounces)an hour if you're active. Coffee, coke and alcoholic beverages will cause you to dehydrate or lose needed body fluids. Ice cold drinks can cause stomach cramps.

Drink a sports beverage, like Gatorade, or take salt pills to replace the salt and minerals you lose by sweating. If you are on a low salt diet, consult your doctor before imbibing the sports drink or salt tablets.

• Avoid rigorous exercise or any form of overexertion.

If you have to work: Try to limit outdoor activity to morning and evening hours. Rest often in the shade. Pace yourself by starting slowly and gradually picking up speed. If exertion makes your heart pound and leaves you breathless, stop all activity.

Wear as little clothing as possible. Choose lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing. Wear a wide-brimmed hat and sun glasses and apply a sunscreen of at least 15 SPF (sun protection factor) a half an hour before going out.

The highest temperature ever recorded officially in the United States was 134 degrees Fahrenheit on July 10, 1913, in a place called Greenland Ranch in the aptly named Death Valley, Calif.

While the temperature of 100 degrees or more was forecast for yesterday (Wednesday), those most concerned with health looked to the heat index, the relation between heat and humidity, which stood at 114 degrees.

That is the time to look for signs of heat stress, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

• Heat stroke, the more serious of the three, is life-threatening and most likely to occur during a heat wave where the humidity is high and temperatures are above 90 degrees for three or more consecutive days.

Symptoms are a sharp rise in body temperature accompanied by possible delirium, disorientation and coma.

A person suffering from heat stroke needs to have his or her body temperature lowered by cooling the body surface with water and be transported to the hospital for treatment without delay.

• Heat exhaustion is identified by severe cramping of the muscles due to excess sweating and loss of salt from the body due to exertion and/or high temperatures.

Victims should rest in a cool place and replenish lost fluids and salts unless he or she is on a low-sodium diet. If untreated, heat exhaustion and lead to heat stroke.

• Heat stress can be recognized by the early warning signs of general discomfort, lack of energy and loss of appetite.

Victims of heat stress, exhaustion and stroke are often the very young, chronically ill and elder citizens who should not ignore the early warning signs. Those who live alone should make sure to contact neighbors, friends and family.

The highest temperature ever recorded officially in Massachusetts was 107 degrees Fahrenheit noted on Aug. 2, 1975, in both Chester in Berkshire County and New Bedford.

Persons at risk in the heat and humidity should employ the buddy system to monitor each other for signs of heat stress and other heat related ailments.

• If you are 65 or older have a friend of relative call to check on you twice a day during a heat wave. If you know someone in this age group, check on him or her at least twice a day.

People of that age may not compensate for heat stress efficiently and are less likely to sense and respond to changes in temperature.

People who are overweight may be prone to heat sickness. People who are physically ill may affected by extreme heat. People who overexert themselves may become dehydrated without becoming aware of it.

• Visit adults at risk at least twice a day and watch them closely for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke. Infants and small children who rely on others to regulate their environment need even more frequent watching.

And above all use common sense.

The hottest place in the world is the Danakil Depression, a desert in Ethiopia, where the average annual temperature is said to be 95 degrees Fahrenheit.

A freak heat wave July 6, 1949, drove the temperature on the coast of Portugal to 158 degrees Fahrenheit for two minutes, then it dropped to a mere 120 degrees. No one has ever been able to explain why.

WJDA/WESX Praised For Community Service

Jay Asher Receives Jack Conway Realtors Lifetime Achievement Award

James D. Asher of South Weymouth, former owner of WJDA in Quincy, and WESX in Salem has been awarded the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Jack Conway & Co. Real Estate firm.

At a recent 50th anniversary awards ceremony at Lombardos in Randolph, Asher received the award for "continuing the tradition of community service through radio broadcasting, started by your father in 1947."

Conway Chairman Jack Conway said he wanted to recognize Asher for taking the reigns of WJDA when his father died in 1973, and continuing to provide the south shore with essential news, information, and entertainment. "You recognized the service the station provided, and kept up the tradition," said Conway.

Asher said he was pleased to accept the award on behalf of all the people who made WJDA such a success for so long.

"We were so fortunate to have people who had that same dedication and commitment to public service that my father envisioned when he founded the station," Asher said.

Former WJDA Program Director Joe Catalano is now Public Relations Director for the Jack Conway Company.

WJDA and WESX in Salem were sold recently to Principle Broadcasting of Connecticut, and are now broadcasting ethnic and religious programming. New studios are located in Chelsea.

The Jack Conway Company of Norwell was founded in Hingham Square in 1956, and runs 45 sales offices from Boston to the South Shore, South Coast, and Cape Cod.

The firm also runs Conway Financial Services, a mortgage company.

Neighborhood Housing Services Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Dedham Institution for Savings, will host a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Aug. 14 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Aug. 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

They will be held at Dedham Institution for Savings, 55 Elm St., Dedham. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend. Participants will have the opportunity to be pre-qualified by a lender.

Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person. There will be refreshments and free gifts. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit neighborhoodhousing.org.

Did You Know?

"Making late payments is really the number-one way that consumers can damage their credit report and credit score," says Chaomei Chen, head of credit risk for the credit card division of Seattle-based Washington Mutual.

"Conversely, making on-time payments is the easiest way to increase a consumer's credit score over time."

INTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

March Ants Out For Good

(NAPS) According to research conducted by the National Pest Management Association, 25 percent of homeowners say ants are their main pest concern.

This same study revealed that more than half of all homeowners have had problems with ants, making them the most prevalent pest nationwide. In addition to being a general nuisance, these bothersome pests can cause significant damage in the home by destroying wood and contaminating food.

Once they've invaded a house, ants are one of the most difficult pests to control. The National Pest Management Association offered five tips to keep them out of a home:

1. In many cases, ants enter a home in search of food. Keep ants out by keeping the kitchen spotless and removing all accessible food sources. Always keep food, especially sweets, in clean, airtight containers. Rinse out recyclable containers, take garbage outside regularly and store it in sealed containers. Be sure to wipe down all countertops frequently with soap and water, and clean up any grease or spills immediately.

2. Avoid leaving pet food dishes out for long periods of time. Create a moat or keep the ants away from pet food by placing the dish inside another shallow, larger dish with an inch of water in it.

3. Caulk and seal all cracks and crevices around the home's foundation that could provide entry from the outside, especially those areas leading to the kitchen where food is prepared. Trim any tree branches and shrubs that touch the outside of the house to prevent ants from gaining access to the house.

4. Eliminate sources of moisture or standing water that may attract ants. It is important to get any plumbing leaks fixed right away.

5. If ants do find their way into the home despite these precautions, and they prove too big a pest to handle, always seek the help of a licensed pest professional. A professional will be able to identify which species of ants are present and can help control the problem.

For more information on ants and how to protect the home, visit www.pestworld.org.

Healthy Bathrooms For Healthy Families

(NAPS) The bathroom is often the busiest room in the house.

According to the experts at the health website WebMD, the average bathroom contains thousands of germs and viruses-ranging from E. coli bacteria to the rhinovirus linked to colds and flu.

Of course, that doesn't mean the bathroom should be feared.

Here are some tips to keep a bathroom clean:

Healthy Smiles:

First off, store each toothbrush properly to ensure keeping it, and its user, as germ-free as possible. Be sure to keep it up on a countertop away from the sink and toilet to prevent airborne contamination from splashing water. Also, do not store toothbrushes together in close quarters (a toothbrush cup in a cabinet, for example). Doing so can increase the odds of germs spreading from brush to brush.

Be sure to regularly change a toothbrush.

Raising The Bar:

Experts also say there is some evidence that liquid soap may be more sanitary than bar soap. Bar soap can hold residue from soap dishes and bacteria from the person who used it last. Also, gentle liquid soaps are ideal for teaching kids proper hand washing techniques. Children should know to wash their hands for about 20 seconds (or as long as it takes them to sing their ABC's) at least four times a day, and always after using the bathroom.

Throw In The Towel:

Bathroom towels should be hung up to dry immediately after use and regularly washed in hot water with detergent. Tide liquid detergent, for example, can help prevent germs from building up and towels from smelling musty. It may be beneficial to limit the amount of towel sharing in a house. Encourage each family member to use his or her own towel.

Deck Care 101

(NAPS) When it comes to outdoor living spaces, people are moving their living areas outside, making decks more popular than ever.

And now Sherwin-Williams can help people spend more time enjoying their deck and less time caring for it. For those trying to breathe new life into an old wood deck, a new technology just introduced by Sherwin-Williams can revive even seriously weathered wood. DeckScapes Coating Life Extender literally binds loose wood fibers to form a sound, smooth surface that creates a better bond for the topcoat. It penetrates deep into the wood to provide UV and weather protection. Not only will the wood look better, the protective finish will last longer as well.

Before applying any protective coatings, be sure to remove dirt and mildew using a cleaner designed for deck use. After cleaning the deck, Life Extender is easily applied with a brush or roller. Approximately four hours later, apply a topcoat, such as DeckScapes Waterborne semi-transparent or solid color stain, for a finish that will look new for years.

For those with a new deck, start with Life Extender for the best possible protection. Life Extender is also ideal for cedar and redwood decks.

Here's a tip from the trade: For those who want the wood grain of the deck to show, choose a semitransparent stain. For more durability without making the grain show, go with a solid-color stain. Products designed for deck use will beautify and protect outdoor rooms for a long time when used correctly.

Patrick To Host Community Meeting Here Saturday

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Deval Patrick will host a community meeting with South Shore residents Saturday at 12 noon at the Quincy Suns of Italy Social Center, 120 Quarry St.

Patrick will discuss his vision for leading Massachusetts. He will speak and answer citizens' questions in an open forum. He will take questions from voters on a wide range of issues, including health care, the economy, and education.

Patrick, a Milton resident, held the top civil rights post in President Clinton's Justice Department, and served as general counsel and a senior executive at Coca-Cola and Texaco. He has also been a partner at two Boston law firms and lawyer for the NAACP's Legal Defense & Education Fund.

Patrick says his campaign has over 5,000 volunteers and has raised more than $3.7 million, including more than $800,000 in donations raised through the campaign's website, www.devalpatrick.com.

Residents in the Quincy area who wish to volunteer to work with Patrick's campaign at the local level can contact City Councillor Jay Davis, a local Deval Patrick coordinator (617-594-0640), or School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney at 617-479-2046, or call the campaign's main office at 617-367-2006.

$5M From State For Downtown

The House of Representatives voted 133-21 and the Senate voted 35-2 in favor of overriding the Governor's veto, he said.

The legislative delegation also acknowledged the efforts of Quincy Planning Director Dennis Harrington and Mayor William Phelan, who oversee the downtown redevelopment project. The legislative delegation worked closely with Harrington on presenting a strong case to give Quincy a direct appropriation.

"Director Harrington's knowledge and insight has been invaluable to both the legislative delegation and the legislative committees that were reviewing this $5 million project," Morrissey said.

In Tribute To Mother, Paul Harold

McDermott To Ride In Pan-Mass Challenge Aug. 5-6

Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott will join more than 4,000 cyclists from 37 states to ride in the 27th annual Pan Mass Challenge, pedaling to raise $24 million and surpass an overall funding total of $145 million.

The PMC is a 194-mile mike ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown to be held the weekend of Aug. 5-6. McDermott will leave Sturbridge at 6 a.m. Saturday morning, making his 15th year ride to Bourne, where he'll spend the night at the Mass Maritime Academy.

Sunday morning the group will ride throughout Cape Cod to Provincetown. The PMC is the largest single fundraiser for the Jimmy Fund of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. The efforts have saved lives and resulted in cancer research breakthroughs.

McDermott's participation in the PMC serves especially as a way to honor the memory of his late mother, Patricia, who died from cancer in December of 1989.

"My mother inspired me in so many ways to never take life for granted and to look for ways to help others in need," he said. "Even though she lost her personal battle with cancer, her faith served as a beacon of hope for so many others who wait for a cure. I look forward to the day when we can refer to cancer as a disease of the past."

PATRICK McDERMOTT

McDermott, a former Quincy City Councillor, also pays a personal tribute each year to his friend and political mentor, Paul D. Harold, former state senator, city council president, and Register of Deeds, who lost his own battle with the disease in 2002 after having been a patient at Dana Farber.

McDermott recalls one of his last visits with Harold: "He was tired but full of faith and words of wisdom. Then he presented me with a check for the PMC and told me I was doing a great service for the people of Dana Farber. I'm proud to dedicate a portion of my ride each year to Paul."

Today the PMC raises more money than any other athletic charity event in the country.

McDermott also says he is mindful of other friends and family members who have fought or are fighting the battle against cancer.

"Cancer does not discriminate," he said. "It affects people of all ages, races, and socio-economic scales. I unfortunately have seen first-hand the devastating effects this disease has on families. I just want to try to do my part to see the day when we can declare a full victory over this disease."

Throughout his participation in the PMC, McDermott has raised over $50,000 for the Dana Farber Cancer Institute. In order to participate, each rider must raise a minimum of $3,300.

Anyone wishing to help the cause by sponsoring McDermott in this year's ride, may visit the PMC's website at www.pmc.org to make an online gift (eGifts) or checks can be made payable to "PMC/Jimmy Fund" and forwarded to McDermott at 194 Federal Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

McDermott will also host a reception on Thursday, Aug. 3 at the Waterclub at Marina Bay from 6 p.m. - 8 p.m.

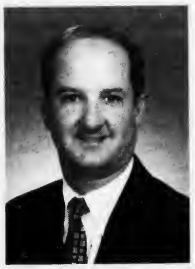
Vicker DiGravio, III MHSACM Executive V.P.

Vicker "Vic" DiGravio III, of Quincy, will join the Mental Health and Substance Abuse Corporations of Massachusetts, Inc. (MHSACM) as Executive Vice President, effective this October.

DiGravio will be responsible for the direction and management of public policy and strategy for the organization.

MHSACM Chairman Ellen Attaliades, CEO of The Edinburg Center said, "Vic has more than 15 years of public policy and political strategy experience. He brings an understanding of strategic management and public sector leadership that will help ensure our continued strength and evolution in the coming years."

DiGravio, most recently was Chief of Staff to Senate Majority Leader Frederick Berry, serving as senior policy and political adviser and directing the office's legislative and public affairs agenda. Previously, he served as Easter Seals Massachusetts' Director of Public Affairs. He has a Master's in Public Administration from Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, and an undergraduate degree from Connecticut College. DiGravio and his wife Karen reside in Quincy with their two children, Anna and Vicker.



VIC DiGRAVIO

"MHSACM is committed to a vision of health care that ensures access to quality, affordable behavioral health services for those who need them," said Elizabeth Funk, President/CEO. "Vic DiGravio brings key leadership skills that will help our organization enhance the capabilities and collaborative relationships needed to fulfill this mission."

"I am pleased to be joining MHSACM and look forward to collaborating with members and other health care stakeholders to improve the prominence of behavioral health in the larger health care system," DiGravio said. "I am excited about working to capitalize on the organization's many strengths to enhance the quality, value and accessibility of mental health and substance abuse services for the people of Massachusetts."

MHSACM is a statewide association representing more than 100 community-based mental health and substance abuse service provider organizations, and its members are the primary providers of mental health and substance abuse treatment and services in Massachusetts. Member providers and their 20,000 dedicated employees provide clinically effective care to 117,000 individuals on any given day.

Scam Alert!

Beware of mail solicitation from "Financial Trust Services" of Canada with an enclosed letter of "Winning Final Notification" in the DE-LOTTO North American Sweepstakes.

The letter states you have won $250,000 U.S. Dollars, but you must first pay $2,950 for the government taxes, to be paid through Western Union.

The letter is addressed to "Sir/Madam." This should be the first indicator this notification is not legitimate, that someone winning such a large amount is not even addressed by name.

Another indicator would be whether you ever entered the sweepstakes — you can't win if you don't play.

These scams are conducted because they work often enough people to be profitable. Offers from out of the country should also raise caution flags as to the legitimacy of an organization.

A Job Well Done

On July 13, at approximately 10:32 p.m., Officer Steve Elmes was on routine patrol in the area of Ricciuti Drive when he observed two vehicles parked next to each other facing opposite directions.

LT. DAN MINTON

Since the vehicles were in violation of signs posted, "No Parking After Dusk," he approached the vehicles and found one vehicle was empty and the second vehicle had two males sitting in the front.

As Elmes advised them of the infraction and asked for identification, he noted furtive gestures made by them, namely one occupant "biting his fingernail and looking around" while the other "would not make eye contact with" the officer.

After Elmes determined one occupant was from Quincy and the other from Foxboro, he asked what they were doing there. Suspect No. 1 nervously said they were not doing anything, adding, "You can search my car."

Elmes began to walk back to his cruiser to verify their information when suspect No. 2 jumped out of the passenger seat. He was told to get back into the vehicle but kept heading to his car, stating he was going to leave.

Elmes, concerned now that he had two suspects separated in two vehicles, backed his cruiser up to create a safety zone. Just as he was about to call for assistance, Sergeant Patrick Faherty arrived on scene.

At this time, Elmes approached suspect No. 2 and asked if he could search his car. Suspect No. 2 said, "I have nothing in my car. You can search it if you want." As soon as Elmes entered the car he detected the odor of marijuana and opened a shoe box and found a plastic baggy with marijuana in it.

Faherty pat frisked suspect No. 2 and found a large sum of money in his pants. The search of suspect No. 2's car revealed four gallon-size freezer bags of marijuana in the trunk. Elmes also found three cell phones and a black ledger containing drug sales information.

Once suspect No. 2 was handcuffed, Elmes asked suspect No. 1 if he could still search his car and the suspect gave permission, stating he had nothing to hide. The search showed two cell phones, a lap top computer, two magazines of ammunition (40 cal.) and a carrying case for a handgun. Between the front seats was another ledger, bank statements and a withdrawal of $2,000. Suspect No. 1 said the gun was at a friend's house.

Based upon all the information at hand, suspect No. 1, a 26-year-old Foxboro resident, and suspect No. 2, a 25-year-old Rockland resident, were charged with "Conspiracy to Violate Controlled Substance laws," "Possession of Class D Substance with Intent to Distribute," and "Selling a Controlled Substance in or Near a Park."

Both suspects were transported to the station for booking, where additional monies were found on suspect No. 2, for a total of $4,601. During booking, both suspects gave false addresses and, therefore, were held until positive identification was determined.

Based on the investigation conducted by Elmes, Detective Mike Ward followed up on the case by obtaining a search warrant for suspect No. 1's savings account at a local bank, "freezing" the $190,396 for further court proceedings. Nice work!

Looking Good in Sleeveless Shirts

Q. I would like to wear sleeveless shirts, but they make me feel uncomfortable because my arms have NO muscle tone. What exercises can I do to tone my arm muscles so I can wear a tank top?

A. Many exercisers list toned arm muscles when setting their fitness goals. The appearance of strong, lean and toned muscles can be achieved through a comprehensive exercise program that not only focuses on appearance, but also stability, muscle balance and function.

The muscles most people want to tone are the triceps (back of the arm), biceps (front of the arm) and deltoids (shoulders). Each of these muscle groups must work properly for you to achieve maximum function, strength and stability. Although your goal may be to tone your arms, an exercise program that targets the entire body will help you reach that goal.

As you probably know, you cannot get results by spot training and targeting your workout just for the arms. Fortunately, we use our arms while working other muscle groups such as the chest and back, so although you are not focusing on the arms, they have to work in order to complete those exercises.

Great exercises for the arms include bicep curls, triceps extensions and shoulder raises. These exercises can be done with dumbbells, resistance bands, body weight or exercise machines. Be patient when trying new exercises, and complete sets and repetitions that will allow you to progress as you get stronger.

Don't forget that exercises such as push-ups, pull-ups, chest press and rows also require the arm muscles to work, even though they are not isolated just to the arms. Exercises for your lower body might seem to have nothing to do with your arms, but they can help lower your body fat and increase your overall lean muscle mass.

Give yourself several weeks to see results and maintain a consistent exercise regime. Try not to overtrain in trying to reach your goals, and allow your body recovery time in between higher intensity workouts.

Remember nutrition and other positive lifestyle choices are important for your body to get you into sleeveless shirts in no time.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Skin Aging? Slow Down The Process

(NAPS) It's no secret that our society is obsessed with looking young. As baby boomers turn 60, statistics show the U.S. market for anti-aging products and services is "growing at an average growth rate (AAGR) of 9.5 percent. This market will reach nearly $72 billion by 2009."

While science has made advancements in both topical and minimally invasive cosmetic procedures, certain lifestyle factors, such as smoking, sleep loss and sun exposure, can unknowingly sabotage personal aesthetic goals.

Although natural aging is a given, inherited by our genes, we do have control over extrinsic aging. Known as premature aging, it is caused by poor lifestyle habits that actually accelerate skin aging, including wrinkles, rough texture and uneven pigmentation.

According to leading dermatologist Jeannette Graf, current research reveals that the following dynamics accelerate the skin's aging process.

• Sun exposure: No surprise here. The sun does not do a complexion good. From basic dryness to a high risk of melanoma and other skin cancers, UV rays cause daily damage to skin. "Wearing a high SPF sunscreen every day is the one product I recommend to all of my patients," said Graf.

• Smoking: Another culprit that robs skin of its health, smoking not only directly damages the fibers that provide elasticity and support, causing skin to prematurely wrinkle and droop, but it also decreases the flow of both blood and vital nutrients to the skin's surface, leaving it dry and crinkled looking.

• Diet: What people put in their body is just as important as what they put on, said Graf. A high-fiber diet rich in antioxidant fruits and vegetables will result in a healthier and more radiant complexion. Bottom line: Limit alcohol and cola consumption, which depletes the body of its nutrients, and add more wholesome foods, such as lean proteins, fruits, green leafy vegetables, and plenty of fresh water.

• Sleep loss: While sleep deprivation is known to cause weight gain and loss of mental concentration, it also affects skin health by robbing it of its precious rejuvenation time. During slumber, the skin, as well as the body, undergoes a period of revitalization. Loss of sleep interrupts this phase, imparting the telltale signs, such as dark under-eye circles, and dry, flaky complexion.

Aging is inevitable, but people may make small efforts to keep from speeding it along. Getting a good night's sleep, eating a healthful diet and using sun protection each day is a good way to keep both skin (and body) looking young and vibrant.

A Sleepless Nation 70 Million Strong

By LISA CLAVIS

(NAPS) A new report by the National Academies' Institute of Medicine shows that between 50 and 70 million Americans struggle with chronic sleep problems, and according to the United States Surgeon General, sleep deprivation and disorders cost the nation $15 billion in health care expenses and $50 billion in lost productivity each year.

A lack of sleep can take a toll both psychologically and physically, from daytime sleepiness to weakened immune systems. Long-term sleep deprivation leads to problems that can include memory lapses, depression, irritability and impaired work performances.

To win the battle over sleepless nights, many Americans are turning to medication. In 2005, 42 million prescriptions for sleeping pills were filled. An analysis by Medco Health Solutions, Inc. found that the number of adults ages 20 to 44 using sleeping medications rose 128 percent between 2000 and 2005, and was up 114 percent among 10 to 19-year-olds in that same time period.

Insomnia is the most common sleep disorder, affecting between 30 and 40 percent of adults within a given year. Other sleep disorders include sleep apnea: a temporary suspension of breathing that occurs throughout the night, and restless leg syndrome: which is characterized by intense discomfort, mostly felt in the legs when at rest. One of the first steps to relieving sleep problems is to talk to a doctor or pharmacist about it.

Here are some tips for insomniacs:

• Keep to a regular sleep schedule: Go to sleep and wake up at about the same time each day, even on weekends.

• Exercise regularly: Exercise done early in the day can reduce stress and help to sleep at night.

• Watch eating and drinking habits: Avoid alcohol, caffeine and meals close to bedtime, but a cup of warm milk can help make a person sleepy.

• Unplug: This is particularly important for teens with sleep problems. Make sure the bedroom is free of computers, video games, TVs and phones.

Sleep troubles can be a symptom of physical or psychological condition that requires treatment, so it's important to see a doctor if sleep problems persist.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DENTAL ASSESSMENT FOR CANCER PATIENTS

Patients who are scheduled to undergo radiation therapy for head and neck cancer are advised to meet first with a dentist for a pre-treatment dental assessment. This suggestion is made on the basis of the fact that radiation therapy is associated with an increased incidence of such adverse long-term side effects as dry mouth, inflammation of mucus membranes, and dental caries. In order to minimize the incidence and effect of these potential problems, patients will want to undergo a dental assessment to identify existing conditions that require treatment. The healthier the teeth and oral tissues of a cancer patient, the better able he or she will be able to withstand radiation therapy.

Let us help you with answers to your questions about a pre-treatment dental assessment. Our dental team is committed to performing to his or her highest ability in order to achieve the optimum level of care. We believe that with preventive dental care, daily brushing and flossing, and a well-balanced diet, people can maintain their teeth and gums in good health well into their later years. Let us help you keep that dazzling smile. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Prior to radiation therapy, patients should be well versed in optimum oral self-care methods.

Special Tribute To Patrick White At 7:30 P.M.

Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament Opens Friday At Adams Field

The sixth annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament will pay a special tribute to the late Patrick White at the opening ceremony Friday night at 7:30 at Adams Field.

Patrick played many years in Quincy Youth Baseball and most recently in the Babe Ruth League. He battled rhabdomysarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, for more than six years.

PATRICK T. WHITE

During that time, Patrick helped raise money for The Jimmy Fund and spent time visiting and supporting other young cancer patients at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. He died last November at age 15.

The tournament, which features players ages 15 and under, will begin with a game Friday at 2:30 p.m. There will be games all day and evening Saturday and Sunday. The championship game will be played Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

There are 10 teams participating, including four all-star squads comprised of Quincy players. Other teams are from Cedar Grove, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hanover and Scituate. There is no admission and all are welcome to attend.

Funds raised will benefit the Pediatric Solid Tumor Program within Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care Services.

Those interested in making a contribution can contact Bob Griffin, tournament co-director, at 617-472-4811, or mail the contribution to Bob Griffin, 4 Avon Way, Quincy, MA 02169. Make checks payable to The Jimmy Fund/QYBL.

Pat Jaehnig, Steve Sullivan On Westfield Baseball Team

Quincy residents Pat Jaehnig and Steve Sullivan were contributing members of the Westfield State College baseball team that finished the 2006 season with a 16-20 record.

Jaehnig, a senior first baseman, batted .298 in 35 games and led the Owls with 18 RBI and ranked second with 34 hits, including six doubles and a home run.

The Archbishop Williams graduate committed only two errors in 274 chances for a .993 fielding percentage.

Sullivan, a 6-3, 220-pound right-handed pitcher, played a pivotal role in more than half of his team's victories as a freshman. He recorded six saves as the closer and compiled a 3-2 record as a spot starter.

PAT JAEHNIG

STEVE SULLIVAN

The Quincy High School graduate appeared in 14 games and pitched 32 innings with 21 strikeouts and a 4.78 ERA.

21 Participate In Soccer Outreach League

Twenty-one new soccer players got their initiation into the world's game this past spring as participants of The Outreach Program for Soccer (TOPS) league held Sunday afternoons at Pageant Field.

Co-sponsored by Quincy Youth Soccer (QYS) and the Massachusetts Youth Soccer Association (MYSA), Quincy's soccer league for special needs players began in April for children ages 5 to 14.

The program was initiated by QYS past President Malcolm MacNeil. After serving 21 years as president, MacNeil stepped aside as head of league operations last summer and assumed the post of community outreach director for the league.

"MYSA initiated the TOPS program a couple of years ago and covers expenses associated with the program, but it's up to local organizations to bring the program to their town," he said.

"Even though we have an in-house program for more than a thousand kids, and a travel program of more than 300 players, there were players in the community we weren't reaching. I knew there were kids who wanted to play but Quincy didn't have an outlet for them."

During weekly sessions, TOPS All-Stars worked on learning new skills associated with playing the game of soccer, as well as learning to work together in pairs and small groups. Each session ended with a high-spirited game with multiple goals and lots of smiles.

Serving as head coach of the program was Robin Franceschini, former Quincy High School and Cambridge Rindge and Latin varsity girls soccer coach.

"Robin came to our first meeting with the parents to get some information for a neighbor who couldn't attend," MacNeil said. "Even though she didn't have a child in the program, she came up to me afterward and said, 'I have some ideas to help with drills and games.' She's been a tremendous resource of knowledge and enthusiasm. The kids just love her."

TOPS will continue in Quincy with a second season this fall and hopes to attract more players and possibly fuel interest in neighboring South Shore communities. Currently, there are TOPS programs in Hingham, Bridgewater and Sandwich. MacNeil stated the program is actively seeking more players and more volunteers.

"We are really in need of volunteer junior coaches," he said. "Ideally, we'd have one coach-buddy per player. I'd strongly encourage high school-age players and former players who want to get involved to get in touch with the league. The rewards are indescribable."

Players from ages 5 to 16 with any type of special needs are welcome to participate. More information for players and potential junior coaches is available by contacting Quincy Youth Soccer at 617-472-9033 or visiting the league's Web site (quincyyouthsoccer.com).

HOW'S THIS FOR STARTERS?

If a turn of the key fails to start a vehicle's engine, most people will focus on the battery. If the battery is fully charged, concern is then likely to turn to the starter or starter solenoid. Mounted to the starter, the starter solenoid is a large coil that converts energy into linear motion by virtue of a plunger that engages the starter. Thus, a faulty solenoid may be responsible for a "no crank" situation. Otherwise, the starter brushes may be worn. In such cases, the starter solenoid may be heard to click but the starter will fail to turn. Tapping on the starter housing may reposition the brushes to allow a few more starts, but repair is inevitable.

Starting your car is the first step to a good drive. Preventative maintenance, performed by LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, is one way to ensure that your car will also start, and preventative measures performed now will save you money during the life of your car. If you are having problems with the battery, alternator, or starter come to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree or call 781-843-1550. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Prolonged engagement of the starter can lead to heat-related damage.

Quincy's Billy Allen To Compete In World Hydroplane Championship

In the midst of a successful assault on the Professional Racing Outboard (PRO) Division in the United States, Billy Allen of Quincy will make his first move to the world level.

Allen will compete in the 125cc World Hydroplane Championship Aug. 25-26 in Auronzo, Italy, where motor sports are a highly regarded and recognized institution.

A second generation race driver from Squantum, Allen got his start in the Stock and Modified ranks of the sport, competing for more than 20 years and earning scores of national titles, national high-point titles and world records.

A five-time national champion and five-time high point winner (best points average), Allen earned the Paul Kalb Award for accumulating the most points in one modified outboard class in a single season three consecutive times. In addition, he earned the Jerry Waldman Award twice for the most points earned in stock outboard all classes.

He set a world speed record in 2003 for the three-mile, three-lap course in B Modified Hydro and broke his own record two years later. Allen was inducted twice into the American Power Boat Association Hall of Champions before moving up to the PRO division three years ago.

BILLY ALLEN of Quincy will participate in the 125cc World Hydroplane Championship Aug. 25-26 in Auronzo, Italy. He is the two-time defending USA National Champion in the Professional Racing Outboard Division.

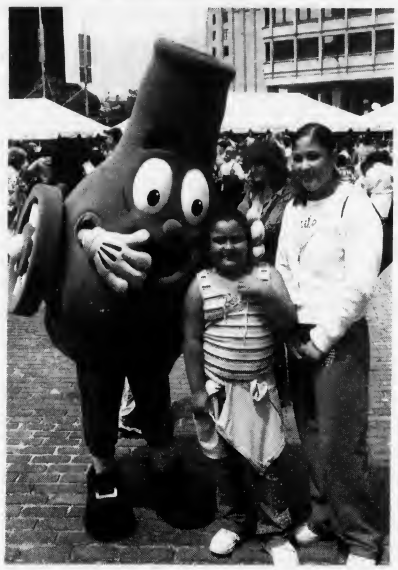
In his first trip to the USA PRO National Championship in 2003, Allen competed in the scrappy OSY 400 class, the most competitive class in the PRO division. He took home an impressive second-place finish and never looked back, claiming the national title in 2004 and 2005.

Allen's grandfather, Ramsey Allen of Quincy, was the first Mercury outboard dealer in New England. Billy's father, Bill "Racer" Allen, also of Quincy, raced for more than 30 years and was inducted into the Hall of Champions in 1982. Billy started racing in 1974 when he was 13 years old.

Every summer weekend he packs his trailer and hits the road to such racing venues as Standish, Maine; Millville, N.J.; Norwood, N.Y.; Lock Haven, Pa.; and Depue, Ill.

In his most recent competition at the Northeast U.S. Divisional Championships July 8-9 in Thompson, Conn., Allen took home the Divisional title in C Stock Hydro, the most competitive class in the country. This automatically qualified him for the national finals held Monday in Wakefield, Mich.

Allen also won two PRO division classes in Thompson (125cc and 250cc). Although not Divisional titles, these races served as a tune-up for the USA PRO Nationals that were held last Wednesday in Depue.



HAVING A BLAST - Tiara and Ariel Harvey of Quincy are greeted by Boomer, the beloved Boston Cannons mascot at the 24th Annual Scooper Bowl held recently in City Hall Plaza, Boston. Youth also lined up to test their skills in the Boston Cannons' lacrosse shot contest for a chance to win a pair of free tickets to a Boston Cannons game. The Scooper Bowl is an annual three-day event that dishes out nearly 10 tons of ice cream to nearly 30,000 participants. The event has raised nearly $1.7 million over the past 23 years for cancer care and research at the world-renowned Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Quincy Legion Looks Forward To Next Year

The Quincy American Legion baseball team endured tough challenges this past season both on and off the field.

Quincy, which made the playoffs the previous season, lost 16 games, including nine by two runs or less and another by forfeit.

However, Quincy concluded its season on a high note by defeating second-place Braintree, 6-4, for its second victory of the year. It also edged Braintree, 5-4, earlier in the season.

It truly was a "senior night" as several graduating players contributed to the victory.

Co-captain Drew Loud powered the offense with three hits and three RBI. The shortstop also made a fielding gem, leaping high into the air to spear a liner and quell a Braintree rally. Pitcher Dean Sandonato tossed a complete-game victory. Co-captain John Fitzgerald, a second baseman, and first baseman Matt Tobin each added an RBI.

Returning catcher Kevin Bossart knocked in a run, Jared Kenny collected two hits, and Tom Power and Steve Matos hit safely.

Many changes are taking place in the offseason as Quincy's upgrade is in full gear.

Quincy added nine rookies to this year's roster who gained valuable playing time and experience which should bode well for next season. They included Matt Jaehnig, Mike Jay, Mike Le Bel, Dave Guerriero, Glen Misho, Jay Lewis, Steve Matos, Steve Kussman and Doug Melanson.

Coach Lenny Seitz announced the team has added the services of pitching coach Tom Malvesti for the offseason. Malvesti is highly regarded as a top-notch pitching coach who has many years of successful experience with the Morrisette and Milton Legion teams.

"Tom is a much welcomed addition to our team," Seitz said. "He will be a shot in the arm for our staff, especially our young pitchers."

"We had a tough year both on and off the field," he added. "That won't happen again. We look forward to next year."

Wollaston I Narrowly Misses Playoffs

Senior Babe Ruth

Wollaston I came up short in its quest to make the playoffs in the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth baseball league.

With the winner advancing to the first round, Wollaston I (7-8-1) suffered a 12-11 setback to South Boston last Monday at King Field.

Wollaston I jumped out to an early lead as John Orlando, Paul Doolan, Joe Griffin, Steve Matos and Wendell Cosgrove each had two hits.

South Boston came charging back to take the lead in the fourth inning. Joe Cuervals came in relief and held the potent South Boston attack in check for the rest of the game, but Wollaston couldn't regain the lead.

The Garden Bug

Poison ivy

This tree-climbing vine contains urushiol oil, a powerful irritant. Skin that contacts any part of this plant will break out in viciously itchy rashes that are very difficult to relieve. Remember the saying: "leaflets three, let it be".

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A misunderstanding tests the temperament of the sometimes headstrong Aries. Instead of blowing your top, take time for a pleasant diversion while things cool down.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A workplace problem could make the divine Bovine see red. But talk it out before you consider walking out. Some surprising facts emerge that change your earlier focus.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You face a choice between ignoring your uneasy feelings about your relationship with that special person and demanding explanations. A close friend offers wise counsel.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change you'd been hoping for carries an unexpected complication. Stay the course, and things will work themselves out. Be sure to make time for family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Aspects favor spending time with loved ones. On the job, new ideas are generally welcomed. But some demands for changes could cause problems. Be ready to defend your choices.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: That workplace problem is close to being resolved with results that should please everyone. Take time off to indulge your love of fun and games.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Most of the time you are the most unflappable person around. But be ready to be thrown off-balance in the nicest way when Cupid takes aim in your direction.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's not often when someone tries to "sting" the sharp-witted Scorpion. But it can happen. Continue to be skeptical about anything that seems too good to be true.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your strong sense of self-esteem helps you serve as a role model for someone who needs personal reassurances. Your efforts pay off in an unexpected way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close considers revealing a painful secret. Withhold judgment. Instead, open your generous heart, and offer dollops of your love and understanding.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your talents as a peacemaker are called upon once more as an old problem re-emerges with new complications. Move cautiously in order to avoid falling into hidden traps.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your artistic side is enhanced with the reception given to your new project. Use this success as encouragement toward fulfilling your larger goals.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your natural sense of leadership is combined with a deep sense of responsibility. People trust you to give them both guidance and understanding.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that worry, like a rocking chair, will give you something to do, but it won't get you anywhere. . .

Psychologists tell us that 80% of the things worried about never happen. It is said a good way to reduce worry is to write down the worst that could happen and see if the thing or things you worry about actually happen. It is claimed that facing the fact in this way can help you reduce worry. Maybe so. But, sadly, some people simply cannot face facts.

Yet, there is a way for everyone to overcome most worrying. Worrying is negative thinking . . . Replace such thoughts with positive thinking. The best positive thinking the world has ever heard of is the 23rd Psalm . . . "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." . . . Believe it. Keep on believing it . . . Millions of people have proved it true.

ARC Of The South Shore Names Claudia Cuscianna Development Coordinator

Claudia Cuscianna of Quincy has been named development coordinator of The ARC of the South Shore, announces Executive Director David C. Calhoun.

Cuscianna will be instrumental in increasing donor support to The Arc of the South Shore, which provides advocacy, support, training and services to more than 1,500 South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities each year. She will oversee all donor giving programs, as well as the Annual Fund and grant writing, while also recruiting and supporting all volunteers and memberships.

CLAUDIA CUSCIANNA

Cuscianna has more than seven years of experience in the fundraising industry. Prior to joining The Arc of the South Shore, she worked in Donor Relations at Partners Home Care in Rockland. She was also a corporate membership officer at the Museum of Science in Boston, and a membership and educational program officer at the Smaller Business Association of New England in Waltham.

Cuscianna is also a current member of Women in Development.

She said she joined The Arc of the South Shore based on the organization's constant support of its members, their families and the communities it serves.

Cuscianna received a B.A. in political science and history from Curry College in Milton. She also received her French diplomacy and translations certificate from Ecole Lemania, Lausanne, Switzerland.

In her spare time, Cuscianna is a volunteer at the Pine Street Inn, the Museum of Science and the Japan Society in Boston. She enjoys swimming, horseback riding and spending time with her husband, Manny, and their two-year-old daughter, Avelina.

The Arc of the South Shore, located in Weymouth, MA, is a 501(c) (3) non-profit organization, serving people of all ages. The Arc of the South Shore has been working since 1951 to provide advocacy and support to children and adults with mental retardation and developmental disabilities and their families.

For more information on The Arc of the South Shore, call 781-335-3023 or visit www.arcsouthshore.org.

Contract Awarded

QSD Sewer 2nd Phase To Start

The contract to complete the second major phase of the sewer rehabilitation project along Quincy Shore Drive has been awarded and the project should begin in the next 30 days, Mayor William Phelan announces.

The project will primarily reline the existing sewer line along Quincy Shore Drive from Bayfield Road to Williams Street in North Quincy. There will be some areas where the sewer pipe will be replaced but the project will largely entail relining of the existing pipe.

Work will begin in September and is expected to proceed through 2007.

"We have seen improvements since Phase I and I hope to continue our progress toward a cleaner Wollaston Beach," Phelan said. "Though a complex problem, there are steps we can take that may help improve the water quality, the overall condition of the beach and the level of enjoyment that our residents can realize at this beautiful location."

DSS Agrees To Review Slashed DOVE Budget

By TOM HENSHAW

Harry Spence, the commissioner of Social Services (DSS), has agreed to review state cuts in the budget for DOVE, which would close the city's shelter for battered women and children on Oct. 1.

Sen. Michael Morrissey said Spence made the promise at a meeting Tuesday that included Cong. Bill Delahunt and Jean Marie Carroll, director of domestic violence in the Norfolk DA's office.

It was disclosed last week that DSS had wiped out its annual contribution of $250,000 to the $600,000 budget of DOVE which served some 275 victims of domestic violence last year.

Morrissey said Spence suggested to them that DOVE was cut from the DSS budget because it scored the lowest in the state in request for proposals.

"He said DOVE had a troubled past and had been given a lot of chances to shape up," he said. "The troubled past included the changeover in managers that interfered with the stability."

Delahunt, who was one of the founders of DOVE when he was Norfolk DA, was troubled to learn how little assistance DOVE got from the DSS, said Morrissey.

"What have you done for them?" he asked.

Spence was told that Stephanie Flaherty, the new

Don't Forget Sales Tax Holiday

Take it from Sen. Michael Morrissey, the Sales Tax Holiday this weekend is more than just another political gimmick in an election year.

"It's a 'thank you' to the citizens of the Commonwealth for continuing to shoulder the burden of increased household expenses, while at the same time having the opportunity to bolster our economy," he said.

"The Legislature renewed its commitment to the citizens of the Commonwealth with the reinstitution of the Sales Tax Holiday and the institution of the Commuter Tax Credit."

A similar summer Sales Tax Holiday in 2005 netted merchants more than $500 million in sales so the Legislature again designated two days, Saturday, Aug. 12, and Sunday, Aug. 13, as sales tax free.

"Most purchases under $2,500 will be tax free, though items like boats and cars, and meals and gasoline will still be taxable," said Morrissey.

The Commuter Tax Credit came through as an amendment to the state's fiscal 2007 budget which originally allowed only those who commuted by bus or subway to deduct part of the cost.

Morrissey sponsored an amendment that added users of the commuter boats and commuter trains to make the same deduction. The amendment was adopted in the final budget.

Under the amendment, commuter boat and rail users will be able to deduct $750 a year on their state income tax.

$100,000 For Merrymount Park Restoration

Surviving a veto by Gov. Mitt Romney, the city has received $100,000 from the state to continue the work of restoring Merrymount Park to its original design.

"This extensive restoration project highlights the historic character of this important natural resource and also meets the practical needs of our community," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

The Quincy legislative delegation had the $100,000 earmarked in the state's supplemental budget but it was vetoed by Romney. The House and Senate voted last week to override the veto.

"I am just happy my colleagues saw the unique opportunity before us and joined us in overriding the Governor's veto," said Rep. Stephen Tobin.

"Even in lean economic times," said Rep. Bruce Ayers, "this is the second year we've been able to secure state funding to help with the restoration."

Merrymount Park was designed by the noted architect Frederick Law Olmsted, the father of landscape design, who also created Boston Emerald Necklace of parklands.

It is his original vision of the park that the city is attempting to restore.

City Council Urges DSS To Find Way To Keep DOVE Open

The City Council is urging the Department of Social Services (DSS) to find a way for DOVE, the city's shelter for domestically abused women and children to remain open.

DSS for the past 20 years has funded approximately $250,999 a year to DOVE but doesn't plan to for next year.

The cut represents a little less than one half of the facility's budget for one year. DOVE operates on a budget of approximately $600,000.

The cut could force DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) to close around Oct. 1 after serving the area for 28 years.

A letter from all nine city councillors dated Aug. 2 was sent to DSS Commissioner Harry Spence, expressing their concerns about the elimination of the funding.

"We strongly support any efforts to continue the full range of service provided by DOVE in whatever manner is most effective, efficient and responsible," the councillors said.

"We respectfully request that you employ the time, talent, energy, and resources at your disposal to find a solution."

Virginia Kurtzman, chairwoman of the DOVE board of directors said the facility last year served 275 women and children but had to turn away another 250 for lack of space. The shelter is the second largest in the state with 18 beds.

Kurtzman said that although the facility may be forced to close, "We will be able to take battered women and their children in, and we will try to put them in another shelter if we can find one."

The text of the council's letter to Spence:

"The Quincy City Council as a collective body is forwarding this correspondence to express its concern regarding the recently announced decision to eliminate DSS funding utilized to support the DOVE program. As you know the DOVE program along with the Quincy District Court and the Quincy Police Department were a national model for the intervention in domestic violence beginning more than a quarter century ago.

"Intuitively, anecdotally and statistically we know that domestic violence remains an unabated affliction within our community which demands our attention and whatever resources we can bring to bear. DOVE and similar programs throughout the Commonwealth have been the literal safety net, perhaps the difference between life and death, for hundreds of women and children over many years.

"Whatever the short-falls or deficiencies that may exist within the organization that media reports seem to indicate, we are confident there are ways to correct them. Whatever ideological differences that may exist over what model is most efficacious for delivering much needed services, we are sure that these differences can be bridged. It would seem to us that above all else, failure to meet the needs of those seeking a path out of abusive relationships, is not an option.

"There are many caring and committed people who have dedicated themselves to the mission symbolized by DOVE. We strongly support any efforts to continue the full range of serviced provided by DOVE in whatever manner is most effective, efficient and responsible. We respectfully request that you employ the time, talent, energy and resources at your disposal to find a solution. Please know we stand ready to assist, in any way we can, to ensure this common goal is attained."

Student Reading Skills Honed At Ward 4 Center

The Ward 4 Community Center is offering a back-to-school brush up on reading skills for students entering grades one to three or new readers.

The program, taught by Rita Brutto, a certified elementary reading teacher, focuses on basic skills and will run from Monday, Aug. 28 through Friday, Sept. 1, from 9 to 10:15 a.m.

The cost is $35 per child, which includes all materials needed for the course.

Registration may be made by calling the Center at 617-786-0696. The deadline for registering is Thursday, Aug. 17.

State Forgiveness Seen Possible At Time Of $12M QMC Loan

By TOM HENSHAW

City officials who negotiated an interest-free $12 million loan from the state to save Quincy Hospital in 1999 apparently did so with the thought that it would be eventually forgiven.

The state did just that the other day on the eve of the city's first of four $3 million paybacks, a move that was made quietly, hidden in the folds of the state budget for Fiscal 2007.

The city's legislative delegation, particularly Rep. Ron Mariano, was given credit for steering the change through the Legislature, expending political capital acquired over the years.

"You have to credit the delegation," said Jim Sheets, the mayor of Quincy at the time the state loan enabled the hospital to become Quincy Medical Center, allied with Boston Medical Center.

"They have developed a position of importance in the State House. Now their voices can be heard."

Sheets, who availed himself of QMC's services during a recent mild heart attack, said the $12 million loan started out as a grant but was stymied by then-House Speaker Tom Finneran.

JAMES SHEETS

"When I asked Governor (Paul) Cellucci for a grant of $12 million no one had ever done that before," said Sheets. "It would be a precedent but Cellucci said he would do it for Quincy.

"It was sent to the Legislature as a grant that we would not have to pay back. However, there was a disagreement between Finneran and Tom Birmingham, the president of the Senate.

"Birmingham agreed to treat it as a grant but Finneran would not support it at all. He didn't want to create a precedent.

"Paul Haley from Weymouth, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, wanted us to get it. So did Sens. Kennedy and Kerry. They put a lot of pressure on Finneran for the grant.

"At the last hour, we got a compromise. Finneran allowed the $12 million to come down as a loan. If he didn't, we would have had to close the hospital on Oct. 1, 1999.

"At the time, we discussed with the delegation that when it came time to pay the loan back the probability was that we could have the loan forgiven and get the money as a grant."

Sheets, who is just back from vacation in Pennsylvania and started rehab at Quincy Medical Center Monday, said he was "thrilled" by the state's forgiveness of the loan.

"It means a lot to Quincy Medical Center," he said.

"The South Shore Hospital has just purchased a $1.3 million machine that can be used to measure the blood flow to the heart. I'm not saying we should buy one but it will allow us to improve.

"The decision will benefit the health needs of the whole community."

Gabrieli Opens Quincy Campaign Headquarters

Chris Gabrieli, Democratic candidate for governor, has opened a satellite campaign headquarters at 37 Washington Street, next to the Quincy Post Office.

An opening ceremony is being planned for later this week.

Gabrieli will hold a "South Shore Town Hall Meeting", Monday, Aug. 14 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Marina Bay Community Room, 500 Victory Rd.

$100,000 For Merrymount Park Restoration

"Quincy was fortunate to have such a famed landscape architect design the city's crown jewel," said Rep., Ron Mariano.

"Olmsted isn't designing any more parks. To be able to bring one of his creations to life, over a hundred years after his death, is very special."

The highlight of the restoration will be the granite fountain near the gated entrance that will spew recycled water 10 feet into the air from a bowl on a six-foot pedestal.

The fountain will be lighted at night.

Ironically, the fountain will be made of Stony Creek granite, imported from Connecticut to the city where the quality granite industry began.

That 'For Sale' Sign

Joe Finn has a "For Sale" sign on the front lawn of his Williams Street, North Quincy, home.

But political observers shouldn't fire up the old speculation mill.

FINN

"I'm not leaving Quincy," he says.

So his councillor at-large seat won't be open for a ward councillor or two to make a run for. Unless, of course, he decides to challenge Mayor William Phelan.

The reason Finn and his wife, Delores, want to move is simple: they need more room.

They have seven children from two to 14 years old. Four of them are their own, one adopted and two foster. Six boys, one girl. The kids are growing up.

Their Williams Street home has three bedrooms. They need five and have a house in mind in the North Quincy area.

"If it doesn't work out," Finn says, "we will probably stay put and add on."

What about next year's election?

Finn, who almost ran for mayor last year, says, "I'm taking it one day at a time."

Does that include a possible bid for mayor?

"Possible," he says. "But it's still pretty early."

LAST WEEK'S WEATHER was tough to take especially Wednesday when the thermometer flirted with 100 degrees.

LAST WEEK'S weather was pretty hot but nothing compared to Aug. 2, 1975 when the mercury hit 107 degrees. That's Frank McCauley standing under the digital thermometer.

But it wasn't so bad compared to Aug. 2, 1975 31 years ago to that day.

That's when the temperature hit 107, recalls former Mayor Frank McCauley.

McCauley has a picture his young daughter, Julie, snapped of him standing under a digital thermometer at a branch of the old Hancock Bank on Southern Artery reading "107."

"It agreed with the official 107 temperature at Logan Airport," McCauley notes.

It's a record high, he says.

HARD TO BELIEVE that Paul Harold has been gone four years.

HAROLD

A fourth annual anniversary remembrance Mass will be celebrated Sunday, Aug. 13 at 11:30 a.m. at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Paul died Aug. 12, 2002 after a two-year battle with cancer. He was 53, in the prime of his life.

His political career spanned 27 years: city councillor, city council president, state senator and Norfolk County Register of Deeds. Many believed he could have been mayor if he wanted it. But he didn't.

He holds the all-time council at-large vote getting record of 21,243 set in 1977. That was 7,416 more than runner-up John Quinn and 7,615 more than third place winner Frank McCauley, a couple of heavy political hitters.

His political debut wasn't quite that spectacular. He was defeated in his first run in 1971, losing a bid for state representative to Tom Brownell, now presiding justice of Plymouth District Court.

He lost again in 1973 by 48 votes to Leo Kelly for the Ward 1 council seat.

But two years later he came bounding back to win a council at-large seat. And, his political career was off and flying.

And, always in the right direction.

As Ann Knafelz, his secretary during his 14 years as state senator, puts it:

"He loved the city. People were so important to him. He made sure the people came first."

AS WE HAVE said before, once a Quincyite, always a Quincyite. Regardless of where they moved to, their heart is still in Quincy.

Like Mary Valorz now of Earlysville, VA, who gets The Sun by mail and writes:

"I truly have enjoyed The Quincy Sun. I lived in Quincy 79 years. I'm 84 now. Only moved to Virginia because of health and to be near my son. He grabs The Quincy Sun before I can get to it.

"I miss Quincy a lot. Thank you for keeping me up with what friends are doing and what's going on in Quincy."

And thanks for the kind words, Mary.

How Older Persons Can Beat The Heat

Older people are especially at risk from heat related health problems such as heatstroke and heat exhaustion. During extreme heat is not the time to do chores, run errands or weed the garden.

"Heat can be miserable for all ages, but potentially life threatening for older persons," said Deborah Banda, AARP Massachusetts state director.

Here are 10 tips for dealing with the heat:

• Relax and put off chores and any strenuous activities.

• Stay indoors during the hottest times of the day.

• Close the shades to keep out sunshine.

• For those who do not have air conditioning, stay on the lower level of the home. Heat rises.

• Check with local agencies for cool places such as libraries and public buildings, or a mall with air conditioning.

• Wear light-weight, loose fitting clothing, and use a hat, sunglasses or an umbrella as protection from the sun.

• Drink plenty of water, even when not thirsty, to help cool the body.

• Avoid alcohol and caffeinated beverages.

• For those with chronic medical conditions, talk with a doctor about additional precautions to prevent heat-related illness. Some conditions and medications put people at a higher risk.

• Neighbors, friends or family should check on older people in their homes to make sure they are not suffering from heat.

Free Legal Clinic At Quincy Court Aug. 15

The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor a free legal clinic Tuesday, Aug. 15, from 6 to 8 p.m. at Quincy District Court, One Dennis Ryan Parkway, Quincy Center.

Attorneys will be available for confidential, one-on-one discussions of legal questions and concerns of individuals. Clinics are conducted on a walk-in basis with no appointments necessary.

For more information, call Adrienne Clarke at 617-471-9693.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920's lithographed postcard entitled High Tide at Wollaston Beach is quite different from the view from here today. Mitchell's Groceries and Provisions store on the right was on the corner of Beach Street. After prohibition ended it became Elsie's Cafe´ and is now a parking lot for the condominiums there. The large house in the center was then The Wollaston Inn. It is now a private residence. The tree is gone and to its right the Inn's small-attached refreshment stand that operated under so many different names over the years has only recently been demolished. The beach is coming back but there is no place along here today to buy an ice cream or a cold tonic except at a gas station. The hoardwalk to the Wollaston Yacht Club is on the left. In the center foreground the mouth of Sachem's Brook is at the concrete bridge with the iron pipe fence that was a popular place to sit on. The brook's source is at the Montclair bogs near the Milton line. At the time of this picture the brook was open from Hancock Street to here, Mitchell's was on pilings. Now the brook is enclosed and a concrete culvert extends from where the bridge was a few hundred feet into the hay. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

McCormick Takes Issue With School Budget Question

This Week
1970
36 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy School Committee Vice Chairman James McCormick took issue with what he called a "loaded question" in a recent public opinion poll.

The question asked whether city councils should have the right to cut school budgets. Some 587 persons were in favor while 198 were opposed.

At present, school committees have fiscal autonomy and school budgets presented to the city council must be approved with no deletions. McCormick said the question should have been "are you in favor of keeping local politics out of the public schools?"

McCormick pointed out that the $56.91 school budget portion of the total tax rate of $113.20 is the lowest percentage in years. He said, "We spend $675 per student. We are about medium, not high and not low. The school budget increase is the lowest in the past four or five years."

DONAHUE PREDICTS PRIMARY VICTORY

Senate President Maurice Donahue, in an interview with Ruth Wainwright of The Quincy Sun, predicted he would win the September Democratic primary for Governor with Francis X. Bellotti, Kevin White and Kenneth O'Donnell finishing behind him in that order.

Donahue said he is the only one of the four Democratic contenders who can unite the party after the primary and go on and defeat Gov. Francis Sargent. (Note: Mayor Kevin White of Boston would win the primary but lose to Sargent in the November election.)

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

As the Major League Baseball season headed into its final two months, the Red Sox found themselves in fourth place in the six team American League East. The Red Sox, with a 52-49 record, were 11 games behind the division-leading Baltimore Orioles. Red Sox pitcher Sonny Siebert pitched a 2-0 victory over the California Angels.

Applauds Morrissey, Tobin For Supporting Pharmacy Access Bill

I am writing to applaud Representative Tobin and Senator Morrissey, who courageously voted to override the Governor's veto of H4176, the Pharmacy Access bill.

With the passing of this bill, Massachusetts joins 47 other states that have repealed the prescription requirement currently needed to purchase sterile hypodermic needles — an act that could reduce the state's rates of HIV, AIDS and Hepatitis C by up to 50 percent.

Massachusetts has the ninth highest rate of AIDS spread by dirty needles in the country. In addition, there are 110,000 cases of Hepatitis C, which is spread almost exclusively through the use of dirty needles.

As an advocate for reducing the risk of transmission of HIV, I witness each day how this bill will save lives in our community. There are over 400 people living with HIV in Quincy and its surrounding South Shore area. In fact, more than 30 percent of the clients living with HIV seen in my program acquired HIV either from their own drug use or from their partner who is an injection drug user.

We are fortunate to have elected officials who can listen to the evidence and make the right decision. With their courageous actions, more people in Massachusetts and on the South Shore will remain healthy and alive.

Wonders About A Wheelchair Ramp At Wollaston Beach

First off I would like to extend my thanks to Gene Lee for coming to my defense in last week's Quincy Sun. It is nice to know that people are reading my opinions whether they agree or disagree with them. As far as those who think I need to get a life, I hate to disappoint them, but I do have a life. A police officer, a newspaper columnist, a substitute teacher, a Hollywood movie extra, a lecturer and all around pain in the —.

I don't always criticize but sometimes you just have to. This summer for instance, the re-doing of Wollaston Beach has made things difficult for beach walkers. Many have gone over to Marina Bay or Columbia Road in Southie. Running or walking is not just physical exercise, it is also mentally exercising. I walk to stay healthy and to relax away the stress of the day. Most do likewise. However, the endless detours and roadblocks along Quincy Shore Drive have not been very relaxing as of late.

When I do my power walk, I look around. To make sure no big trucks are sneaking up on me, but also just to view the water and the sky above. It is calming. However, the other day down by the seawall across from Rice Road, I've been watching the construction of support beams in the sand. I didn't know immediately what it meant. Then it hit me: a wheelchair accessible ramp to the sandy beach.

When I questioned another walker as to why a handicapped ramp was necessary, they told me the physically challenged had a right to the beach too.. I agreed, but wondered what someone in a wheelchair did once they got to the end of the ramp. How accessible is a ramp to sand? Also, if a ramp was needed at Wollaston Beach, why not closer to the bathhouse or clam places?

Is there a wheelchair ramp over in Southie? How about Revere Beach or Nantaskett? One would think someone had commonsense when it came to such beach ramps. Hey, maybe it's not a wheelchair ramp at all but I'll be the most surprised person of all if it isn't. Remember the old adage about walking, talking and looking like a duck.

The extreme makeover of Wollaston Beach is long overdue but I just wonder about the folly of a wheelchair ramp to nowhere. Could somebody in charge of this project 'splain it to me like Ricky Riccardo always demanded.

Use Peace To Solve Disagreements

On Monday, July 17th, 2006, Steven B. Konver, in a letter to the Globe wrote: "All countries have the right and the duty to defend themselves, and Israel is no exception." Yes, indeed all countries have the right and duty to defend themselves, by all means possible, peaceful means included.

If we indeed care for "all countries," "Israel is no exception," we should advise all countries not to use war, but to use peace to solve their disagreements.

'A Taste Of Ward 5' Raises Nearly $1,000 For Scholarships

Eight local restaurants recently catered "A Taste of Ward 5," raising almost $1,000 for scholarships for Ward 5 high school seniors.

The event was hosted by the Ward 5 Community Association at the Beechwood Knoll School Gymnasium.

"We were thrilled with the turn-out," said Nick Puleo, president of the association. "We were so thankful that some of the best eateries in Quincy were able to come out. The event definitely showed their strong commitment to the city, and its residents."

Resident Ellen March won a charbroil grill donated by Home Depot at a raffle.

Participating restaurants included the Coffee Break Cafe, Craig's Cafe, Fajitas and Ritas, Heritage Cafe, Italy's Little Kitchen, The Fours, The Fowler House and The Fudge Bar.

Music was provided by "Super DJ Joe."

Laura Bloomer Receives Saint Michael's Book Award

Laura Ann Bloomer, daughter of William and Roberta Bloomer of Quincy, and a student of Archbishop Williams High School, was named the 2005-06 recipient of the Saint Michael's College Scholarship and Service Book Award.

The award recognizes students who demonstrate a commitment to volunteerism and leadership through community service.

Award recipients, named at schools throughout the country, are high school juniors who are inductees of the National Honor Society or equivalent school-sponsored honors organization. They must demonstrate a commitment to service activities in high school or community organizations, taking leadership roles in these activities.

Bloomer was presented the book First They Killed My Father: A Daughter of Cambodia Remembers (HarperCollins 2000) by Loung Ung, a 1993 Saint Michael's College graduate who has become a widely acclaimed author. In First They Killed My Father Ung gives a autobiographical account, from a child's perspective, of surviving captivity during the genocidal Pol Pot regime in Cambodia.

Mayor's Garden Party Raises $10,000 For Tourism

Mayor William Phelan announced that his 5th annual Garden Party raised more than $10,000 to assist tourism efforts in Quincy.

The money will be granted to Discover Quincy Inc., Quincy's tourism agency.

"I want to thank everyone that attended the Garden Party, the National Park Service for their hospitality, and Ed Kane of Water Works for the wonderful job his people did in catering the event," said Phelan.

"Our efforts hope to continue the momentum we have in the tourism market and will hopefully benefit economic development not must in our downtown, but throughout our great city."

Photos On Pages 8 - 9

The Garden Party proceeded a free public concert by the Boston Landmarks Orchestra at the Beale Estate. The concert was sponsored by State Street.

"I want to thank Mayor Phelan for his continued support of Discover Quincy and tourism in general," said Mark Carey, executive director of Discover Quincy. "The proceeds will help further our mission of marketing Quincy and drawing tourists and tourism dollars to Quincy."

More than 150 people attended the event held in the garden at Adams Mansion.

"We enjoyed a beautiful evening in the garden and the concert was phenomenal," said Phelan. "This event has grown quickly into a Quincy tradition and I am already looking forward to next year's event."

Phelan also thanked Kim DiBona from his staff who organized the event.

South Coastal Bank Awards $500 Grant To Beechwood Knoll School PTO

South Coastal Bank recently awarded a $500 grant from its C.A.R.E.S. community giving program to the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School PTO in Quincy.

Committed to enriching the lives of children in the communities it serves, South Coastal Bank specifically designed C.A.R.E.S. to help local not-for-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of Community, Achievement, Responsibility and Excellence in children through exposure to the arts.

Serving Quincy students from kindergarten through grade five, the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School PTO works to enhance the children's educational experience by raising funds to subsidize cultural arts programs not provided for by the school budget. The PTO used C.A.R.E.S. funding to present "Cinderella" by the Tanglewood Marionettes during the school's "Week of the Young Child" celebration. The performance features a dozen handcrafted marionettes, with the puppeteers performing in full view of the audience. The production also includes a demonstration and a question-and-answer session.

For more information on South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. or to download an application, visit South Coastal Bank's Web site, www.southcoastalbank.com, or contact community liaison Susan Lincoln at 781-681-7206.

How To Protect Yourself

Quincy Avoids Mosquito-Borne Diseases – So Far

By TOM HENSHAW

It's happening all around us.

Seven mosquito pools, three in Lakeville and one each in Carver, Easton, New Bedford and Raynham, have been determined to be positive for Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE).

A dead bird in Saugus has been found to be positive for the West Nile Virus (WNV) and two mosquito pools in Needham and Barnstable have been determined to be positive for the disease.

A 159,000-acre block of towns in southeastern Massachusetts bounded by Duxbury, Wareham, Bridgewater and Acushnet were due to be sprayed for mosquitos Tuesday night.

To date, there have been 22 dead birds in Quincy reported to the state for testing but none has been found to have WNV and none of the mosquito pools have tested positive for the disease.

And Quincy is not on any list for aerial spraying although certain streets have experienced "fogging" from trucks between 2 and 6 on Thursday mornings, sometimes at the request of residents.

"There are going to be cases (of EEE and WNV) if we don't do something," warned Dr. Al DeMaria, chief medical officer of the State Department of Health.

"Ground spraying does not work quickly enough. There are a lot of mammal-biters out there."

The best way to make sure the dreaded EEE and WNV stay away from Quincy, the Health Department advises, is to make sure mosquitos have no place to breed or thrive.

This can be accomplished by:

• Disposing of tins cans, plastic containers and other water-holding devices that have accumulated on your property.

• Paying attention to discarded tires. The used tire has become the most important domestic mosquito producer.

• Drilling holes in the bottom, not the sides, of recycling containers that are left out of doors.

• Cleaning clogged roof gutters on an annual basis.

• Fixing any holes in screens and making sure they are attached tightly to doors and windows.

• Turning over plastic wading pools and wheelbarrows when they are not in use.

• Not allowing water to stagnate in birdbaths.

• Aerating ornamental pools or stocking them with fish.

• Cleaning and chlorinating swimming pools that are not being used while you are on vacation.

• Using landscaping to eliminate standing water.

Remember, mosquitos will develop in any puddle that is permitted to exist for more than four days.

For personal protection, the Health Department recommends:

• Avoid outdoor activities at dawn and dusk when mosquitos are most active.

If you must go out, wear long-sleeved shirts, long pants and mosquito repellent that contains DEET.

• Cover the arms and legs of children playing outdoors near swampy areas.

• Cover babies' playpens or carriages with mosquito netting.

• Don't camp overnight near freshwater swamps.

• When camping outdoors, make sure your tent is equipped with netting.

Community Preservation Act Heads For November Ballot

The Quincy Community Preservation Coalition will hold a news conference Monday, Aug. 14, at 4:15 p.m. on the steps of City Hall to announce that they apparently have enough signatures to get the Community Preservation Act on the November ballot in Quincy.

The act would add roughly one per cent of the assessed property value to real estate tax bills to raise funds to acquire open space, preserve historic sites and develop affordable housing. The state would match the funds raised under the act.

The Coalition will deliver to City Clerk Joe Shea their petitions containing, said Steve Perdios of Quincy Environmental Network, 3,600 names. The Coalition needs 2,700 names that are certified as voters in Quincy to get on the state election ballot in the city.

Jacklyn Deware Webb Turns Over Helm Of Navy Recruiting District New England

Cmdr. Jacklyn Deware Webb, USN, a resident Wollaston, recently relinquished command of Navy Recruiting District New England (NRDNE) at a Change of Command ceremony held at Boston's Historic Faneuil Hall.

When she said, "Sir, I have been properly relieved as Commanding Officer Navy Recruiting District New England," to Capt. Burton T. Palmer, USN, Commander, Navy Recruiting Region North, she transferred all duties and responsibilities of command to her relief, Cmdr. Kevin D. Hunt, USN.

The event is a time-honored tradition that formally restates to the officers, men and women of the command the continuity of the authority of command.

Cmdr. Webb's next assignment will be Deputy Dean of Students at the Naval War College, in Newport, R.I.

She is the daughter of Donald and Mary Deware of Wollaston, founders of Deware Funeral Homes. She has one son, Chandler, a freshman, varsity wrestler and lacrosse goalie at Avon Old Farms School, Avon, Conn.

From August 2003 through June 23, Cmdr. Webb served as both NRDNE Executive Officer and Commanding Office. During her tenure as Commanding Officer her leadership led to the recruitment of over 2,000 highly qualified young men and women for service into the United States navy.

Cmdr. Webb managed to build a winning team committed to long-term excellence in every aspect of Naval Recruiting. Her systematic reorganization and emphasis on continuous training in recruiting fundamentals established a foundation of excellence and vision for the command. As a direct result, mission accomplishment for both Officer and Enlisted Programs achieved across the board improvement during her tenure as Commanding Officer.

NRDNE is a command comprised of more than 220 officers, enlisted and civilian personnel that field 66 recruiting stations, four Military Entrance Processing Stations and the District Headquarters in Boston.

Born in Hingham, Cmdr. Webb was raised in Crow Point, and attended Derby Academy and is a graduate of the Woodward School for Girls. She attended the University of Salzburg, Salzburg, Austria, and graduated from The American University, School of International Service, Washington DC, with a degree in International Relations, Western European Studies and German.

Upon receiving her commission through Officer Candidate School, she received orders to the Naval Military Command Center (NMCC), (OPNAV-64). As a data analyst in the Pentagon's Command Center, she supported the worldwide control and communications system database for the NMCC as well as JCS liaison in support of the joint exercise database.

She then transferred to the Chief of Naval Information Speaker's Bureau, with a follow-on tour in the public affairs arena as Assistant Director, Navy Office of Information New England, a satellite public affairs office for the Chief of Naval Information responsible for the all media outlets in the six states encompassing the New England area.

Cmdr. Webb subsequently reported to the Carrier Air Early Warning Training Squadron (VAW 120) as the Personnel Officer and Assistant Administrative Officer for this East Coast training squadron. Onboard VAW 120 just 10 months, she was hand selected by the Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Command (USACOM) to be the Command Protocol Officer and was subsequently selected to be the Aide/Flag Lieutenant for USACOM and Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic.

Three years later, CDR Webb was assigned to Commander Fighter Wing, Atlantic, serving three years as Wing Administrative Officer, Budget Officer and Security Manager overseeing 14 F-14 squadrons stationed at Naval Air Station Oceana, VA, two squadrons located in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Roosevelt Roads, PR, as well as detachments in Fallon, NV and Key West, FL.

Cmdr. Webb served as Executive Officer, Navy Recruiting District New England after which she attended the Naval War College, Newport, RI. Upon graduation, she was selected to be the Superintendent's Manpower and Personnel Officer, U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, MD, followed by her tour as Executive Officer, Naval Education and Training, Newport, RI.

She reported to Navy Recruiting District New England as Executive Officer and assumed her present duties as Commanding Officer in August 2004.

In addition to her undergraduate degree in International Relations, Western European Studies and German, Commander Webb holds a Master's of Science degree in Educational Administration from Old Dominion University, Norfolk, VA, and a Master's Degree in National Security and Strategic Studies from the Naval War College.

Cmdr. Webb has been awarded numerous unit awards and decorations as well as the Meritorious Service Medal with 3 Gold Stars, the Joint Commendation Medal, Navy Commendation Medal with Gold Star and the Navy Achievement Medal.

17th Annual Golf Classic

South Quincy Italian Festival Seeking Volunteers

This year's festival will be held Saturday, Sept. 9, from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Malnati's Block, the intersection of Liberty Street and Brooks Avenue. Rain date is Sunday, Sept. 10.

Help is needed for set-up, break down and supervision of children's activities.

Space is still available for food or craft vendors for a nominal fee.

The annual festival was formed 22 years ago as a way to reunite families and friends while raising money for scholarships given to Quincy students. The festival draws between 4,000 to 5,000 people and features food, crafts, collectibles, live entertainment and fun.

For more information, contact the South Quincy Italian Festival, 112R Liberty St., Quincy, MA 02169, or call Harry Bertoni at 617-472-9226 or Rick Speranzo at 617-471-1649.

QMC Names Reynold Spadoni VP Of Planning, Business Development

Quincy Medical Center has appointed Reynold Spadoni as the 232-bed community teaching hospital's Vice President of Strategic Services and Business Development, effective immediately.

REYNOLD SPADONI

As a member of QMC's executive leadership team, Spadoni will lead all aspects of strategic planning, business development, community relations, physician relations, government affairs, marketing, and communications.

Spadoni brings more than 20 years of experience in healthcare management to his new role at Quincy Medical Center. Most recently, he served as vice president of business development and vice president of operations at Neighborhood Health Plan. He also has served as vice president of health and community care for Dimock Community Health Center in Boston and in leadership positions at Harvard Pilgrim Health Care and Ernst & Young.

Spadoni holds a masters in business degree from Boston University School of Management and has completed the Leadership for Change Program at Boston College.

"Rey's strategic counsel and business development experience will be a tremendous asset to Quincy Medical Center as we further our vision of building a system of care that addresses the specific needs of our community and continue to develop new programs, services and linkages that keep Quincy Medical Center at the core of our community," said Dr. Gary Gibbons, Quincy Medical Center President and CEO.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The Medical Center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Foot Screening For Seniors

Podiatrist Jordana Szpiro will be available to seniors for foot screening on the first Monday of every month at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St.

She will also treat feet for a fee of $20 per person payable at the time of the visit. Such payments are not covered by health insurance.

Treatments will include nail trimming and general diabetic foot care.

Century 21 Annex Realty Announces Top Sales Agents

Art Foley, Broker/Owner of Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., with offices in Quincy and Hanover, announces the top-selling agents for the second quarter of 2006.

The award is based on the total number of successful transactions an agent closes each month. The following agents achieved winning sales figures for April through June:

April: John Heaney of Quincy (Quincy office) and Maureen Cuddahy of Norwell (Hanover office).

June: Mary Collins of Quincy (Quincy office) and Yvonne Girard of Weymouth and Eric Sugrue of Braintree (Hanover office).

Cuddahy and Repoff were the overall top producers for the second quarter for their respective offices.

For more information about Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., call the Quincy office at 617-472-4330.

Selling Homes In A Competitive Market

The number of homes on the market is increasing as quickly as the number of motivated sellers, resulting in a very competitive real estate business throughout greater Boston.

At this time there are almost 1,000 more homes for sale in the South Shore region than there were a year ago.

"This type of market makes it difficult for owners to successfully sell their property for the desired profit," said Century 21 Annex Realtor Stephen Downing. He believes that using a quick selling technique called "bidding up," works well in this kind of market when combined with modern technology.

When "bidding up," the Realtor will list the property well-below the suggested market price or below the lowest list price of other homes in the area, and keep it on the market for only a few weeks. This attracts brokers to the listing, creating a sellers' market.

"In this kind of competitive market you have to create attention to properties that may not have enough initial appeal to easily attract homebuyers," Downing said.

Downing experienced the "bidding up" process first-hand on a home in Quincy for which he was the listing agent. A young couple was looking to sell their home as quickly as possible, but it did not have a lot of "curb appeal."

However, the interior design of the home easily compensated for the home's outward appearance. Downing listed the property for $250,000, well below the actual market value. After a few weeks the home sold for $285,000; $35,000 over the original list price.

In addition to innovative pricing strategies, Realtors are also employing non-traditional methods of showcasing home listings. In recent years the Internet has become a popular way to search for homes. More sellers are working with Realtors to set up virtual tours of their property on the web, allowing maximum exposure in the shortest amount of time.

The most important thing a Realtors can do in today's market is help the seller price the property correctly. The agent will assist the seller in determining the home's worth based on its location, size, features and available local resources. He or she will then compile a competitive market analysis of other homes in the area with similar characteristics.

Sellers and Realtors don't always agree on the list price. Realtors will sometimes allow the seller to increase the asking price up to $10,000 over the market list, but rarely higher. If the property has not made progress over a few weeks the Realtor will discuss a price adjustment and other marketing options with the seller.

"In today's competitive market it is not worth the time to list a property much higher than its suggested market price; it will not sell," Downing said. "It is best to use a Realtor to help you think outside the box and employ creative ways to sell your home."

Stephen Downing has worked in real-estate since 1974. Throughout his career he has served as the President of the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors (1988), State Director of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors from 1986 through 1990 and a member of the National Association of Realtors. Downing lives in Quincy, with his wife, Susan. He is a father of three children Jay (20), Sarah (27) and Mike (30).

Beat the Humidity

(NU) - Too much moisture in the hot summer air can turn your home into a steam bath. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, the ideal relative humidity range for the home is between 35 percent and 50 percent.

How can homeowners efficiently accomplish this? One popular option is a portable dehumidifier, which by definition only addresses a small area of the home. However, these products can be high-maintenance, noisy and intrusive to the living space.

A more effective tool for the job may be a whole-home dehumidifier, like Aprilaire's Model 1700, which is designed to work in conjunction with an existing central cooling system.

With no messy tanks to maintain, whole-home dehumidifiers require little maintenance. They are inconspicuous and work silently to maintain the optimum humidity level automatically. And because dehumidified air feels cooler, homeowners can set their thermostats higher.

Some people try to use their air conditioner to remove humidity. But according to experts, homeowners should never lower the thermostat temperature in an attempt to control humidity.

Setting the thermostat temperature lower can actually work against the goal of reducing moisture in the home. Over-cooling raises the indoor relative humidity and decreases the temperature of the walls, floors and ceilings, increasing the potential for condensation. Also, many air conditioners will cycle on and off too quickly to eliminate moisture.

In addition to a whole-home dehumidifier, homeowners can further reduce moisture in the home with the following tips:

• Clean and repair roof gutters regularly. Use covers to keep leaves and sticks from building up.

• Vent appliances that produce moisture, such as clothes dryers and stoves, to the outside.

• Use downspout extenders that carry water at least 6 feet away from the foundation.

• Seal unwanted air leaks around holes for plumbing and wiring. This is where humid outside air sneaks into the home.

Control Mosquitoes in Your Yard

Q. This year, for some reason, we cannot sit outside for even a few minutes without being bitten up by mosquitoes. This was never a problem in the past five years that we have lived here. We now have to spray bug repellent all over our skin just to sit outdoors in the evening, and even then we can see dozens of the little buggers swarming around the patio lights. Can you give us any ideas to clear up this problem, without resorting to chemical sprays? — Lucy G., Newton, Mass.

A. A warm, wet spring can spawn a huge mosquito population, and the Northeast had just that this year. Summertime is high season for these little critters, as you've noticed from the swarms around your patio.

The large number of mosquitoes is of special concern due to the increased possibility of mosquito-borne illnesses — like West Nile Virus and equine encephalitis — being contracted by humans. So taking steps to reduce the number of mosquitoes in your yard, and to prevent being bitten by them, is very important.

The best way to accomplish this is to eliminate as many sources of standing water from your yard and home exterior as possible. One cup of water can provide enough space to incubate hundreds of mosquito eggs. Here is a short list of things to do:

- Clean gutters, eliminating any debris dams that keep water from draining.
- Make sure the downspouts drain well away from the house, and that water continues to flow freely away and out of the yard.
- Clean up any piles of leaves, trash, branches, old tires or other junk where rainwater can pool.
- Turn over wheelbarrows, buckets or other containers.
- Store tarps, gardening tools, lawnmowers, etc., when not in use.
- If your pets' drinking water is outside, change the water daily and scrub the bowls to dislodge insect eggs.
- Add an aerator to outdoor ponds or water gardens, or add fish that will eat mosquitoes and their larvae.
- Note "wet" or "soft" spots in the yard where water drainage is poor; consult an expert on improving drainage from the area.
- If you collect rainwater to use in your garden, keep the rain barrel covered. (Covered rain barrels are available for purchase. Start at www.rainbarrelguide.com to learn more.)

Buyers Can Reap Benefits From Competing Lenders

Homebuying In A Tightened Market

(NAPS) Some good news is knocking at the door of prospective homeowners worried about the recent surge in mortgage rates.

The previously booming home-loan industry is undergoing a contraction. The Mortgage Bankers Association predicts the industry will shrink by 14 percent in 2006. What's the good news? That means lenders are competing harder to win business, and homebuyers are reaping the benefits.

Beyond discounts and extended terms, banks are leveraging their scale to eliminate many of the costs that cause confusion and frustration for homebuyers at closing. Bank of America's Floyd Robinson said his company offers real savings off closing costs of up to $2,000.

Robinson said they can offer this because they cut internal costs from the process and are passing those savings on to customers. These funds can be critical when applied towards the down payments, moving fees or new home amenities.

Robinson suggests following these tips when shopping for a mortgage in this new lending environment:]

- Check with the bank first. Banks may reward loyalty by offering a relationship discount.
- Don't pay for fees that other lenders have eliminated. Take advantage of programs like the one offered by Bank of America, which eliminates the origination, application, lender closing, appraisal, flood determination, tax service, credit report and courier fees for existing customers.
- Confirm the savings are real. Make sure the lender has truly cut costs and isn't simply rolling them into the overall cost of the loan.
- Focus on the annual percentage rate (APR) and not just the interest rate. The APR is what the loan is actually going to cost and it's a more accurate comparison of loan offers.

Most of all, remember to always work with a lender that is known and trusted, one that will work to find the right loan for individual needs and monthly budget, now and in the future. The right lender will take the gimmicks, guesswork and surprises out of closing and help make a dream home a reality.

Home buying and mortgage information, as well as home listings in select markets, are available at www.bankofamerica.com.

Maximize Comfort, Lower Utility Bills

(NAPS) Those who think that summers have been getting hotter in recent years may be right.

In fact, according to the National Climatic Data Center, 2005 was the warmest year since national records began in 1895. Combine those rising temperatures with increasing energy costs to cool a home, and the situation can be downright unbearable.

How can people lower their utility bills?

With the average homeowner spending more than $2,100 on energy, about half of it for heating and cooling, the cost of keeping cool can be expensive. To improve a home's energy efficiency and lower utility bills, conduct a simple home energy audit. Start by examining exterior walls, doors, and windows to identify any cracks where cool air could be seeping out, and seal leaks with caulk or weather stripping. Keep window blinds closed during the day to block sunlight form entering the home and plant trees around the house for added shade.

In addition, check the attic's insulation. If it's insufficient, the home's cooling system may have to work harder to regulate the indoor temperature. Add more if there currently is less than five inches.

Finally, be sure to set up an appointment with a home cooling professional to inspect and clean an air conditioner to ensure it's working as efficiently as possible. It may also help to install a programmable thermostat that will automatically adjust the indoor temperature while away, which also can help lower energy bills.

What can people do about a home that feels sticky and smells musty?

Even when the temperature is right, a home may still feel sticky due to excessive humidity, and that can affect overall comfort and well-being. In fact, too much moisture can lead to the growth of mold and mildew, which can potentially cause health issues.

To determine whether there are humidity problems, have the air tested. Lennox Industries offers a service known as the Healthy Advantage Program, in which an air-quality monitor is placed inside the home to measure humidity levels, as well as temperature, carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, odors, chemical vapors and airborne particles, all which can affect health and comfort.

IF there is a moisture problem, it's important to inspect the house for any water leaks, and take appropriate measures to correct the problem. Consider purchasing a dehumidifier, which can significantly reduce the moisture in a home. Lennox recently introduced the Humiditrol whole-home dehumidification system, which is installed in the home's existing duct system and can remove up to three times more moisture from the air than a conventional dehumidifier.

What should people look for when shopping for a new air conditioning system?

The average life span of a quality central air conditioner is about 15 to 20 years, so it's smart to be thinking about replacement. Planning ahead gives time to conduct research and select the right system based on specific needs. Consult the Good Housekeeping Institute, as well as manufacturer websites and local air conditioning professionals, who can help guide in making an informed decision.

One of the most important things to consider when shopping for a new system is the seasonal energy efficiency rating (SEER). While the national minimum Seer rating is 13, many newer models have a SEER of 15 and higher, which will help in making the home more energy efficient. Some systems, such as the Dave Lennox Signature Collection XC21 air conditioner, are nearly twice as efficient as a standard air conditioner.

Finally, don't put a price tag on comfort. Purchase a system that is priced within the budget, but don't compromise comfort, household efficiency or long-term savings by purchasing a unit that will not satisfy needs well into the future.

QSD Sewer 2nd Phase To Start

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Separate work will also proceed along Bromfield Street, Rawson Road, and Hamden Circle as part of the contract.

DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell said: "Residents should recognize that there will be some disruptions but that the benefits will far outweigh the inconveniences."

The contract was awarded to Albanese D&S Inc. The total project value is $2,723,568.

The project costs will be paid through the MWRA Local Pipeline Assistance Program, the DEP Water Abatement Trust Funds, and the city of Quincy's Sewer Rehabilitation.

"We continue to invest in our natural resources by locating outside funding sources," Phelan added. "Our hotel/motel tax allowed us to protect open spaces and these funding sources will help us improve the water quality at our flagship beach. I hope we can continue to make improvements in the quality of life in our city without an impact on our taxpayers."

DSS Agrees To Review Slashed DOVE Budget

director of DOVE, had tried to meet with the DSS but had been rebuffed, said Morrissey.

"The DSS cast them adrift," he said. "They could have done more. They agreed to check on it"

Carroll pointed out how valuable DOVE is to local law enforcement, the police, the DA and the courts, in filling gaps that they are not equipped to handle.

"DOVE is one of the oldest domestic violence shelters in the country," said Morrissey. "That should count for something.

"Without DOVE's 18, there would be no beds for domestic violence victims from Quincy to Plymouth.

The DSS should work with us, not against us."

Also at Tuesday's meeting were Reps. Bruce Ayers and Ron Mariano and Kathleen Teahan of Abington.

Morrissey said another meeting with DSS is scheduled to be held in the next 10 days.

Father Bill's Place Receives $25,000 Grant

Father Bill's Place (FBP) has been awarded a $25,000 grant by the Boston Foundation (TBF) to research and track the success of its innovative Housing First program, a joint effort with Boston Healthcare for the Homeless and the Center for Social Policy at Umass Boston.

Housing First is a model of housing designed to provide barrier-free housing for those individuals that have struggled the most with homelessness and are the toughest to house. Instead of requiring homeless individuals to receive treatment before entering housing, Housing First addresses the housing needs first, thereby providing the individual with a safe, stable and supportive environment in which to address substance, mental health and other issues.

Mayor William Phelan and Peter Forman, chairman of the mayor's leadership council on homelessness, have provided insight and support for this new model, housing first. As a major component of the Quincy's ten year plan to end homelessness, Housing First has already helped the city exceed its first year goal as the number of its chronic homeless individuals has already dropped by 20 percent.

The project funded by TBF, will evaluate the effects of the Housing First model on the health status of chronically homeless people. It will also evaluate the cost effectiveness of this model over the traditional system of care for the homeless.

Since 2005, Father Bill's Place has been a leader in the housing movement, establishing 33 units of Housing First residences in the last year alone. The funding provided by TBF will enable the agency to follow the individuals who have moved into these units and asses their progress.

Father Bill's Place is an interfaith housing provider committed to providing permanent solutions to the problem of homelessness. Since its inception in 1984 as an emergency shelter, Father Bill's Place has grown into a social service agency assisting the entire South Shore community.

OBITUARY

David J. Farrell, 80

Former Columnist, Editor

DAVID J. FARRELL

A funeral Mass for David Joseph Farrell, 80, of Quincy, formerly of Milton, a former Boston Globe columnist and Boston Herald-Traveler managing editor, was celebrated Tuesday at St. Agatha's Church, Milton.

He died Aug. 4 at home.

Mr. Farrell began his newspaper career as a sportswriter for The Hockey News, covering the Boston Bruins. In 1949, the Boston Traveler hired him as a reporter and his first assignment was covering the crime beat for the afternoon newspaper. He was assigned to cover politics in the early 1950s, including the Legislature and governor's office.

During his 23 years at the Herald-Traveler, he was also a political columnist, city editor and managing editor. The latter position included appearances on the local weekly television panel show "Starring the Editors."

He also worked as assistant to the publisher and circulation director between 1968 and 1972.

Mr. Farrell started his own public relations consulting firm in 1985.

He enjoyed spending time in the New Hampshire mountains with his wife, dining at Anthony's Pier 4 with friends and family and playing handball and racquetball.

During World War II, Mr. Farrell served in the Navy as an aviation cadet and was discharged from active duty at Chapel Hill, N.C., at the end of the war.

Born in East Rutherford, N.J., and raised in Dorchester, he attended St. Margaret's Elementary School. He graduated from Boston College High School in 1943 and from Boston College with financial assistance from the GI Bill.

He is survived by his wife of 57 years, Dorothy (Ahearn) Farrell; four daughters, Dr. Colleen Selig, M.D., of Glastonbury, Conn., Joanne Campo, Esq., of Milton, and Mary Farrell and Bridget Henry, both of Quincy; four sons, David A. Farrell of Brockton, Gregory Farrell of Pelham, N.Y., John Farrell of Newton and Mark Farrell of Plymouth; 16 grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Milton Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

A Job Well Done

On July 24, at approximately 10:12 a.m., Officer Tom Pepdjonovic was dispatched to the Norton Road area on a call of "a woman just walked into my house."

As Officers Harry Breen and Bob Pearson also responded to the call, dispatch informed the units the white female caller stated the woman (suspect) was unknown to her and she left, walking towards Sea Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

While Pepdjonovic was obtaining additional information from the caller, Pearson radioed that he observed a white female run across Sea Street from Hobomack Road and cross back and get on a bus heading towards Quincy Square. Breen followed the bus and awaited more information on the suspect.

The victim told Pepdjonovic she was in her den when she saw the suspect in the living room. The suspect said she was looking for "her Christian friend Tracy." The victim stated no one by that name lived there and told her to get out, which she did, and then called the police.

The victim said she was startled and frightened by the incident, but did not believe anything was taken. The victim described the suspect as a white female in her late 30s and wearing a light-colored tank top. It is believed the suspect entered via an unlocked rear door.

Pearson, who was now at the crime scene, confirmed to Breen the woman who boarded the bus matched the description of the suspect. Breen stopped the bus by the police station and asked the bus driver who he picked up at Norton and Sea streets. He pointed to the woman matching the description.

After asking the suspect to step off the bus, Breen gave her Miranda Rights and proceeded to ask questions about the incident. The suspect denied entering any home and that she got on the bus at 151 Sea Street. Breen knew this was not possible since he had followed the bus and no one had boarded.

The suspect identified herself but did not have any proof of identification or know her social security number. She stated she had identification nearby in her apartment, so Breen transported her there.

While inside her apartment, she stated she lied and gave her real name and date of birth. A criminal record check verified her identity, along with 122 arraignments (court appearances to face charges). Many of the offenses were "Breaking and Entering."

The suspect was transported to the home of the victim, where the victim stated she was "100 percent sure that she was the woman" inside her home. The suspect, a 45-year-old Quincy resident, was arrested and charged with "Breaking and Entering into a Building." Nice work!

For many residents living in small cities or towns, in the suburbs, leaving the doors of their home unlocked has been a way of life for years. Consider this: if you lock your doors when you go out so that no one will take any of your valuables, why would you leave the door unlocked when you are home? Your safety and well being of others, such as young children, are more valuable than any possession in your home.

Once someone enters your home unannounced with the intention of taking something and there is a confrontation, the danger level increases significantly especially if he/she (or they) overpower you. Keep in mind the suspect also knows you can identify them as the perpetrator!

How to Eliminate Inner-Thigh "Rub"

Q. The part of my body that bothers me the most are my inner thighs. Despite many attempts to lose weight, my thighs still rub together, making it uncomfortable to exercise — not to mention wear shorts to the gym. What can I do to help eliminate the dreaded "rub" of my thighs?

A. Factors such as genetics, lifestyle choices, body composition and activity level all play a role in the size, strength and appearance of your inner thighs. Working on factors you CAN control, such as exercise, is a great place to start tackling the inner-thigh "rub."

Here are three exercises you can add to your current workout routine to help strengthen the muscles of your inner thighs:

• Squats are great for your legs. Start with your feet and knees facing forward, feet shoulder-width apart. Bend your knees and sit your weight on your heels as you lower toward the ground. (Do not go down lower than 90 degrees!) Return to a standing position, keeping your weight on your heels, with feet and knees forward.

• Plie squats are similar to the squats mentioned above, but your foot position is turned out. Begin with your feet slightly wider than shoulder width and turn your feet to point outward. Line your knees up with your feet and lower your body toward the ground. Keep your knees and feet turned and upper body upright (not bending forward) until you reach 90 degrees. Pressing through your heels, return to a standing position.

• Side lunges work all of the muscles of your thighs. Start with your legs wider than shoulder-width apart, with your feet facing forward. Keeping your feet facing forward, shift your weight to the right by bending your knee forward. Your weight should be on your right heel, and your hip, knee, ankle and foot should all be in alignment, while the left leg remains straight. Bend your knee only low enough to maintain control, then straighten the right leg to standing position. Complete the same movement on the left side.

Complete each of these exercises for 10-15 repetitions, and one to three sets. After you master these exercises using just your body weight, you can add resistance from either dumbbells or a medicine ball. Remember to maintain a strong and aligned upper body while completing these lower body exercises.

Although there is no guarantee as to just what your body will look like, adding these exercises into a total body exercise program — along with eating properly — can help you see better results.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea Wyatt at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Advancements In Sun Care Protection

(NAPS) Advancements in sun care protection are hot as researchers continue to seek more effective and longer-lasting sunscreens.

Wearing sunscreen is an important part of keeping summer fun from having painful effects. Not only can sunscreen prevent burning, it can help prevent skin cancer later in life.

Most sunscreen agents lose their effectiveness and break down as they are exposed to the sun. The breakdown in sunscreen is unstoppable, because of the natural reaction between UV rays and sunscreens, but it can be minimized.

To test UVB sunscreens' lasting ability, the FDA requires the use of solar simulators. However, these simulators have proven to be a weak method in analyzing a formula's ability to last in natural sunlight. Although difficult and time consuming, in-sun testing is the best proven method to test pohotostability: how a formula withstands sunlight. Currently, only one care researcher is known to perform both simulated and in-sun testing.

By using both forms of testing, Florida-based Hawaiian Tropic has been able to produce formulas that offer broad-spectrum protection and don't break down in the sun as much as ordinary sunscreens. Its new patent-pending SunSure Technology uses a mixture of ingredients to maintain the protective powers of Parsol® 1789, a UVA absorber, in all of its products SPF 15 to SPF 70.

"A wise sunscreen choice is to opt for formulas that offer true UVA and UVB protection and won't degrade over hours in the sun with proper use. Look for products containing Parsol® 1789 for broad-spectrum UVA protection," said dermatologist Jeanine Downie, M.D., Montclair, N.J.

Experts also offer the following tips on keeping safe with sunscreen:

• Sun protection is important for adults and essential for children. These harmful effects of UV rays are cumulative. Make sun care part of the daily routine.

• If skin begins to turn red, get out of the sun.

• Sunscreens aren't just for a day at the beach. Use sun protection for outdoor winter activities as well.

• Try to schedule outings before or after the peak sun hours of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Men Dieting

(NAPS) Male obesity has become a weighty topic, and it's on the rise in the United States.

Although weight-loss programs and diet trends often focus on women, the American Obesity Association found that the prevalence to be overweight is higher for men (67 percent) than women (62 percent). In fact, a recent study from the National Institute of Health (NIH) conducted over 30 years, showed that nine out of 10 men and seven out of 10 women were overweight or became overweight. But despite being more prone to obesity, only 39 percent of men are on a diet or would try to diet to lose weight, as opposed to 70 percent of women.

While some men do place importance on health and weight loss, their approach is different than women, and therefore guys are hesitant to go on a diet. In fact, according to the NIH, 66 percent of men say they eat the foods they like regardless of calories, which leaves men wondering how can they eat what they want and still lose weight.

A new dieting program designed just for men marries two concepts: weight loss and good food, to help men achieve their weight-loss goals. The weight-loss program is called NutriSystem and it's available online at www.men.nutrisystem.com. The program is based on portion-controlled, lower-Glycemic-Index prepared meals, so everything is already done ahead of time.

The plan is simple and time efficient because there are no group meetings to attend. The program leaves the stress of calculating what should or shouldn't be eaten up to an expert, by providing customers with prepared meals. Men can still eat their favorites, such as burgers, pizza, hot dogs, lasagna, pot roast, tacos and scrambled eggs.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MORE TEETH TRANSLATES TO LESS HEART DISEASE

While a previous study found a link between periodontal disease and tooth loss and an increased risk of atherosclerosis and heart disease, a more recent study suggests a strong link between tooth loss and heart disease. According to the study of nearly 42,000 adults over the age of 40, heart disease was present in 4.7% of those without any tooth loss, 5.7% of those who were missing one to five teeth, and 8.5% of those with no teeth. This finding is significant, although researchers cannot pinpoint the exact cause. Tooth loss and heart disease are quite prevalent conditions. Any information that leads to a decrease of one or the other is certainly worth exploring.

If you are looking for a family dentist who understands the needs of everyone in your family as individuals and as patients, we hope you will consider us. Since there is no pain or discomfort present during the initial stages, people often ignore the signs and symptoms, believing them to be normal occurrences. Knowledge about gum disease is, therefore, imperative to dental health. If you need answers to questions about gum disease, or any other dental health care, don't hesitate to contact us at 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If gum disease is adequately addressed, tooth loss may be avoided.

National League, West All-Star Game Winners

Babe Ruth International

The Babe Ruth International League recently held its "All Star Sunday" at Adams Field.

In the 14-year-old game, the National League scored four runs in the seventh inning to capture a 10-7 victory over the American League in eight innings.

The AL jumped on top in the first inning with singles by Lamonte Toombs and Paul Reardon and a sacrifice fly by Elvin Nunez.

It scored three more times in the third on a single by Zach Dwyer, a triple to deep center by Steve Santana, a single by Tommy Petitti and a bases-clearing double by Tim Gillis.

The NL chipped away with two runs in the third and another in the fourth on singles by Sean Kelly and Ed Adams. It scored again in the sixth as Brian Joyce singled, stole second and came home on Danny Diggins' single.

The AL bounced back with one of its own in the sixth on consecutive singles by Matt Jayne, Ryan Keane and Myles Carrigan for a 7-6 lead.

However, the NL broke it open in the seventh as Kevin Mullarkey walked, stole second and scored on Kelly's double. After Lucas Reilly walked, Rich Ryan knocked both of them in with a single.

Diggins and Kelly each had two hits for the winners while Jayne and Gillis each had a pair for the AL.

Kelly, Ryan Bulger and Mark McCully all looked good on the mound with McCully picking up the win.

TIM GILLIS (left) of Braintree Moose and Matt Jayne of Marina Bay Skilled Nursing were named the American League and National League MVPs, respectively, in the recent 14-year-old Babe Ruth International League All-Star game at Adams Field. The NL won, 10-7.

Sports

Jayne pitched three strong innings in a losing effort. Jayne and Gillis were selected as the game's MVPs.

In the 15-year-old game, the West defeated the East, 6-5, behind the slugging of Toombs (double, single, two RBI), Kevin Zagrodny (single, three stolen bases, two runs) and Pat Watkins (single, two RBI).

The pitching combination of Sean McDonald, Ben Leahy and Steve Shattuck was just enough to take the one-run victory.

The East made it close as it came up with four runs in the third inning on a Richie Shea single, a walk to Steve Barresi and consecutive singles by Jimmy Holcomb and Dave Hennessey with Hennessey scoring on a ground out.

Diego Arredondo pitched two scoreless innings for the East while Toombs pitched a scoreless seventh for the winners to notch the save.

Will Head was superb in a losing effort, striking out seven all-stars in three innings. He was justly rewarded by winning the game's MVP award.

Earlier in the day, Myles Riddell of Graeber, Davis & Cantwell and James Wilbur of State Street Global Advisors received the Rookie of the Year awards. Also, Watkins of Graeber, Davis & Cantwell was named the MVP of the entire playoffs.

PAT WATKINS of Graeber, Davis & Cantwell was named the MVP of the Babe Ruth International League playoffs.

Tourneys Benefit Jimmy Fund

Two golf tournaments will be held at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy to benefit the Jimmy Fund.

Shannon's Tournament will take place Friday beginning at 8 a.m. Entry fee is $100. The Nancy G. Smith-Swift Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Wednesday, Aug. 16, starting at 7 a.m. Entry fee is $125.

Each year Jimmy Fund Golf, the nation's oldest and largest grassroots golf program for charity, brings together hundreds of volunteers and thousands of golfers who are united in their love for the game of golf and their desire to fund cancer research.

Starting with individual benefit tournaments dating back more than 50 years, just after the Jimmy Fund was founded, Jimmy Fund Golf has steadily grown to more than 150 tournaments annually since it was formerly organized in 1983.

In 2005, Jimmy Fund Golf events collectively raised $5.5 million. All tournament proceeds support cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston. For more information, call 866-521-GOLF.

Gallagher Family Hosting Golf Tournament Aug. 26

The Gallagher family of Quincy will be hitting the greens once again in memory of one of their own.

They will host the eighth annual golf tournament in honor of the late Charles Francis Gallagher Saturday, Aug. 26, at Presidents Golf Course with a banquet to follow at the Common Market.

Joan Gallagher, who is organizing this year's event, said her father taught many relatives the game of golf before he died eight years ago.

Fifty-two family members will gather on the golf course for what serves as a reunion, including those from California, New York, Connecticut and the Vineyard who were raised in Quincy.

The family donated proceeds from the tournament to a scholarship at Sacred Heart School in the past. This year, the proceeds will benefit a Vietnamese orphanage.

FUEL MILEAGE IN THE REAL WORLD

Consumers who take notice of the Environmental Protection Agency's fuel economy numbers on the sticker of new vehicles are likely to find that the fuel-mileage estimates seldom measure up. That is because the EPA fails to consider factors such as hilly terrain, the use of air-conditioning, and starting and stopping in its testing. All that is about to change, however. In its first revision of its system of fuel economy rating in 20 years, the EPA will take the aforementioned factors into consideration. As a result, miles-per-gallon are likely to decrease 10%-20% for city driving and up to 15% for highway driving. The new, more realistic figures should provide consumers with better information to make car-buying decisions.

Getting the optimal fuel mileage from your car depends on a number of factors. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, our specialists have the automotive knowledge to get every mile possible out of every gallon you put into your tank. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we guarantee your satisfaction with any work done by us. Questions regarding fuel mileage? Call 781-843-1550. Sunoco and most major credit cars honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Easter Seals Promotes Sarah Jacobetz To Clinical Director

SARAH JACOBETZ

Sarah Jacobetz of Quincy has been promoted to clinical director at Easter Seals Massachusetts, where she has been a speech-language pathologist since August 2003.

Easter Seals provides services to people with disabilities and their families throughout the state.

In her new position, Jacobetz supervises and provides clinical and administrative support to Easter Seals occupational, physical and speech therapists in the Boston area. Easter Seals therapists work in a number of settings, including nursing homes, schools and adult day health programs.

Jacobetz, a speech-language pathologist, was presented with the Easter Seals Employee Spirit Award last year for her dedicated service to her clients. She worked with school-age children, young adults and nursing home patients with speech and language disabilities.

Jacobetz came to Easter Seals with broad experience in treating and studying communication disorders among child and adult patients at several hospitals and nursing facilities in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

She is a member of the American Speech-Language and Hearing Association and has a master's degree in communication sciences and disorders from the University of Pittsburgh. She graduated from Case Western Reserve University in 2000.

Easter Seals Massachusetts provides services to ensure that children and adults with disabilities have equal opportunities to live, learn, work and play. Easter Seals offers technological assistance, job training and employment services, recreational activities, rehabilitation services and public awareness programs.

TURI Seeks Grant Proposals

State Senator Michael Morrissey announces that the Toxics Use Reduction Institute (TURI) at Umass Lowell is seeking proposals for non-profit community or environmental organizations, municipal departments, or agencies in Massachusetts.

The Toxics Use Reduction Institute provides the Resources and tools to help Massachusetts companies and communities make the Commonwealth a safer place to live and work. TURI will award the grants at a maximum of $12,000 each. The deadline for proposal submissions is Aug. 30.

Neighborhood associations, labor unions, fire and police departments, civic organizations, chambers of commerce, libraries, boards of health, hospitals, health centers and public schools are all encouraged to apply. Now in its 12th year, the goal of the TURI grant program is to help organizations raise awareness of the hazards of toxic chemical use and introduce safer alternatives within their neighborhoods.

For more information, contact Rachel Massey at 978-934-3195 or by email at Rachel_Massey@uml.edu or Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494.

D & B Recipient Of Safe Practices Grant

D&B Tree Service of Quincy is the recipient of a $24,974 grant used for training staff in safe practices, from the Massachusetts Department of Industrial Accidents (DIA).

D&B provides tree care services to residential, commercial, and municipal customers.

At a recent ceremony to commemorate the event, DIA presented an award to Joe DiStasio, president of D&B, and Mark Bogan, vice president of D&B.

John Ziamba, director of labor at DIA, said: "This grant is an example of where we're taking this program. (D&B is) doing a great job maximizing their resources to protect their employees, and we applaud them for it."

Henry Swiniarski, commissioner of DIA, said that the DIA grants $800,000 annually to high-risk companies to promote safe practices. Grants are up to $25,000 each. Any company is eligible to apply for additional credit. DIA grants have affected the practices of 250,000 employees throughout Massachusetts.

Representing Senator Michael Morrissey's office, Peter Brennan, legislative aide, attended the ceremony and congratulated D&B on procuring the grant.

For more information or to apply for a grant, visit www.mass.gov/DIA.com.

The Garden Bug

Watering woes

Summer heat bakes moisture from the soil's surface. If woody plants that bloom in the spring (azaleas, rhododendrons, dogwoods, lilacs and others) don't get the water they need in August, they won't bloom well the following spring. Water gently at the base of the plant, preferably in the morning, as watering at night encourages fungus and root rot.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A more harmonious aspect favors all relationships. Family ties with mates and children are strengthened. Libra is Cupid's choice to win the amorous Aries' heart.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The bold Bull is ready to take on fresh challenges. Expect some opposition as you plow new ground — but supporters will outnumber detractors.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) An upcoming job change could mean uprooting your family to a far-distant location. Weigh all considerations carefully before making a decision one way or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A long-standing problem is resolved by a mutually agreed upon compromise. You can now focus on getting the facts you'll need for a decision you'll soon be asked to make

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat needs to be wary of what appears to be a golden investment opportunity. That "sure thing" could turn out to be nothing more than a sack of Kitty Glitter.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You give of yourself generously to help others, but right now you must allow people to help you. Confide your problems to family and trusted friends.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Relationships benefit from a strong harmonious aspect. Things go more smoothly at work. Someone you thought you'd never see again asks for a reconciliation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A minor distraction interferes with travel plans, but the delay is temporary. Meanwhile, expect to play peacemaker once again for feuding family members.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Keep that positive momentum going on the home front. Arrange your schedule to spend more time with your family. You'll soon have news about that job change.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Control that possessive tendency that sometimes goads you into an unnecessary display of jealousy. You could be creating problems where none currently exist.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new project holds some challenges you hadn't expected. But don't be discouraged; you'll find you're more prepared to deal with them than you realized.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Yours is the sign of the celestial Chemist, so don't be surprised if you experience a pleasant "chemistry" betwixt yourself and that new Leo in your life.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy being fussed over, as befits your "royal" Leonine nature. You also have a strong loyalty to family and friends.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We like this saying by Samuel Johnson: "We love to expect, and when expectation is neither disappointed or gratified, we want to be again expecting."

If you have children or grand children you know how persistently they seek the assurance of a definite time or date for goodies you promise rather vaguely. A camping trip or ball game outing "sometime" is not good enough. They want to know exactly when – and how many days is it?

This is the human joy of anticipation, which is almost always a greater joy than consumation, if only because it extends over a longer period. We have heard it said that man is a goal oriented animal. He anticipates, he looks forward, he hopes, he desires.

"Of all the forces that make for a better world, none is so indispensable, none so powerful, as hope. Without hope men are only half alive. With hope they dream and ink and work." . . . Charles Sawyer

Registration Open For Chabad Hebrew School

Registration is now open to students of the Chabad Hebrew School, 1356 Quincy Dr., for the 2006-07 school year.

Starting in September, classes will be Sundays, and offered to children 5-13 years of age.

The school will teach South Shore Jewish children to embrace their Jewish roots, and gain a sense of Jewish pride, no matter their level of observance or affiliation.

The school will provide an academic environment where children will acquire a broad knowledge of Judaism through a motivating and challenging venue. Through Hebrew reading, writing, Jewish history, holidays and more, the students will gain appreciation for the values and traditions of their heritage.

"Our school's underlying approach is for the children to enjoy the time spent at Hebrew School so that they are left with positive experiences, and a greater appreciation for Jewish education," said Morah Bronstein, director of Chabad's Hebrew School.

The program is blended with games, incentives, crafts, dramatics, family celebrations and other exciting extra curricular activities.

Scholarships are available, and no student will be turned down for lack of funds.

To schedule an appointment or to visit, call 617-850-5935 or email shevybronstein@gmail.com.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known To Fail)
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herin you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herin that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all the things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine." The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. Thank you. P.J. 8/10

Test Detectors Mounted On Two Towers

Is Wind Energy A Possibility Here?

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Wind detectors have been mounted on the Quarry Hills and Police Towers to calculate whether renewable wind energy is a possibility for Quincy.

The data-collecting cups (anemometers) and wind vanes were mounted by participants of the wind studies program at UMass Amherst, which is directed by Sally Wright. The anemometers spin on "booms" which extend from the towers at different heights. The spinning increases the higher they are mounted.

The project uses pre-existing devices at the weather station on Thomp-

'Cab Drivers Struggling' To Make A Living'

50-Cent Taxi Gas Surcharge Granted By Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

"Cab drivers are struggling to make a living" said License Board Chairman Joseph Shea at Tuesday's meeting as the board voted unanimously in favor of a 50 cent gasoline surcharge.

Wayne McCulley, representative of Yellow Cab of Quincy told the board that the cab company did not want to raise the rates, so the surcharge, which will offset the rise in gasoline prices will go to the drivers and not the cab company.

McCulley said that sometime cabs are the only form of transportation used by the elderly especially he said to go to the doctors or to the market. He said many others use cabs to go to the airport. He said that Boston adopted the plan last year.

Shea, who said he hoped the surcharge would be "temporary" said he discussed the issue with the other cab companies and said there are 90 cabs in he city of Quincy.

McCully explained that when you enter the cab, there will be a sign displayed stating the 50 cent surcharge. He said he hoped it would be in effect by Sept. 21.

He said the weights and measures department is due to check the meters by that time. He said when you now enter the cab the fare begins at $1.75 and with the surcharge it will read $2.25.

McCully said in all the 35 years he had been in the business, he never had to do this and said those in the trucking industry and the airlines are also struggling.

He said it doesn't matter what the distance is, the price will still be the same.

QHS Home Opener

'New' Stadium Ready For Football Sept. 22

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy High School football team can expect to entertain Falmouth in its home opener Friday, Sept. 22, at 7 p.m. on the brand new carpet of a rehabilitated Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

And North Quincy High School will open against Boston Latin in the same revamped venue the following evening, Saturday, Sept. 23.

The venerable playing field, home to the city's high school, pro and amateur football teams since 1938, is that close to completion after a reconstruction that began last April.

Excavation work has been completed, drainage installed and underground work finished.

Curbing and wall installation will begin later this

Walter White Takes Brookline Position

WALTER WHITE

Walter White, who was building inspector of Quincy for seven years until he failed to win reappointment in February, 2004, began a new job Monday as building inspector of Brookline.

White joins Lester Gerry, the former Quincy traffic engineer, who is now the highway superintendent of Brookline.

White, a 1971 graduate of North Quincy High School and a former state trooper who lives in Milton, said he plans to serve out his term as president of the Quincy Rotary Club, which expires next June.

Minimum Wage Increases First Time Since 2001

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

The current minimum wage of $6.75 per hour will raise to $7.50 per hour, effective Jan. 1, and will raise again to $8 per hour Jan. 1 2008.

Senator Michael Morrissey announced that the Legislature overrode Governor Mitt Romney's veto of the minimum wage increase before formal business concluded for this year's legislative session, July 31.

"I feel this increase will help to improve the quality of life for our lowest wage earners while taking into account the needs of the small business community as well," said Morrissey. "Minimum wage earners in Massachusetts have not received an increase since 2001, while the cost of living rises each year. A total of 486,000 hardworking individuals statewide will see the benefits of this increase."

The Massachusetts Chapter of the National Organization for Women states that over 60 percent of those earning minimum wage in the Commonwealth are women, with a large majority of those women living in poverty.

The National Association for Social Workers said that the majority of minimum wage workers are adults, and many are the heads of their households.

"Raising the minimum wage to $8 per hour will mean a raise of over $2,000 per year for workers such as child-care providers, health care aides, security guards and janitors," said Morrissey.

Among the regional states, Connecticut's minimum wage will be $7.40 and New York's minimum wage will be $7.15 Jan. 1. Currently Vermont's minimum wage is $7.25.

Mature Driver Safety Course Sept. 7, 14

A two-day safe driving course for the mature driver will be held Sept. 7 and Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Marina Place, 4 Seaport Dr., North Quincy.

The course is $10, payable in advance. Checks may be made payable to the AARP. Lunch will be served.

Gutro, McNamee Seek 'Friends Of Wollaston Beach'

DOUG GUTRO

BRIAN McNAMEE

Everybody needs a friend and, if City Councillor Doug Gutro and Brian McNamee have their way, Wollaston Beach will soon have a lot of them.

Gutro, the Council president from Ward 5, and McNamee, the councillor from Ward 6, will host a neighborhood forum Wednesday, Aug. 23, at 7 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School, 222 Fenno St., to form a "Friends of Wollaston Beach."

The aim, said Gutro, is to form a citizen-centered organization similar to those in Revere, East Boston and Lynn/Nahant to clean beaches owned by the state, advocate for improvements and organize activities and events,

Gutro and McNamee hope the Aug. 23 meeting will bring out residents, boaters and business people who are interested in helping to create a charter, bylaws, officers, a membership and mission statement and other just interested in joining.

The area is currently undergoing a $7 million state-funded Beach Improvement Project and city investments in fixing area sewers and roadways.

"Now is the perfect time to establish a Friends group that will play a stewardship role at Wollaston Beach," said Gutro.

He noted that a citywide survey by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission in the late 1990s showed that nearly two-thirds of beachgoers across the city chose Wollaston Beach as their recreational destination.

"There are so many people in this city who feel just as passionate about Wollaston Beach as I do," said Gutro. "Whether they walk or run, sit on the beach wall, sun bathe or swim, we want their help.

"This new Friends group will allow these folks to help improve Wollaston Beach for generations to come."

McNamee agreed.

"Wollaston Beach can be a tremendous asset to our community," he said. "I represent many people who want to see Wollaston Beach once again be the gem of Boston Harbor.

"A Friends group is the perfect vehicle to allow people to have a say in how their beach is maintained, what events are held there and where the state and city government should be investing scarce tax dollars to make it a welcoming environment for all Quincy residents."

Those interested in becoming part of the Friends of Wollaston Beach but cannot attend the meeting, should leave their names and addresses with the City Council office by calling 617-376-1341 or e-mailing Councillors Gutro or McNamee.

QEN Collects Over 3,000 Signatures

Community Preservation Act Close To November Ballot

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Members of the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) have collected 3,300 signatures in an effort to get the Community Preservation Act (CPA) on the November state election ballot in Quincy.

Another 400 are needed to guarantee the CPA a spot on the ballot.

If adopted, the CPA will fund the preservation of land for open space, the renovation of historical sites, and the creation and support of additional affordable housing.

At a press conference Monday at the new City Hall, Steve Perdios of QEN said, "(CPA is) a funding source that's designed to work towards protecting those three areas handsomely. The three areas that don't see a lot of funding on a regular basis, and these are three areas that especially a city like Quincy really needs.

A sub-committee of the City Council was formed last year to explore CPA options. Members include Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, Councillor Joseph Finn, and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

The CPA would enact a less than one percent surcharge on residential and commercial property. The increase will average at $26.50 annually. The tax will be exempted to the first $100,000 of assessed property value, low income residents, and low to moderate income senior residents. Seniors over 60 years of age, with one person living in their home, would be exempt from the surcharge if they earn less than $58,870 annually, or $67,280 per year for two people. State funding is expected to match the total CPA funding.

"We just turned in another almost 500 signatures to the city of Quincy election office, and this gets us very close to the number of signatures needed to get the Community Preservation Act on ballot here in Quincy.

"(CPA) is a state law that was enacted in 2000 and it doesn't become active at the local level until it is voted on by local constituents," said Perdios. "And in the state of Massachusetts, 111 communities statewide out of the 351 have already signed onto it.

"On the south shore just about every city or town with the exception of Hull and Milton, and I think that might be it, I think every other community has not only voted on it, but they've adopted it. And Quincy hasn't yet voted on it. The QEN is pretty excited to be a player in getting it on the ballot for Quincy.

"Every dollar that you raise is matched to a certain degree up to 100 percent matched from the state. So you're bringing state dollars into the city of Quincy, and that's important. Right now we have our tax dollars going into other communities because we're paying into this state fund but we're not bringing any of it back in because we haven't adopted the CPA so it's very important to Quincy," Perdios said.

For more information, or to volunteer for the campaign, call Perdios at 617-877-5975.

Quincy Woman Aids Jamaica After Hurricanes

Courtney Breslin of Quincy recently spent two weeks volunteering in Jamaica's Blue Mountains to counter the after effects of their hurricane season.

The Mount Vernon area of Jamaica was particularly damaged by hurricanes, and Breslin assisted in the construction of a retaining wall for a damaged road.

Breslin's team was coordinated by the nonprofit Global Volunteers, an international development organization that offers short-term service opportunities in 20 countries around the world.

Breslin accounted her experiences in Jamaica:

"Even though some of them are very poor, it doesn't mean they are unhappy," said Breslin. "They actually were the happiest people I've ever met. I learned a lot from them.

"I loved the children and being able to play with them. The adults in the community were very welcoming and kind, and those my age became friends. Everyone I met was very special.

"I was surprised that there is very little age separation. The teenagers in Mount Vernon treat the five to 10-year-olds like equals, and even the adults do this as well. At home that's not the case.

During free time in the evenings and on weekends, Breslin and other volunteers experienced Jamaican culture sampling the food and visiting local farms, and spent a day climbing Mount Albion.

For more information about the Global Volunteers organization or to volunteer, call 800-487-1074 or visit www.globalvolunteers.org.

Looking for an investment that's guaranteed to grow?

What's the main problem with stock market investments and mutual funds? Simple – you just can't be sure that your money will grow. In fact, you can't even be sure that your principal won't shrink. And while no one would deny that market-based investments should at least be considered as part of a diversified investment plan, sometimes you have money you don't want to put at risk in any way. Maybe it's money you're going to need soon. Maybe it's your IRA or Roth IRA. Maybe you're a conservative saver who simply wants investments that are guaranteed to grow. We understand. Which is why we don't sell stocks. We don't sell mutual funds. We don't sell annuities. Colonial Federal is a community bank providing competitive-rate options for today's conservative saver. If you're looking for a safe investment that's 100% guaranteed to grow, come see us. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 18, 1590, John White, the governor of the Roanoke Island colony in present-day North Carolina, returns from a supply trip to England to find no trace of the 100 or so colonists he left behind. The only clue to their mysterious disappearance was the word "Croatoan" carved into the palisade that had been built around the settlement.

• On Aug. 14, 1893, the world's first automobile license plates were issued in Paris, France. However, plates were not issued in the United States for a few more years. The city of Boston was the first to require its motorists to hold a license and register their vehicle.

• On Aug. 16, 1923, though its late founder wasn't always the best friend of labor, Carnegie Steel established the eight-hour day for its workers.

• On Aug. 19, 1934, the first All-American Soap Box Derby is held in Dayton, Ohio. To this day, kids from the United States and several foreign countries arrive each year with their home-built racers. Boys and girls, ages 9 through 16, are allowed to compete.

• On Aug. 15, 1945, World War II gasoline rationing in America ends. Rationing was just one of the special measures taken in the U.S. during wartime. Civilian auto production virtually ceased after the attack on Pearl Harbor, as the U.S. automotive industry turned to war production.

• On Aug. 20, 1962, the first Ford Thunderbird is produced, a 1963 model. The Thunderbird was promoted as a "personal" car rather than a sports car, so it never had to compete against imports. Its name was eventually shortened to "T-Bird," as mentioned in the famous Beach Boys song, "I Get Around."

• On Aug. 17, 1978, the Double Eagle II completes the first trans-Atlantic balloon flight when it lands in a barley field near Paris, 137 hours after lifting off from Presque Isle, Maine. The helium-filled balloon flew 3,233 miles in the six-day odyssey.

Low Turnout Seen For Primaries

City Clerk Joseph Shea expects to have quite a few unused ballots left over after the state primary election Sept. 19.

SHEA

He will have some 54,000 ballots ready for the election just in case that miracle election occurs when every registered voter actually votes.

A ballot is required for every registered voter.

But he sees something like only 22 to 25 percent of the voters actually turning out.

"And about 90 percent of them will be Democrats," he says.

Reason for that, he says, is that Quincy is still a Democratic town and the Democrats have a good three-way race for the governor nomination between Christopher Gabrieli, Deval Patrick and Thomas Reilly.

There are also three contenders for the lieutenant governor nominations: Deborah Goldberg, Timothy Murray and Andrea Silbert.

And Secretary of State William Galvin has a primary challenger in John Bonifaz.

Nothing very exciting on the Republican ballot.

Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey already has the GOP nomination for governor in her hands with no challenger.

The only contest is between Kenneth Chase and Kevin Scott for the U.S. Senator nomination.

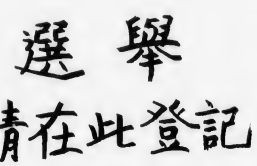
Absentee ballots are already available at the Election Department for those who won't be here to vote on Sept. 19.

Quincy currently has 53,894 registered voters of which 24,895 are Democrats, 6,225 Republicans, 22,330 unenrolled (independents) and 440 of various small parties.

The numbers will increase somewhat as non-voters register for the Sept. 19 primary. Deadline to register is Wednesday, Aug. 30.

"Residents can register weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and the Election Department will be open until 8 p.m. on Aug. 30," Shea notes.

Because of the city's large Asian population, he again this year is printing posters identifying the locations of the city's 30 polling places and other information in Chinese and Vietnamese.



THE ELECTION DEPARTMENT has posters and signs in Chinese and Vietnamese to aid the Asian population. This sign in Chinese reads: Register Here To Vote.

Shea says there are about 21,000 Asians of which some 5,000 are registered voters.

"The posters will be placed at each of the polling precincts, in public buildings and in windows of businesses with high visibility," he says.

He wants a problem-free election.

LINDA TRACY who has been living on the Cape for the past nine years is getting homesick for Quincy and hoping to move back.

TRACY

Linda, who ran unsuccessfully against Pat McDermott for the Ward 3 City Council seat in 1997, says, "My heart really belongs in Quincy."

She says she has no thoughts of running for office again but she hasn't completely abandoned politics.

She's doing some campaign work for Atty. Gen. Tom Reilly in his bid for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Incidentally, she recently celebrated a birthday and isn't shy about telling you which one.

"It was my 58th," she says.

To which she adds:

"Age is like underwear. It creeps up on you."

BEALS

Goes like this:

"Be very careful if you make a woman cry because God counts her tears.

"The woman came out of a man's rib. Not from his feet to be walked on. Not from his head to be superior, but from his side to be equal. Under the arm to be protected and next to the heart to be loved."

Sharron thinks it's beautiful and hopes you do, too.

Free Prostate Screening At QMC Sept. 19

Furthering efforts to bring vital cancer screenings to uninsured and underinsured South Shore residents, Quincy Medical Center (QMC) and the Marie A. Curry Fund will host a free evening Prostate Cancer Screening Clinic Tuesday, Sept. 19 in its Ambulatory Care Department, 114 Whitewell St.

The American Cancer Society recommends annual prostate cancer screening for males beginning at age 50 and earlier, if at an increased risk. Screening attendees will receive PSA (prostate-specific antigen) blood test and a digital rectal exam (DRE), performed by a Board Certified Urologist on staff at Quincy Medical Center.

The screening is free, but pre-registration is required. To schedule an appointment for the free Prostate Cancer Screening, call the toll-free, 24-hour Physician Referral Service at 877-479-CARE.

Student Reading Skills Honed At Ward 4 Center

The Ward 4 Community Center is offering a back-to-school brush up on reading skills for students entering grades one to three or new readers.

The program, taught by Rita Brutto, a certified elementary reading teacher, focuses on basic skills and will run from Monday, Aug. 28 through Friday, Sept. 1, from 9 to 10:15 a.m.

The cost is $35 per child, which includes all materials needed for the course.

Registration may be made by calling the Center at 617-786-0696. The deadline for registering is today (Thursday).

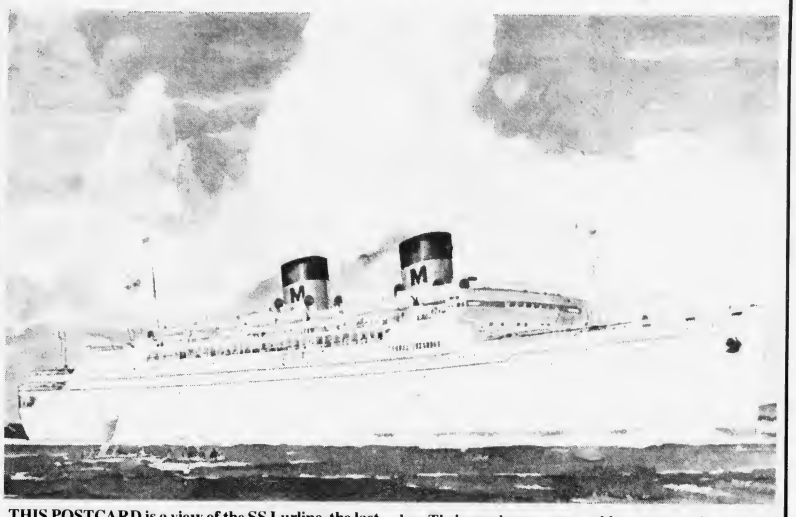
Tree Seminar At Park Dept. Saturday

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, will give a free seminar entitled "Trees in the Urban Environment" Saturday at 9 a.m.

The seminar will include information about tree care and maintenance and species selection and will be followed by a walking tour of the trees in Merrymount Park.

Participants should meet at the Park Department, One Merrymount Parkway. For more information, call 617-376-1251.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS POSTCARD is a view of the SS Lurline, the last of three identical luxury liners built for the Matson Lines by the Bethlehem Steel Co. at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. The first, the Mariposa, was delivered in December 1931; the second, the Monterey, in April 1932; and this, perhaps the most renown, the Lurline in January 1933. Accommodating 722 passengers, all in first-class suites, these 631-foot fully air-conditioned liners were the most luxurious in the world. The spacious cabins, gold-trimmed, mother-of-pearl lined dining rooms and teak decks were all fitted-out by local craftsmen here in Quincy. Matson used the three ships for their luxury South Pacific and Hawaiian Island cruises from San Francisco and Los Angeles. Their opulence was world renown and attracted famous Hollywood stars and wealthy cruise lovers from around the U.S. and Europe for nearly a decade. And then World War II abruptly ended it all. In less than two weeks after Pearl Harbor was attacked, these ships were stripped of their expensive furnishings, converted into troop carriers and were on their way to the war zone. After the war, Matson struggled to revive its luxury cruise business, but the expense to refit, staff and maintain these ships, along with competition from the airlines, forced them out of passenger service in the 1960s. Legion, Defense Department Agree On 'Heroes To Hometown' Program

The American Legion and the Defense Department have formalized the "Heroes to Hometowns" program under which veterans of the old wars help the veterans of the new.

Their Memorandum of Understanding establishes a partnership between the Legion's National Headquarters and the Deputy Undersecretary of Defense for Military Community and Family Policy.

"Our involvement in this program is what the American Legion has always been about — veterans helping veterans," said former National Commander John Comer of Quncy.

"The American Legion had its origin in 1919. At the end of World War I, a bunch of doughboys got together to make sure returning vets were taken care of."

The "Heroes to Hometowns" transition program will start setting up a support network and coordinating and coordinating resources before a severely injured service member returns home.

Child care, temporary housing, errand-running, adapting homes or vehicles, spiritual support, government claims assistance and financial aid are just some of what the Legion posts will provide.

"The American Legion has nearly 15,000 posts around the world to help our returning heroes," said Comer.

The Legion's national headquarters now has a full time director, David Marsh, staffing the "Heroes to Hometowns" office, which is located in the Pentagon Military Severely Injured Center.

Thankful For Support Of John 'Okie" O'Connell Scholarship

We would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank The Beachcomber personnel, especially Kimberly, for their heartfelt inspiration and organization in establishing the first annual John "Okie" O'Connell Scholarship Fund that was held on June 10. Their personal touch to all the details encompassed in the music, food, silent auction, raffles and personal mementos and souvenirs were remarkable and appreciated by all.

Words alone cannot express our heartfelt gratitude to them for helping to continue John's legacy by emphatically stressing the need to stop violent acts against humanity. Your cooperation in this endeavor will never be forgotten. Please accept our humble and heartfelt gratitude.

We would also like to thank the Quincy community and all of Okie's friends and their families for their continued love and support. Your kindness will remain with us forever.

Sincerely,

Matt and Mary O'Connell and Family

Randolph Woman Submits Winning Theme For 54th Christmas Parade

"Christmas On Parade" will be the theme of this year's 54th annual Christmas Parade scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 26.

Patricia O'Leary of Randolph submitted the winning theme in a contest sponsored by the Christmas Festival Committee, General Chairman George White announced.

White said the theme will provide float builders a wide range in planning and constructing their floats for this year's parade.

O'Leary will ride in the parade in an open convertible with a banner recognizing her as the theme winner.

She will also be presented

PATRICIA O'LEARY

a gift from the Christmas Festival Committee at the awards ceremony in the North Quincy High School auditorium following the parade.

White noted the first parade was in 1952 under the leadership of the late Rev. Thomas Tierney of St. John's Church.

The parade, he said, was a small, one-mile "around the block" route. It is now approximately three miles long down Hancock Street from Quincy Center to North Quincy. It averages 95 to 100 units including bands, floats, color guards, specialty units, Shriner organization, Hallamore Clydesdales and others.

Rain date for this year's parade is Sunday, Dec. 3

The Festival Committee is also working on plans for other annual Christmas season events:

Turning on the Christmas lighting, Friday, Nov. 24.

Santa's arrival with three elves by parachute, Saturday, Nov. 26.

The Nativity Pageant at United First Parish Church, Sunday, Dec. 11.

And the elementary school Holiday Poster Contest.

Local Band Hits Their Groove With CD

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Local blues group Hoodoo Revelator is building momentum earning airtime with their CD Do Me Right.

Resident and bassist Jeff Fabrizio said their music is "something people can get up and move to."

Other band members include Jim Chilson on guitar, Mike Chipperini on harmonica, vocalist Jay Scheffler also on guitar, and Dave Darling providing percussion.

Do Me Right is a 10 song compilation of original music and covers. It was featured on Morgan Huke's program "Folk'n Good Music," on WMFO 91.5FM, on "Blues on Sunday" with Holly Harris on WBOS 92.9FM, and "Sunday Morning Blues" with Carter Allan on WZLX 100.7FM.

The band classifies themselves as a mixture of different styles including blues, roots music, rhythm and blues, and "bo didley-esque" rock n' roll.

The band members have jobs outside of the music business, and do practices and gigs on their on time. "We all have day jobs, but we all have a strong passion for this," said Fabrizio. "It's quite a time commitment, but it's worth it."

Although they stress not covering a lot of any one musician, Fabrizio said they enjoy covering Muddy Waters, John Lee Hooker, and early Jay Gyles Band.

The band performs at south shore establishments, and recently The Salt Box Tavern, Quincy.

For more information on the band and tour dates, visit their website www.hoodoorev.com, or their MySpace site www.myspace.com/hoodoorevelator.

Quincy August Moon Festival At President's Plaza Sunday

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) invites the public to its 19th annual August Moon Festival at Kam Man Marketplace at President's Plaza in Quincy Sunday, Aug. 20.

Admission to the festival, which is the largest Asian cultural event on the South Shore, is free and will feature a schedule of live entertainment from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"The celebration of the festival reflects the increasing growth in Quincy's Asian population," said Frank Poon, chairperson of this year's event. "Through this event, the Asian community is able to celebrate and preserve its unique heritage while sharing its traditions with the community at large."

The August Moon Festival is the second biggest event on the Asian Lunar calendar after the New Year and an important date for the local Asian community.

"The City of Quincy is proud to become one of the sponsors of this important community event," said Mayor William Phelan. "The August Moon Festival is a fantastic celebration of culture in Quincy and I applaud the event organizers for putting together another wonderful day."

An event for all ages, the August Moon Festival will feature among other things, art-making, lively lion and dragon dances, games and activities for children and seniors, and a wide range of Asian musical acts.

Local restaurants will serve a variety of foods including Chinese, Japanese and Indian cuisine.

Shaolin Hung Gar Martial Arts Academy, Gund Kwok, Women's Lion Dance troupe will highlight performances which will include traditional Asian dance, young people modeling cultural fashions, and musicians demonstrating unusual and exquisite Chinese musical instruments.

A raffle highlighted by prizes, including a Toyota Scion and round-trip international airline tickets, will help provide funding to QARI to increase its capacity to provide quality services and programs to the Asian community in Quincy.

In addition, local business owners and social service organizations, such as South Shore Elder Services, will participate by setting up vendor and informational booths.

With an estimated 8,000 people expected to attend the festival and no on-site parking available, the public is encouraged to take public transportation to the event. Free shuttle buses will transport festival-goers from various off-site parking locations, including the Quincy Center and North Quincy T stations, to the festival.

As in previous years, sponsors and volunteers are essential to the success of the event. Partnerships with these organizations, businesses and individuals provide QARI with opportunities to offer much needed services such as multilingual information and referral services, English and citizenship classes, and the Lunar New Year Festival and August Moon Festival to the community.

"We are grateful for the commitment and support of our grand sponsors, Kam Man Foods and Mohegan Sun, and also to the City of Quincy," said John Brothers, executive director of QARI. "With their invaluable support, we hope to build on the success of our previous festivals to bring together the community to celebrate and increase awareness of Asian cultures, and better serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American community."

THE 19TH ANNUAL August Moon Festival will be held Aug. 20 at Kam Man Marketplace at President's Plaza, Quincy. The free event will featnre a schedule of live entertainment from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Fallon Ambulance Awards EMT Scholarships To 3 QHS Grads

Fallon Ambulance Service, the region's largest independent, family-owned ambulance service provider, has named Laina Crispo, Concetta Brancaccio and Sherri Ng as the recipients of the 2006 scholarships for aspiring Emergency Medical Technicians.

Crispo, Brancaccio and Ng are all 2006 graduates of Quincy High School and will attend a three month training program at Eastern Medical Educators Center in Quincy.

The three young women are pursuing careers in the field of medicine.

The students were chosen based on letters of recommendation, accomplishments, and an essay explaining why they would like to pursue a career in the field of medicine. As part of the program, Fallon provides employment to candidates who successfully complete training.

"We are pleased to offering these deserving students an opportunity to pursue a career in the medical field," said Peter Racicot, senior vice president of Business Development. "I began my career at Fallon as an EMT and it is an excellent way to learn the medical field; some choose to remain with it as a lifetime career, while others use the opportunity to gain knowledge and later pursue a career as a nurse, doctor or some of the many opportunities in the field of medicine."

Fallon Ambulance, headquartered at 111-115 Brook Rd., West Quincy, employs more than 400 personnel, and operates more than 100 vehicles. Fallon Ambulance is the 9-1-1 provider for the municipalities of Milton, Quincy, Brookline, Weymouth, Braintree and Dedham.

For additional information about Fallon Ambulance Services or programs that the company offers, call Racicot at (617) 745-2117 or visit www.fallonambulance.com.

'New' Stadium Ready For Football Sept. 22

week followed by the placement of 10,000 tons of crushed stone to serve as a base for the synthetic turf carpet.

The carpet, known as Sport-Tex Field, the same artificial grass surface used by the Baltimore Ravens, will be laid the week of Sept. 4 and will take two weeks to complete.

The new field, which will be permanently marked for high school and youth football, soccer and lacrosse, is designed to allow increased use and take some of the burden off other fields.

The cost of the rehab project will be $414,000, funded by revenues from the city's hotel/motel tax. Much of the preparation work was done by the Park Department to save money.

The project is part of Mayor William Phelan's Natural Resources Improvement Initiative, a $10 million investment in the environment and park system.

With the coming of the new field, rainouts of sporting events due to poor field conditions will be a thing of the past as the new drainage system is equipped to discharge at a capacity of 10 inches of water an hour.

Once the stone base is laid and attached to the curbing around the perimeter, the field will be in-filled with sand and rubber pellets before the turf is laid down, creating a premium playing surface while meeting safety standards.

New parking areas will be added at the rear of the entrance, complete with handicapped designated spots and new paved walkways encompassing both the home and visitors' sides, meeting ADA requirements.

In addition to sporting events, the stadium will continue to host high school graduations, concerts and other special events.

WORKERS prepare the floor of Veteran Memorial Stadium to receive the 10,000 tons of crush stone base for the artificial turf carpet. It is hoped the 68-year-old stadium will be ready for Quincy High School's opener against Falmouth Sept. 22.

Bereavement Support Group At Quincy Medical

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St. will host a free, seven-week Bereavement Support Group, beginning Wednesday Sept. 13.

The support group will meet Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for the seven consecutive weeks. The group is designed to help adults who are coping with the recent death of an adult loved one to alleviate feelings of grief and begin the healing process.

"Grieving people often feel isolated in their pain and perceive that the world only wants to see and hear from happy people," said Rev. Esther Bowen, director of Pastoral Care at Quincy Medical Center. "If you need an emotionally safe place where you can be yourself and process your grief experience, then perhaps this support group may work for you."

The program is free, however, pre-registration is required. For more information or to register, contact the Quincy Medical Center Pastoral Care Department at 617-376-5502.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board Tuesday took the following action.

•Granted a permit to Kim BiBona for the Joseph Conti, Jr. motorcycle road race Sept. 24 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. starting at Pat Flanagan's in the ParkingWay and back there for a cook-out. Proceeds will benefit Quincy Public Schools and the Germantown Center, as well as other charities.

•Continued until Sept. 12 a request from Jimmy Liang and the Chinese Association, 665 Hancock St. for their Induction Ceremony Sept. 17 from 11 to 2 p.m. Liang proposed to close Cushing and Beale Sts., but Police Chief Robert Crowley suggested no parking on Cushing and Hancock St. during the ceremonies.

•Granted a one day permit to Gayle Mackay for a first time Country Fair, Saturday, Sept. 30 from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. The fair will include a scavenger hunt, food contest, games, and Idol contest, and chicken barbecue.

•Granted a permit to Tom Dolan and Bob Keezer, Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, for their third annual 5k Road Race, Sunday, Oct. 1 at 10 a.m.

•Granted a one day permit to the Quincy Lodge of Elks for a motorcycle run Sept. 16 from Quincy to Marshfield. Rain date is Sept. 23.

•Granted a one day extension of premises to the Five Spices Restaurant, 1250 Hancock St., Aug. 26 from 6 to 10 p.m. in the Atrium.

•Granted a one day extension of premise to Richard Rizzotti of The Fowler House, 1049 Hancock St. for the second annual JT's Thunder Charity Motorcycle Run, Aug. 27 from 12:30 to 5 p.m.

•Granted a common victualer license to Christina Brats, manager of The Chocolate Dive, Inc. doing business as Pure Chocolate Boutique, 102 Franklin St. Bartous said she will feature home-made chocolate, chocolate coffee drinks, gifts, and hopes to open by Oct. 1

They will also cater to weddings and other parties.

•Granted a beer and wine license to Newport Liquors, Inc. 243-247 Atlantic St. doing business as Richard's Market. (it was formerly Charlie's Market) Frederick Stevenson will be manager.

•Granted a transfer of stock at Pizza Hut of America, Inc. 627 Washington St. Michelle Marabelli is manager.

•Granted a change of managers at the Wollaston Yacht Club, 692 Quincy Shore Drive from Kathleen Cuthbert to David Gamsby.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said although the bar is closed at 1 a.m. he has observed persons drinking on the deck. Robert Bennett, commodore of the club said the persons drinking there are owners of boats moored at the club. Crowley said that no drinking will be allowed on the deck after 1 a.m. Jay Duca told Bennett that all maintenance problems be corrected by Oct. 31 in order to renew the club's liquor license.

•Elias Ghossoub, owner of the Sea Street Getty, 346-350 Sea St. was told to "get rid of all junk cars" by Police Chief Crowley following complaints from neighbors.

•Placed on file a hearing regarding complaints about conditions at US Gas, 588 Adams St. Owner G. Audi said the only problem he had which has been corrected was the dumpster which is now a new one. Neighbors had complained of cars at the corner of Connell and Adams Sts.

Tall Tales, Weapons Featured In Programs At Crane Library

Big Ryan's Tall Tales will p[resent a program of storytelling, music, movement, puppets and interactive play Friday, Aug. 18 at 10:30 a.m. in the large meeting room at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The program is for youngsters up to 4 years of age and is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Two instructors from Guard Up will present an historic weapons demonstration on the main library lawn Saturday, Aug. 19, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Weapons on display will include Japanese samurai swords, a Chinese Singing Sword and a miniature version of a working English trebuchet, which will launch water balloons at target on the lawn.

The instructors will suit up in full armor for a medieval sword fight.

In case of rain the program will be moved indoors. It is for children of all ages but parents must stay with their kids. The sponsor is the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

"Tissue paper butterflies" will be the project for the week of Aug. 21 in the Arts-to-go series at the main library and the three branch libraries.

Youngsters from toddlers to teen agers can drop in at any time from 2 to 4 p.m. and create a project.

NOT-SO-FUN FOOT FACTS

As one of the body's most complex structures, accounting for 25% of all bones in the body, the foot is statistically more likely to have problems than other body parts. And it does. Three out of four Americans suffer serious foot problems during their lives. Foot problems tend to be acquired through poor biomechanics, stress, overuse, and improper footwear. Only a small percentage of the U.S. population is born with foot disorders. Primarily because of wearing high heels, women are four times more likely than men to experience foot troubles. Arthritis and diabetes account for a large percentage of the country's foot problems. Arthritis is the most common cause of disability in the United States, and diabetes rates are skyrocketing.

We're concerned about all aspects of your health, especially in the health of your feet. When your feet are painful, cramping, and uncomfortable; have sores that won't heal; or are otherwise trying to tell you something, don't hesitate to call us. Our goal is to provide you with a comprehensive diagnosis and treatment plan so that you are out of pain and back on your feet in as short amount of time as possible. HINT: Walking regularly, wearing appropriate footwear, and receiving preventive foot care are three of the best things you can do for your feet.

Quincy Medical Center, Conway Realtors To Offer New Employee Benefits

Quincy Medical Center and Norwell based Jack Conway & Co. Realtors have joined forces to offer a new benefits program for QMC physicians, employees, and their families.

The partnership will offer Quincy Medical Center staff and their families discounts on mortgages, home buying and selling services, help with moving costs, home warranty programs, and relocation services.

"Quincy Medical Center is pleased to partner with the Conway Company in this new benefit for our valued physicians and employees," said Dr. Gary Gibbons, Quincy Medical Center President and CEO. "This new program is designed to ease some of the stress for any physicians and employees who are in the process of buying or selling property, and also to support new employees and physicians who relocate to the area for employment at Quincy Medical Center."

Conway President Richard Cahill sits on the board of Quincy Medical Center, but has also been a patient. "This hospital saved my life when I suffered pneumonia so I have a personal commitment to do everything in my power to serve the employees and their families of this fine institution," said Cahill.

Jack Conway, Chairman and CEO of the Conway Company said he definitely sees this as a win-win agreement, "Quincy Medical Center provides vital health care to the South Shore community, and we're pleased to be able to extend our services to the professional people who make that institution such an asset to the area," Conway said.

Quincy Medical Center Human Resources Director Marilyn McAllister said the initial response to the new program has been overwhelmingly positive. "We had about 150 people asking questions of Maureen McCaffrey and Dawn Stevens of Conway's Relocation Department during a recent presentation," said McAllister. "I would say our staff is extremely excited about utilizing this new benefit."

Cahill, who lives in Quincy, encouraged continued community support for Quincy Medical Center. "Having been saved from a near death experience brings home how important it is to have a community hospital like Quincy succeed. I urge people to support their local hospitals in any way they can."

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

Avoiding Foreclosure

If you're behind on your mortgage, you're in danger of losing your house and damaging your credit for years to come. How quickly that can happen depends what state you live in. Some states are more lenient than others, but if you don't act quickly, the end result will be the same.

The most important thing is to pay attention to the letters you'll get from your lender. Don't ignore them. Contact the lender and let it know your situation. Have the facts and figures in front of you: what caused you to miss payments, how much your current income is, how much you can pay. There are a number of ways you can avoid foreclosure and the resulting damage to your credit.

• Modify the loan: If you can refinance, your payments can possibly be reduced by extending the term of the loan or lowering your interest rate.

• Forebearance agreement: Ask your lender to take lower payments for a period of time. It usually won't be long, perhaps a few months, but that could allow you to get back on your feet.

• Sell the house quickly: A "short sale" means you sell for less than the market rate and won't get all your equity, but you'll be able to pay off the lender.

• Deed in lieu of foreclosure: You give the house back to the mortgage holder.

If you have a HUD loan, you have options. You might qualify for a one-time payment from FHA to bring the mortgage current. You'll sign a promissory note, and they'll put a lien on your house to be satisfied when the house is sold.

If you're facing foreclosure, it will become public knowledge when the notice is printed in the newspaper. Beware the vultures that will come to your "aid." You'll likely hear of every scam there is. A common one is an offer to take over payments; all you have to do is sign on the dotted line. Once you're out of the house, however, your "benefactor" will rent it out for a short period of time, take the money and never make the mortgage payments. The house will go to foreclosure anyway.

Best bet: Work with your lender to see if the situation can be saved.

Land Records Research Topic Aug. 30

Computer Seminar At Norfolk Registry

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer assisted land records research at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham from Wednesday, Aug. 30 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the general public. The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises.

There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"These services have proven valuable tools for our customers, and we hope that this seminar will be helpful and informative," O'Donnell said.

There is no charge for the seminar. Persons planning to attend are asked to register by phone (781-461-6116).

Annex Real Estate Announces Sales Courses

Annex Real Estate School, Inc., 49 Beale St., Wollaston, announces it is offering a four-week and a three-day real estate sales course.

The four-week, 24-hour sales course will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning Tuesday, Sept. 12. Students must attend both Tuesday and Thursday sessions for all four weeks, but many choose to attend either the morning or evening classes.

Class times are 9 a.m. to noon or 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Annex Real Estate School is also offering a three-day, 24-hour sales course during the weekend of Sept. 15-17.

Classes will be held Friday, Sept. 15 from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m.; Saturday, Sept. 16 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Sunday, Sept. 17 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Students must attend all three weekend classes in order to graduate.

The cost for the real estate sales class is the same for the four-week and three-day course: $160 for the course with an additional $40 book fee.

Course graduates qualify for an examination to become a licensed real estate salesperson in Massachusetts.

Annex Real Estate School, Inc. is accredited by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to teach real estate pre-licensing for salespersons, brokers and continuing education.

Can Magnets Find Wall Studs?

Q: I read your column about anchoring heavy objects on walls, and I wanted to pass along a stud-finding technique that I've started using to great advantage. I use powerful rare-earth magnets (which I buy from Lee Valley Tools) to locate the fastener heads in walls. Even with a little 1/4-inch diameter rare earth magnet, I can sense old nail heads through my inch-thick plaster walls. (I just ordered some 3/4-inch diameter magnets to make this easier yet.)

Once I find the first nail or screw head, I mark the location with a piece of blue masking tape and find and mark others in the same stud above and below my first mark. Then I repeat this process from side to side until I've mapped out the area I need to work in. This technique is also useful when trying to decide where to cut into drywall for new outlets or switches.

P.S. I also wanted to point out that all studs are 1 1/2-inch thick, regardless of their width (2 by 4, 2 by 6, 2 by 8, etc.) and whether they are steel or wood. — Tim G., Akron, Ohio

A: That's a technique I hadn't thought of before — especially since I've been spoiled rotten by electronic stud finders these past few years.

I was sitting here lamenting the fact that I didn't have any rare-earth magnets to test this method out, when my significant other poked his head into the doorway and said, "But we do! Remember that guy who was selling those cool 'singing magnets' at the swap meet last summer? Well, I bought a set!" And he dashed across the hall to his office to get them.

So, we just spent the past half-hour merrily running a couple of small, powerful ovoid magnets across the walls, marking where we thought the studs were indicated with a pencil. I cross-checked them afterward with the electronic stud finder. The results? So-so. Of course, a couple of mini-magnets designed for entertainment probably aren't the best products to test with.

The closer the studs were to the outside of the wall — in our fixer-upper, some are behind an inch of plaster, others are behind a quarter-inch of modern drywall — the better the read we got. The magnets located roughly half of the studs tested, while the electronic stud finder located all but three.

Many thanks for the tip, Tim! Rare-earth magnets are sold through specialty hardware retailers, but may be available at the local hardware store, too.

Hurricane Season Safety Lessons

(NAPS) With meteorologists forecasting a very active hurricane season, it is advised to know how to be prepared for an oncoming storm.

Here are tips from Geico, the National Hurricane Center and the Insurance Information Institute:

Hurricane Preparedness

• Determine escape routes and places where the family can meet.

• Know the home's vulnerability to storm surge, flooding and wind.

• Locate a safe room in the home or the safest area in the community.

• Have an out-of-state friend as a family contact.

• Plan what to do with pets if they are evacuated.

• Post emergency telephone numbers by phones. Teach children how to call 911.

• Check insurance coverage; flood damage is not usually covered by homeowners insurance.

• Trim trees to remove unhealthy or dead limbs or branches.

Emergency Supplies

• Water: one gallon daily per person for three to seven days.

• Food: enough for three to seven days.

• Nonperishable packaged or canned food/juices: foods for infants or the elderly.

• Cooking tools and fuel.

• Paper plates and plastic utensils.

• Blankets and pillows, etc.

• Clothing: seasonal and rain gear, sturdy shoes.

• First-aid kit, medicines, prescription drugs.

• Special items for babies and the elderly.

• Toiletries: hygiene items, moisture wipes.

• Flashlights and batteries.

• Radio: battery-operated radio and National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) weather radio. Replace the batteries every six months.

• Cash: banks and ATMs may not be open for extended periods.

• Keys.

• Photographs.

• Computer hard drive or laptop.

• Toys, books and games.

• Important documents: in a waterproof container including insurance, medical records, bank account numbers, etc.

• Tools.

• Vehicle fuel tanks filled.

Pet care items

• Food and water.

• Proper identification: immunization records, medications.

• A carrier or cage.

• A muzzle and leash.

Added Preparedness

• Take first-aid, CPR and disaster preparedness classes.

For more information, go to www.geico.com, www.nhc.noaa.gov and www.iii.org.

Posh Storage Solutions For The Bathroom

(NUC) - Many homeowners try to turn their bathrooms into sanctuaries that offer a retreat from the world – personal spaces designed to reflect individual taste while providing the utmost comfort.

The challenge arises, however, when it comes to storage. What to do when you have limited space but lots of stuff?

The answer, according to Kohler Co., is stylish and functional bathroom furniture.

Best known for its plumbing fixtures, faucets and other home decorative elements, Kohler recently came out with a line of beautiful yet functional bathroom vanities that embody a homeowner's personal style.

"Kohler has created a turnkey solution for homeowners who want to create a grooming area in the bathroom that reflects sophisticated style, outstanding durability within a moisture-rich bathroom environment and convenient storage solutions," said Michael Terrill, senior product manager for Kohler furniture and lavatories.

THE PROVINITY vanity from Kohler brings high fashion and functional storage to the bathroom.

Want a bathroom that evokes a cottage retreat? The Ballard vanity symbolizes relaxed comfort with its alder or white ash veneers. With shelves and a full-extension drawer underneath, the Ballard is able to accommodate numerous storage needs.

Perhaps you're a little bit country. If so, the Thistledown vanity may be for you. This piece pays homage to world-renowned stables and reflects the architectural details that characterize country motifs. Refined columns frame the paneled doors and add to the cozy appeal.

For those who like a more contemporary or urban look, the Provinity vanity combines old world style with new world luxury. Consisting of European Sycamore, a wood characterized by contrasting patches of greenish-gray and white bark, this piece offers a large single drawer that extends and moves back into the closed position with a gentle push. An easily removable, contoured lower shelf is designed for additional storage.

The Mersing vanity, on the other hand, is inspired by the unencumbered lifestyle of a Malaysian village. It achieves its tropical appeal by combining bamboo and Burmese mahogany – a material used for centuries to craft boats. Inside the vanity, separate, solid wood dovetail drawers extend to bring items conveniently within reach. The look is completed with a handcrafted tray nestled on a notched lower shelf.

For more information on these vanities and adding functional furniture to the bathroom, visit www.kohler.com or call 800-4-KOHLER.

A Job Well Done

On July 26, at approximately 1:33 a.m., Sergeant J.P. Kelly and many additional officers were on patrol in the West Quincy area due to a recent rash of residential breakins.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Paul Holland had just investigated a break on Roberts Street; however, there were no witnesses or description of a suspect(s). Kelly parked his cruiser in the Della Chiesa School lot and watched for anyone suspicious.

He observed a male walking toward him from a distance so he approached him on foot on Brook Avenue and observed a yellow flashlight in his right hand and an opened 12 pack of Heineken beer in his left hand.

Kelly noted the male turned away and attempted to conceal the flashlight, first by cupping it in his hand and then putting it under his left arm. Kelly directed the male to stop due to the close proximity of the break and the furtive gestures made by the suspect.

He pat frisked the suspect and felt a hard object in the right pants pocket, which turned out to be an LG Verizon digital camera cell phone. There was also an open bottle of vodka in his rear pants pocket.

After learning the identity of the suspect, Kelly recognized the name as being involved in past breaks. When asked why he had a flashlight and what he was doing, the suspect said he went for a walk and was coming from his girlfriend's house in Wollaston, several miles away. The suspect stated he was living with his girlfriend and this peaked Kelly's interest because he knew there had been recent breaks in that area, too.

When asked about a cell phone in his possession, the suspect initially responded, "I don't know," and then said, "I borrowed it from a friend." When asked whom the friend was, the suspect said, "I don't have to tell you. It's none of your business."

Officer Denis Keenan arrived on scene and asked the suspect if he had anything else on him and the suspect retorted, "You can search me if you want." Keenan found $50 in one pocket and $20 in another. He also recovered a gold chain and bracelet in a pocket, which the suspect stated was the property of his girlfriend. Attempts were made to contact the girlfriend to no avail. Keenan also found a receipt for concert tickets in the suspect's wallet, which had the name of the owner from Birch Street.

Since the suspect was intoxicated and roaming about the streets, he was placed into protective custody for his safety and transported to the station. Kelly returned to the station and checked the computer for past calls and found that a break occurred on Birch Street recently. Upon reading the report, he had reason to believe the man in protective custody was involved in the Birch Street break.

Keenan was able to contact the suspect's girlfriend and learned she dropped the suspect off in the area of the break on Roberts Street and when he was dropped off, he did not have a cell phone, beer or the $70 found in his pocket. She also stated she did not give him any jewelry to hold for her.

As officers collected his information, two similar breaks and one attempt were reported to the police, all in close proximity to where Kelly had stopped the suspect. One victim of the breaks stated $50 was taken from a counter top.

At the station, Detectives Tom Cleary and Mike Ward assisted in the investigation by tracking down the owner of the cell phone. The owner, who was in Ohio, stated he was unaware his cell phone was missing and valued it at $350. He said his wife had possession of the phone and she was visiting in Quincy, on Grossman Street, which was in the area of the breaks.

Officer Matthew Tobin checked the home and spoke to the owner of the cell phone. It was at this time that a break was discovered and an LG Verizon digital camera cell phone and other items were missing.

Based on the above information, the suspect, a 51-year-old Jamaica Plain resident, was charged with "Burglary," "Receiving Stolen Property over $250" (cell phone) from Grossman Street, "Two counts of Receiving Stolen Property" (gold chain and bracelet) and "Receiving Stolen Property" from Birch Street. At this time, no victim has come forward regarding the jewelry. Nice work!

Lifestyle Log Tracks Progress

Q. My friend recently joined a new fitness club and met with a personal trainer, who asked her to keep a lifestyle log. The log is designed to keep track of her nutrition and activities throughout the day. After a week she is supposed to turn in the log and sit down with the trainer to discuss her lifestyle. I am trying to become healthy and lose a little weight. Would it help me to keep a lifestyle log?

A. Maintaining a journal or lifestyle log is a very effective way to stay committed to your fitness goals and have a written account tracking the process. Although not a new concept, the traditional food log can be modified to include exercise, activities and other lifestyle components essential to having a healthy lifestyle.

Many fitness professionals are asking their clients to keep logs of their daily lifestyle choices so they can better help them develop realistic goals, and also to get a snapshot of what is happening with their clients when they are away from the gym. Most people meet with their trainer or fitness instructor only two to four days a week, leaving plenty of unknown lifestyle habits.

Developing or maintaining a healthy lifestyle includes factors not often realized. The traditional nutrition logs/journals include monitoring eating habits by keeping track of calories, portion sizes and fluid intake. Lifestyle logs also include daily exercise completed, hours of sleep per day, activities - completed outside of organized exercise — such as playing with your children or walking the dog — and levels of perceived stress.

Noting on a scale of one to 10 how well you felt with each lifestyle component is also helpful. For example if you only got five hours of sleep, you would note if you felt well-rested, tired or fatigued throughout the day.

After keeping a log for a few days of normal activity, the results can be used to help make changes to your nutritional and lifestyle routines to help you reach your goals. You might be amazed at how just a few tweaks can make a major difference. You can also keep past logs as a guideline to see what worked and did not work for you.

When keeping a log of your daily activities, it is most important to be completely honest. Withholding information is only going to hinder you from reaching your goals. Lifestyle logs can also be used to hold yourself accountable. Knowing you will have to write down a poor lifestyle choice in your log may make you think twice before doing it.

Whether you are meeting with a fitness professional or managing your own fitness program, keeping a lifestyle log may not be for everyone. But it can be an extremely useful tool, and could be the missing link in developing a healthy lifestyle.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea Wyatt at letters.kfws@ hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Gymnastics: A Great Fitness Option For Kids

(NAPS) Studies show that today's youngsters are a very inactive generation, and that inactivity and poor dietary habits have contributed to their lack of fitness.

Statistics indicate that one in three kids is overweight or at risk of becoming overweight today, a percentage that has more than tripled in the last 30 years.

To help get kids off the couch and into better shape this summer, USA Gymnastics and Tyson Foods have joined forces to create a fitness initiative designed to encourage physical fitness through fun activities that emphasize four fundamentals of fitness: cardiovascular exercise, strength training, flexibility and nutrition.

To underscore this initiative's importance, USA Gymnastics has expanded its annual National Gymnastics Day from focusing just on gymnastics to "A Celebration of Fitness." Gym clubs and their members across the country use National Gymnastics Day in August as a way to give back to their communities by raising funds for the Children's Miracle Network.

The Tyson Fitness Challenge is the main vehicle for raising funds. Participants may gather pledges for specified activities that range from the traditional cartwheels and backflips to fitness-related skills or elements.

Each of the four fitness fundamentals in the Tyson Fitness Challenge helps kids get physically fit through participation in fun activities geared toward their level and age.

- Cardiovascular conditioning is important for the heart and lungs.
- Strength training builds strong, healthy muscles.
- Flexibility exercises help muscles move through a normal range of motion.
- Nutrition is important because a well-balanced diet is the key to any fitness effort. Protein, like that found in Tyson chicken, beef and pork products, is an important part of any well-balanced diet because it delivers the necessary nutrition for strength and endurance.

In addition to focusing on four fundamentals of fitness, each participant will learn how to set fitness goals (e.g., being able to do five more sit-ups, etc.) that may be achieved through the Tyson Fitness Challenge and continued as part of his or her weekly routine.

"The basics of gymnastics are a solid foundation for building fitness at any level," said Bela Karolyi, the "legendary" gymnastics coach who is a longtime proponent of the importance of fitness. "I have always stressed that flexibility, strength and cardiovascular exercise are important components to being fit or a good athlete, along with eating a well-balanced diet. The Tyson Fitness Challenge is designed to help young people learn how to exercise properly and eat right."

Getting To The Heart Of The Matter On Health

(NAPS) Here's some news to take to heart: there are practical steps to reduce health threatening heart diseases.

Experts say that more than 70 million Americans live with a cardiovascular disease, and coronary heart disease is a leading cause of premature, permanent disability in the U.S. workforce.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, much of the burden of heart disease and stroke could be eliminated by reducing major risk factors: high blood pressure, high blood cholesterol, tobacco use, diabetes, physical inactivity and poor nutrition.

For example, studies suggest a 10 percent decrease in total cholesterol levels may reduce the development of coronary heart disease by as much as 30 percent.

Twenty-five years ago, the treatment for heart attacks was simply bed rest. Today doctors have medicines that can stop a heart attack in mid-stream as well as other high-tech treatments.

And more good news is on the way. According to a survey by Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA), there are 146 new medicines currently in development to treat heart disease and strokes.

To help Americans get the information they need to fight heart disease and strokes, PhRMA has launched a new multimedia national health education campaign.

"Coronary vascular disease impacts one in every three Americans and is the number one killer according to the American Heart Association. It's important for patients to know that there are steps they can take today that can reduce their chances of developing these killer diseases tomorrow," said Billy Tauzin, president and CEO.

PhRMA's public service health information campaign stresses the importance of consulting the health care providers, as well as visiting helpful websites that provide information on preventing and treating coronary disease.

"PhRMA members and their scientists want to help Americans find answer to their questions about heart disease and strokes," said Tauzin. "I hope everyone will take a moment to visit these sites and get the information they need to learn how to treat and ultimately prevent these killers."

Red Cross Needs Blood Donations

Record breaking temperatures across the region have severely impacted blood collections, resulting in a loss of over 800 units of blood in two days. Coming off of a particularly challenging month of July, the Northeast Division is currently facing a daunting deficit of 3,090 units of blood.

Recent extreme heat forced blood drives to close over a span of two days, leaving the Red Cross anticipating cutting blood shipment to area hospitals, if the supply does not increase in upcoming days. The continuation of blood shipments depends on the generosity of volunteer donors.

Eligible donors are urged to help make up for this critical shortcoming. Local donor centers and blood drives have extended their hours and increased staff to be able to process more donors. The Red Cross has supplied blood drives and donor centers with extra ice and refreshments, as well as, in some cases, additional portable air conditioners to beat the heat. The Red Cross holds blood drives seven days a week to communities across the region. Red Cross staff have been continuously monitoring recent blood drives, closing down select locations, and extending hours and resources for others.

"We are grateful for those who have come to donate blood throughout this heat wave. Due to extreme weather, we are facing an extreme blood shortage and are urging our neighbors to come in from the heat and give the gift of life," said Donna M. Morrissey, director of public relations and corporate affairs for the American Red Cross Blood Services, northeast division. "While the New England weather is unpredictable, one thing is for sure. The Red Cross will be there during times of need, and we need the public's help right now."

Those donating blood through the American Red Cross must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds, and be in general good health.

For locations to donate, call 800-GIVE LIFE or visit www.newenglandblood.org.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE HEALTHIER YOUR GUMS, THE HEALTHIER YOUR BABY

Pregnant women should be aware that the hormonal shifts they experience are linked to bacterial buildup on gums, which irritates the already sensitive tissue. As uncomfortable as this can be for the mother-to-be neglecting red, puffy, bleeding gums increases the risk of premature birth for her child. Fortunately, proper treatment can help effectively avert this potential problem. According to a recent study by Chilean researchers, periodontal therapy performed on mothers-to-be with gingivitis (mild gum disease) to get rid of infection-causing bacteria reduced the rate of pre-term, low-birthweight babies by 70 percent. Thus, it is a good idea for women of childbearing age to have the dentist check their gums both before and during pregnancy.

If you value your oral as well as your overall health, a periodontal evaluation is a good idea. We are trained to detect and treat gum disease. We will be happy to answer any questions you may have about the health of your teeth and gums. We will discuss your particular problem and recommend the treatment that is right for you. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we feature state-of-the-art treatment procedures for all of your dental needs. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for compassionate and gentle dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. • $55 or $60 for a 4-by-8 brick; 12 characters including punctuation by three lines with clip art.

• $100 for an 8-by-8 brick; 20 characters including punctuation by four lines.

• $105 or $110 for an 8-by-8 brick; 20 characters including punctuation by four lines with clip art.

For more information, call Joe Minukas at 617-328-4489 or Ron Ivil at 781-337-0062.

St. John's Travel Baseball Celebrates Successful Season

The St. John's travel baseball team celebrated a successful and enjoyable South River League season with a recent "players vs. parents" game and barbecue at Faxon Park.

Finishing second in the regular season behind eventual champion Hanover, the St. John's team lost to Duxbury, 3-2, in a semi-final playoff game that featured strong defense from both teams.

Highlights of the travel season were the great team spirit showed by the players in several come-from-behind victories; winning three of four games against cross-town rival Quincy Youth Baseball; playing under the lights at Marshfield; and the on-the-road cookouts. Teams from Carver also participated in the league.

Parents who wish to register players for the 2007 season (farm league, ages 7 to 9 and major league, ages 10 to 12) should contact Commissioner Jack Morton at 617-773-3134.

COOLING OFF

If you notice a drop in the efficiency of your vehicle's air-conditioning (AC) system, it is time for a check-up. At the heart of the AC lies the compressor, which is responsible for compressing and transferring refrigerant gas. As the compressor pumps the refrigerant through the closed-loop system, the refrigerant moves heat from inside the vehicle to outside. To do this, the compressor accepts low-pressure gas from the evaporator, compresses it into a high-pressure hot gas, and then sends it to the condenser. Obviously, this ongoing heating and cooling process with refrigerant under pressure may at some point be susceptible to leaks, which will compromise efficiency. These must be pinpointed to restore the AC to proper working order.

Air-conditioning is a great feature to have, but if it isn't working properly you need to have it looked at by a professional. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we can service your AC and help you enjoy a comfortable summer. If you notice any leaks from your vehicle or a decline in efficiency please call 781-843-1550 today. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT. Failure of the compressor in an older R-12 refrigerant system may be seen as an opportunity to convert to the newer R-134a system.

RYAN FAHEY, 12, of Quincy, won three medals in swimming in the recent 25th annual Bay State Summer Games. He captured gold in the 200-meter individual medley and the 100-meter backstroke, and bronze in the 200-meter breaststroke. He is a student at Broad Meadows Middle School.

City Tennis Tournament Starts Sept. 13 At Russell Park Court

The 36th annual City Tennis Tournament is scheduled to start Sept. 13 on the municipal courts at Russell Park behind the Center for Technical Education.

The tournament will conclude Sept. 24, weather permitting. Applications can be obtained at the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway. Deadline for applications is Sept. 8.

Entry fee is $15 for adults and $8 for youth under age 16. Participants will receive a tournament T-shirt.

The tournament — believed to be the largest and oldest municipal tourney in New England — is open to Quincy residents with 12 events crowning city champions.

Events are: Men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles, boys and girls 16 and under, men's 50 and over, men's and women's 35 and over, and mixed doubles.

There is a men's singles "B" event, which is conducted from a pool of players who are defeated in the first round of men's singles. There is also a special division, now in its fourth year, which conducts a championship for city employees regardless of their residency.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said the Quincy Credit Union will once again co-sponsor the event.

"This marks the 11th year that the credit union has provided the financial backing to keep this traditional tournament a low-cost activity for all ages and abilities of Quincy families," Welch said. "The generosity of the credit union to our citizens is to be commended."

For more information, call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Men's Slowpitch Softball Standings

Here are the standings of the Quincy Men's Slowpitch Softball League through Aug. 12:

A DIVISION

Hancock Tavern.....22-4
Fatman's Cafe.....22-4
Granite Rail.....13-12
Harry's Carpet One.....11-12
Goal Post Pirates.....9-17

Notes: Hancock Tavern and Fatman's Cafe have finished their series and the division championship will now be decided by their remaining opponents who are also fighting for playoff spots.

B DIVISION

Cagney's.....20-4
Moose Lodge.....16-10
Yellow Cab.....11-12
Jeff's Smoke Shop.....8-15
Gold's Gym.....9-18

Notes: Yellow Cab ended its losing streak by stopping Moose Lodge's winning streak at 11 games . . . Jeff's Smoke Shop has moved ahead of Gold's Gym, which suffered an eighth-inning loss to Cagney's.

C DIVISION

Iscribe, LTD.....15-8
Malachy's.....11-15
Comm. Vending.....7-17
Local 792.....7-17
Quincy Pirates.....5-21

Notes: Iscribe, LTD continues to hold first place by using a running offense . . . Commonwealth Vending has jumped from fifth to third place mainly due to the improved pitching of Bob Pernolia . . . Chad Fitzpatrick and Dana Spencer are carrying Local 792 offensively . . . The remaining question is whether the Quincy Pirates, who play with a lot of heart, can still catch a star and move into a playoff spot.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You sometimes go to extremes to prove a point. But this time, you won't have to. Supporters are ready, falling over themselves to help you make your case.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Venus might be your ruling planet, but Mars is in the picture as well. So don't be surprised if your romantic relationships are a bit rocky at this time. But they'll soon smooth over.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Geminis might rush into romance and risk being wrong about someone rather than be left with no one. But this is one time when it's wiser to be wary of where your heart takes you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) With all (or most) of those pesky problems behind you, take time for your family and friends. Travel aspects are favored, with long-distance journeys high on the list.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might have started to question the wisdom of being open with someone you hoped you could trust. But be assured you won't be disappointed. You'll soon hear good news.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You have a reputation for honesty and integrity, and that will help turn around a situation that was not only disappointing but also quite unfair. Good luck.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A happy event creates a closer tie with a family member who seemed hopelessly estranged. Positive aspects also dominate in important career matters.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ruling planet, Pluto, helps you adjust to change. So, stop putting off that long-delayed move, and make it with the assurance that you're doing the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You have a wonderful capacity to learn quickly and well. This will help you when you are faced with an opportunity to move on to a new path in life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: You suddenly find that you're not facing that new challenge alone. You now have someone at your side, ready to offer whatever support you might need.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your versatility — which is just one of those aspects of yourself that make you so special — helps you adapt to the challenges of a new and exciting opportunity.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sensitive nature picks up on the needs of others. But what about your desires? You need to take more time to assess what your goals are and, if necessary, redirect them.

BORN THIS WEEK: You give your trust openly and easily. People find you easy to be with and enjoy your wit, your good sense, and your capacity to love and be loved.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Get someone else to blow your horn and the sound will carry twice as far." – Will Rogers

"He who praises everybody, praises nobody." – Samuel Johnson

"I can live for two months on a good compliment." – Mark Twain

"Sweet is the scene where genial friendship plays the pleasing game of interchanging praise." – Oliver Wendell Holmes

It has been said that expressing appreciation is a lost art . . . If so, it should be rediscovered . . . Have you ever noticed how quickly animals respond to praise and appreciation?

This is true of people. A word of praise and appreciation makes us feel good, lifts our spirits, and gives us the urge to do better. Have you ever thought how important this is? A word of praise or appreciation will make anyone's day!

When was the last time you praised someone? When was the last time you expressed appreciation for something someone did for you?

Incidentally, we would like to take this time to thank the readers who have taken the time to comment by phone or letter on the thoughts that are presented here . . . They are greatly appreciated. . .

John A. Malvesti, 93

Retired Quincy Police Sergeant

JOHN A. MALVESTI

A funeral Mass for John A. Malvesti, 93, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, a retired Quincy Police Department sergeant, will be celebrated Friday at 10 a.m. at St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

He died Aug. 12 at Pope Nursing Home in Weymouth.

Mr. Malvesti was appointed to the Quincy Police Department May 2, 1942 and he achieved rank of sergeant Oct. 30, 1972. He retired July 31, 1976 after 34 years of service. He was one of five siblings who served on the police and fire departments for the City of Quincy.

He is listed in the Who's Who of Law Enforcement. He was a pioneer in first aid and life-saving techniques. He was a first aid specialist and teacher and was well known for his work in bringing the Quincy Police Department as well as many other departments up to speed in this area.

On July 25, 1970, he helped rescue and administer first aid to his son, Joseph, who was critically injured in a Quincy quarry accident. He was credited with saving his son's life and received an award from the American Red Cross.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Police Association and had served in the National Guard.

An avid golfer, he was a former member of the Halifax and Braintree country clubs. He also enjoyed bowling.

As a young man, Mr. Malvesti was involved in athletics and was a well-known football running back in the Quincy Park League, playing for the West Quincy Maroons and later the Quincy Manets.

After retirement, he was active for many years in the Quincy Senior Olympics, winning numerous medals and awards for his athletic abilities and skills in swimming, long jumping and javelin throwing.

Born in Milford, he was raised and educated in Quincy. He lived in Quincy all his life before moving to Weymouth two years ago.

Husband of the late Nancy (Mangiarelli) Malvesti, he is survived by three sons, John A. Malvesti Jr. of Spring Hill, Fla., Douglas J. Malvesti of Lone Pine, Calif., and Joseph J. Registration Open For Chabad Hebrew School

Registration is now open to students of the Chabad Hebrew School, 1356 Quincy Dr., for the 2006-07 school year.

Starting in September, classes will be Sundays, and offered to children 5-13 years of age.

The school will teach South Shore Jewish children to embrace their Jewish roots, and gain a sense of Jewish pride, no matter their level of observance or affiliation.

The school will provide an academic environment where children will acquire a broad knowledge of Judaism through a motivating and challenging venue. Through Hebrew reading, writing, Jewish history, holidays and more, the students will gain appreciation for the values and traditions of their heritage.

"Our school's underlying approach is for the children to enjoy the time spent at Hebrew School so that they are left with positive experiences, and a greater appreciation for Jewish education," said Morah Bronstein, director of Chabad's Hebrew School.

The program is blended with games, incentives, crafts, dramatics, family celebrations and other exciting extra curricular activities.

Scholarships are available, and no student will be turned down for lack of funds.

To schedule an appointment or to visit, call 617-850-5935 or email shevybronstein@gmail.com.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have Sunday worship beginning at 10 a.m.

The Rev. Gary W. Smothers will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Sermons from Mark 6) Jesus Chooses His Friends."

There will also be a children's message.

Childcare is available for infants and toddlers.

Following the worship service there will be a fellowship time in the Allen Parlor. Light refreshments will be served.

Blood Pressure Clinics Free For Seniors

Weekly blood pressure screenings for elders will be held every Monday from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Gail Crawford, a registered nurse, will donate her time and talents to assisting senior citizens in having their blood pressure taken weekly.

Appointments can be made but walk-ins also are accepted. For more information, call 617-376-1506.

Seek Medical Gear To Loan

The Council on Aging is seeking donations of medical equipment that is no longer needed by the current owner but can be loaned to someone else.

Sealed bids for construction of Carlisle Street Water Main, Sewer and Roadway Improvements for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts, will be received at the Purchasing Department, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169 until 11:00 A.M. prevailing time, on Wednesday, September 6, 2006 at which time and place said bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The scope of work includes:

Removal of existing gravity sewer pipe and water main on Carlisle Street and construction of new wastewater pumping station, gravity sewer, force main and water main and associated roadway improvements.

Bid security in the form of a bid bond, cash, certified check, treasurer's or cashier's check payable to the Owner, is required in the amount of five percent of the bid, in accordance with Section 00200, INSTRUCTION TO BIDDERS.

The Contract Documents may be examined at the following locations:

Purchasing Department, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169
Dewberry-Goodkind, Inc., 31 St. James Ave., Boston, MA 02116
Dodge Reports, 24 Hartwell Road, Lexington, MA 02421.

Copies may be obtained at the Quincy Purchasing Department, located at 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 4 p.m., upon payment of $50 for each set. Any unsuccessful bidder or nonbidder, upon returning such set within the time specified in the Instructions to Bidders and in good condition, within 15 calendar days after the award of the contract, will be refunded payment.

Contract Documents and plans will be mailed to prospective bidders upon request and receipt of a separate check for $25 to cover handling and mailing fees. This amount is not refundable.

Both checks shall be made payable to the City of Quincy.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid guaranty bond to the City of Quincy in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the amount of the bid, as a guarantee that the bidder will execute the contract if it be awarded in conformity with the bid form. The selected contractor shall furnish a performance bond in an amount equal to one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price and a payment bond in an amount of one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price.

Minority Business Enterprise (MBE) and Women's Business Enterprise (WBE) policies of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the City of Quincy are applicable to this Contract. The goal for this project is a minimum of 10% percent MBE participation and 5% percent WBE participation by state-certified MBEs and WBEs. The Bidder shall submit completed MBE/WBE forms with the bid. Failure to comply with the requirements of this paragraph may be deemed to render a proposal non-responsive. No waiver of any provision of this section will be granted unless approved.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court Department
NORFOLK Division
Docket No. 06P1878EP
In the Estate of
JOSEPH W. BRUNO
Late of QUINCY
In the County of NORFOLK
Date of Death
July 13, 2006
NOTICE OF PETITION FOR PROBATE OF WILL

To all persons interested in the above captioned estate, a petition has been presented praying that a document purporting to be the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed, and that GERALDINE B. STORELLA of QUINCY in the County of NORFOLK or some other suitable person be appointed executor, named in the will to serve without surety.

IF YOU DESIRE TO OBJECT THERETO, YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY MUST FILE A WRITTEN APPEARANCE IN SAID COURT AT CANTON ON OR BEFORE TEN O'CLOCK IN THE FORENOON (10:00AM) ON SEPTEMBER 13, 2006.

In addition, you must file a written affidavit of objections to the petition, stating specific facts and grounds upon which the objection is based, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

WITNESS, HON. DAVID H. KOPELMAN, ESQUIRE, First Justice of said Court at CANTON this day. August 3, 2006.

Is Wind Energy A Possibility Here?

son Island, the 180 foot Quincy Police Radio Tower and the 700 foot Quarry Hills Tower, which at 890 feet above sea level is one of the tallest in the nation. The mounting of the new anemometers took two days per tower. The three towers create a triangle that surrounds the majority of Quincy, and are expected to collect data for a full year or a minimum of nine months before further actions are taken.

"When we gather this data, if wind power is not a good fit for Quincy, then fine," said resident P.J. Foley, who helped to start the project. "But I firmly believe we'll be a great candidate for generating our own power here in our city."

Foley said the project has been in the works for the past four years. He said that he started the project with Sen. Michael Morrissey and Mayor William Phelan, who both continue to support the exploration of wind energy.

"This wouldn't be happening without Sen. Morrissey's and Mayor Phelan's support," said Foley.

Morrissey involved the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative (MTC), who now oversee the project. With support from the Renewable Energy Trust and the Massachusetts State Collaborative (MSC) financing the equipment, costs are not expected to increase the tax burden, he said.

The project is also endorsed by the Committee on the Environment of the City Council, Foley said. Councillor John Keenan, chairman, said that wind power will be a topic of conversation at tonight's 4:30 p.m meeting at the City Hall conference room.

"I think (wind power) is something we should absolutely explore," said Keenan. "Other communities have had success with it. We are a waterfront community and we have a great number of hills, so we're in a position to capture wind."

Foley said that the exploration of renewable wind energy is just the latest in Quincy's quest for energy savings.

"In terms of renewable energy, Quincy has really been ahead of the curve," said Foley. The traffic and pedestrian lights in Quincy were changed from lightbulbs to Light Emitting Diodes (LEDs), which save 92 percent of the energy that was used, he said. Also, a Common Street resident recently received a free device that provides heat and electricity for their home. Foley said he anticipates partially solar-powered units to be available for residents at "heavily discounted" prices.

Foley is also a member of Mayor Phelan's Open Space Committee, the Beaches Commission, and Marsh Madness, an organization that focuses on wetland restoration.

August Moon Festival Draws Estimated 6,000

The 19th annual Quincy August Moon Festival Sunday drew an estimated crowd of 6,000 despite threatening rain.

The August Moon Festival is the second largest event on the Asian Lunar calendar after the New Year, and the festival in Quincy is the largest cultural event on the South Shore.

There was live entertainment, Chinese, Japanese and Indian cuisine provided by local restaurants, dancing from Women's Lion Dance Troupe, a fashion show including cultural fashions, and musical entertainment performed on Chinese instruments.

For the most part, the weather was cooperative, said John Brothers, Execu-

Threat Moves Closer But:

No Signs Of EEE Here Yet

By TOM HENSHAW

Renewed efforts to fight Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and West Nile Virus (WNV) as the mosquito season reaches its height apparently have found Quincy on the sidelines once again.

"There are no cases of EEE in Quincy," said Andrew Scheele, commissioner of Public Health. "There are no mosquito pools that have tested positive. All we can do is advise people what to do."

Meanwhile, there was much activity south of Quincy as the state ordered a second round of aerial spraying of the pesticide Anvil Tuesday night over an area of 425,000 acres.

The closest target to Quincy was Holbrook and parts of Randolph and Braintree.

The first spraying on Aug. 8 covered 159,000 acres in Plymouth and Bristol Counties and was believed to have killed off as many as 60 per cent of the mosquito population.

Since then a number of new mosquito pools have been discovered in the area and the first spraying was judged to have covered too small an area to be effective.

Scheele explained that mosquito pools are discovered by setting traps in likely areas, mashing up the mosquitoes caught and testing the batch for the EEE virus.

There are no traps in Quincy, he said.

Two people, a 23-year-old man in Acushnet and a 52-year-old woman in Lakeville, were in a Boston hospital with EEE, a disease that kills an average of three out of 10 who fall victim.

And a mosquito pool in West Roxbury tested positive for the West Nile Virus along with previous pools in Needham and Barnstable. There have been none in Quincy.

Gov. Mitt Romney declared a public health emergency in Norfolk, Plymouth and Bristol Counties and filed a $2 million request with the legislature to cover the expense of spraying.

"You never know," said Scheele. "We're not all one little town."

602,076 Check-Outs Give Crane Library A Record Busy Year

Who says libraries are a thing of the past in these days of television, the Internet and other distractions?

The Thomas Crane Public Library was busier than ever in the fiscal year that ended July 31, what with 602,076 people checking out materials, 56,575 more calling the reference room with questions and 8,757,830 hits on the library website.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin said credit for the new surge in popularity should be given to additional funding approved by Mayor William Phelan and the City Council.

ANN McLAUGHLIN

The extra funding enabled the Main Library to open on summer weekends for the first time since the 1930s and gave the branches an additional eight hours opening a week.

And there was also the new $18 million Mayor James A. Sheets wing of the library, which was opened in 2001 and dedicated in May, 2005, almost doubling the capacity of the space.

A total of 724,650 people visited the library in Fiscal '06, or 8.2 visits per capita, up from 610,392 and 6.9 per capita from the previous year. The national average is

Christine Welch Gillis Team To Walk For Cancer

Team Christine Welch Gillis will march Sunday, Sept. 17, in the 18th annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk to support the Dana Farber Cancer Institute.

They'll be marching in the memory of Christine Welch Gillis, who lost her battle with colon cancer at the age of 26 in September, 2001.

More than 6,000 walkers are expected to cover the marathon route to raise funds for the researchers and caregivers at Dana Farber who treated more than 32,000 patients in 2005.

Contributors can support the walk by sending a check made out to Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk to Team Christine Welch Gillis, 15 Seaway Rd., Squantum, MA 02169.

Dr. Thomas Barber Advises:

What You Should Know About Eastern Equine Encephalitis

By THOMAS BARBER, MD, Chief of Medicine at Quincy Medical Center

With the recent news that two Massachusetts residents have tested positive for eastern equine encephalitis, or EEE, it is understandable that Quincy residents would have questions and concerns about EEE.

Eastern equine encephalitis is caused by a virus that grows in birds that live in freshwater swamps. The virus is most common in these birds, but can transfer to types of mosquitoes, including those that bite horses and humans. The massive rains that our region experienced this spring provided the perfect breeding ground for mosquitoes and mosquito-borne viruses, including EEE.

It is important for people to understand that, while EEE is a very serious illness, the virus is contracted by a very small number of people, each year. In 2005, there were only four cases of EEE statewide. In fact, only 80 cases of EEE have been reported since it was first described in 1938.

People are most at risk for contracting EEE during the summer months, when the mosquito season is at its peak. The risk of contracting EEE remains until the first hard frost when the adult mosquitoes that spread the virus die out.

To reduce your personal risk of contracting mosquito-borne illness, such as EEE, the Department of Public Health advises:

- Remove any standing water near your home to reduce mosquito-breeding habitats. Standing water can be found in a variety of places surrounding homes, such as in rain gutters and drains, unused flowerpots, wading pools, and birdbaths;
- Make sure screens on doors and windows are in good condition;
- When possible, avoid outdoor activities from dusk to dawn when mosquitoes are most active.
- When outdoors, wear long-sleeved shirts, long pants and socks to cover skin and use a mosquito repellent, following the manufacturer's recommendations.
- Use mosquito netting to cover carriages and playpens, when outdoors.

If you or a loved one experiences symptoms of EEE, including high fever, stiff neck, headache and lack of energy, contact your primary care physician or local emergency department immediately. If contracted, the EEE virus can progress rapidly, and if untreated, swelling of the brain, coma and death can result.

Presently there are no antibiotics or antiviral drugs to treat EEE, but with good supportive medical and nursing care, people who do contract EEE can have the best possible clinical outcomes.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health website is a great resource for people who wish to learn more about EEE, visit www.mass.gov/dph.

Ayers, Quincy Helping Hand Replaces Everett Man's Stolen Wheelchair

Brian Shea of Everett suffers from cerebral palsy. He relies on an electric wheelchair to get around.

Recently his electric wheelchair was stolen from behind his apartment building. Replacing the chair would cost upwards of $10,000 and the Sheas did not have money to afford it.

Rep. Ayers (D - Quincy), who founded the Quincy Helping Hand Program fourteen years ago, happened to have a similar electric wheelchair in his inventory when he heard of Brian Shea's situation from Milton resident Kevin Kelliher of Lundgren Management in Chelsea, which manages Shea's building.

The Quincy Helping Hand Program is an in-kind program.

"People donate durable medical equipment – walkers, canes, commodes, wheelchairs, and the occasional hospital bed or electric wheelchair," Ayers said.

"I was glad I could help. The Helping Hand Program allows people to donate their unneeded durable medical equipment," Ayers said. "I have the ability to store the equipment at my business in North Quincy and give the equipment, free of charge, to those who otherwise could not afford it."

The wheelchair came just in time so that the family didn't have to cancel its Cape Cod vacation, Ayers said.

"Now Brian can go with his son Zack and his wife Randi on the planned vacation to Hyannis to celebrate Randi's birthday. We are very happy now he can go back to his independent lifestyle," Ayers said. "It is hard to imagine that someone would steal another person's wheelchair. However, with people working together, good will prevailed."

Anyone in need of durable medical equipment or those who would like to donate durable medical equipment to the program should contact Rep. Bruce Ayers at 617.328.0102.

Nancy Callanan To Head Federal Grants, Community Development Programs

Mayor William Phelan has named Nancy Callanan administrator of federal grants and community development programs in the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

Callanan, who has overseen the HOME Program in the Planning Department since 1996, succeeds Angelito Santos.

"Nancy has served the city and its residents well throughout her time in the Planning Department and she will be a great fit in this important position," said Phelan. "Her background in a wide range of community programs provides her unique experience to prepare her for her new responsibilities. I am excited to have her skills and experience serving in such a vital position."

Callanan holds a B.S. in management from the University of Massachusetts. She also has a M.S. in community and economic development from the University of Southern New Hampshire.

She is a member of the National Community Development Association, the Affordable Housing Trust Committee, Fair Housing Committee, Quincy Leadership Council on Chronic Homelessness, and the Quincy/Weymouth Board on Homelessness.

She is a former Program Director for Quincy Community Action Programs, the former chair of the City's Commission on the Status of Women, and has experience on the Board of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services and DOVE.

Callanan has been a resident of the city since 1978.

"Nancy will allow us a seamless transition in the oversight of some of the city's most important programs," said Dennis Harrington, director of the Department of Planning and Community Development. "She's a great employee and I am certain that she will continue to serve the residents of this city well."

Those Ward 1 Mayors

The Ward 5 city council seat, as recently noted, has had political charm to it.

Five occupants in recent times went on to bigger things:

Myron Lane and George Burke, district attorney, Bill Delahunt, district attorney and congressman, Warren Powers, presiding justice, and Walter Hannon, mayor.

But when it comes to capturing the mayor's office, the Ward 1 seat has been a good stepping stone.

Seven Ward 1 councillors have gone on to become mayor — more than in any other ward, according to one of them, Frank McCauley, the city's political historian.

The seven:

McCAULEY

Charles Francis Adams, elected in 1896 (later served as Secretary of the Navy under President Herbert Hoover); Joseph Whiton (1917); Perley Barbour (1925); Tom McGrath (1927); Tom Burgin (1935); David McIntosh (Plan E 1952); and McCauley, elected in 1982.

There hasn't been a Ward 1 mayoral candidate since McCauley who served four terms and left office in 1989.

Current occupant Leo Kelly has no mayoral ambitions. So it may be awhile before another Ward 1 councillor takes they keys to the mayor's office.

Ward 3 and Ward 5 are tied for the runner-up spot with three mayors each who started as ward councillors:

Ward 5: Henry Fairbanks (1890), Charles Bryant (1902) and Walter Hannon (1972).

Present Mayor William Phelan lives in Ward 5 but was a school committee member and never a ward councillor.

Two Ward 2 councillors and two from Ward 4 became mayors. Ward 2's Eugene Stone (1912) and Joseph LaRaia (1976). Ward 4's William Shea (1910) and James Sheets (1990).

McCauley notes that no Ward 6 councillor has ever got to sit behind the mayor's desk.

REMINDER: The deadline for registering to vote in the Sept. 19 primary election is coming up fast. Those unregistered have until Wednesday, Aug. 30 to get aboard.

They can register weekdays from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m. at City Hall and the Election Department there will be open until 8 p.m. Aug. 30 to accommodate.

MILESTONE: Maralin Manning, the energetic executive director of the Quincy Business Association, is a grandmother — again.

MARALIN

John Vincent, son of Michael and Susan Manning of Hingham, arrived Aug. 15 at Massachusetts General Hospital. Their third child, he weighed in at 7 pounds, 8 ounces.

You'll find this hard to believe, but John Vincent is Maralin's 17th grandchild.

Sure doesn't look like a grandmother of 17.

NICE GESTURE: The State Street Corporation hosted 25 youths from the Germantown Neighborhood Center and the South Shore YMCA at the opener of the five-game Red Sox-Yankees series.

Fortunately for the kids, it was the first game. Little did they realize they were witnessing the beginning of what was to become known as the Boston Massacre of 2006.

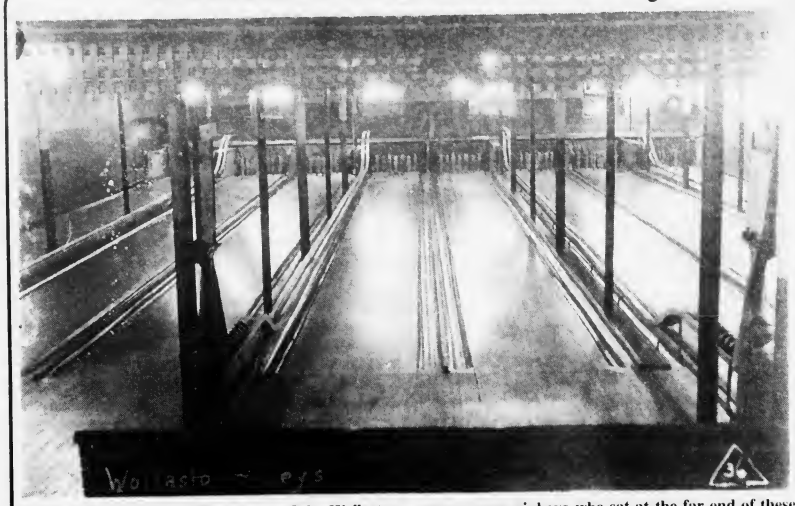
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS 1930'S POSTCARD is a view of the Wollaston Bowling Alleys that was located in the basement of the building at 81 Beale St. Overhead in a strip of stores near the old Wollaston depot were the first Howard Johnson's, a First National Market, the Wollaston Wine Co. and the Viking Café'. These candlepin alleys were opened in 1916 and continued in business for over 50 years until the building was demolished to make way for the Red Line parking lot. Candlepin bowling had been introduced locally at Hough's Neck in the early 1900s and became so widely popular in Quincy that by 1950 there were over a dozen candlepin bowling establishments throughout the city. Companies, churches and all sorts of organizations sponsored bowling leagues. Making it all possible were the now forgotten courageous young pinboys who sat at the far end of these alleys sometimes dodging splintered flying wooden pins and bouncing bowling balls. After each frame was bowled, the pinboy dropped into the pit, reset the knocked over pins, placed the balls in the ball-returns and quickly jumped backwards up out of the way. But that job came to an end in the early 1950s when automatic pin-setting machines were introduced. Pinboys were one of the earliest victims of modern automation. Today, some bowling leagues still exist, but there is only one public bowling alley left in Quincy. Charles Johnson, who lived on Newport Avenue, published this postcard. Quincy's Yesterdays

Disagreement Over 4-Year Terms For Mayor, Council

This Week
1988
18 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Despite meeting recently for over one hour, Mayor Francis X. McCauley and state Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli are still at odds over two pieces of legislation concerning Quincy, including one that would change the terms for mayors and city councillors from the present two years to four years.

The second piece of legislation would change the position of executive secretary of Park and Forestry to a mayor's appointment from its present status as a civil service position.

McCauley supports the legislation while Cerasoli opposes them. Both petitions have passed the Senate and now await action in the House.

During the meeting, Cerasoli said that "I feel uncomfortable as a legislator of being in the position to change a city's form of government."

FIRST WOMAN BUILDING INSPECTOR

Three new building inspectors, including the first one in Quincy history to be a woman, have been appointed to the city's Building Department.

Kathleen F. Nugent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Nugent of 48 Turner St., Houghs Neck, is a graduate of Wentworth Institute of Technology with a bachelor of science degree in architectural engineering technology.

Joseph F. Prondak of Hull and Eugene T. Caruso of Braintree were also appointed.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

Despite winning two of three games with the Oakland A's, the Red Sox lost ground to the Eastern Division leading Detroit Tigers, who swept the Chicago White Sox. The Red Sox, at 69-54, were four games behind Detroit. Left-hander Bruce Hurst helped the Red Sox rebound with a 6-2 win over the California Angels. Hurst improved his record to 15-4.

'Universal Access' And Wollaston Beach Ramp

I am writing in response to Mr. Giarratani's question about the need for a wheelchair accessible ramp to "nowhere" on Wollaston Beach. After reading his letter it seemed like a good opportunity to educate not only Mr. Giarratani, but also other community members who may not understand the benefit of a wheelchair ramp on a beach.

There are a couple of things I would like to address. First of all, the city of Quincy is doing a wonderful job revamping Wollaston Beach which includes the addition of handicapped accessible ramps.

Secondly, I would like to educate Mr. Giarratani on the term "Universal Access." This is a term that is used to describe a structural improvement that not only benefits individuals with disabilities but many other people as well.

For example, sidewalk cuts were created so that a wheelchair could use a sidewalk. Now that sidewalk cuts have been added to most modern sidewalks, other such as people on roller blades or people using baby carriages have also benefited from it.

This wheelchair ramp to "nowhere" can easily fall under the category of universal design. The intended use of the ramp is for wheelchairs. Therefore, individuals in wheelchairs will now have the ability to roll down the ramp and sit on the sand, rather than sit on the sidewalk with the sea wall blocking their view. (I should also mention that there are wheelchairs that are made for the beach.)

In addition, others who have difficulty climbing stairs will also have easier access to the beach. For example, anyone who is on crutches, elderly individuals using walkers or someone with a stroller will now be able to access the public beach which they may have been previously unable to enjoy.

Finally, Title III of The Americans with Disabilities Act required new construction, such as Wollaston Beach, to take into consideration individuals with impairments. This legislation has made a tremendous difference in the lives of many individuals with disabilities.

I hope this information has helped Mr. Giarratani understand how this wheelchair ramp will not only benefit people in wheelchairs but also the general public. I would encourage Mr. Giarratani and anyone else who questions the need for certain construction features for individuals with disabilities, to consider the many other people it will benefit. I'm sure they'll be able to think of a few.

Peter Memorial Blood Drive A Success

The Houghs Neck Community Council would like to thank everyone who made our recent blood drive a great success. Despite the 95 degree weather, we had 108 people come to donate and we collected 83 pints of blood.

We would also like to thank our wonderful neighbors who baked delicious homemade goodies for the donors. Thanks go to the American Red Cross volunteers who helped all day.

And finally, our deepest thanks go to the Peter family (especially Charlie) who make this day possible. We are honored to be able to sponsor such a worthwhile event and to be part of such a caring community.

South Quincy Italian Festival Seeking Volunteers

The South Quincy Italian Festival is seeking volunteers to assist at its upcoming 22nd annual event.

This year's festival will be held Saturday, Sept. 9, from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Malnati's Block, the intersection of Liberty Street and Brooks Avenue. Rain date is Sunday, Sept. 10.

Help is needed for set-up, break down and supervision of children's activities.

Space is still available for food or craft vendors for a nominal fee.

The annual festival was formed 22 years ago as a way to reunite families and friends while raising money for scholarships given to Quincy students. The festival draws between 4,000 to 5,000 people and features food, crafts, collectibles, live entertainment and fun.

For more information, contact the South Quincy Italian Festival, 112R Liberty St., Quincy, MA 02169, or call Harry Bertoni at 617-472-9226 or Rick Speranzo at 617-471-1649.

Mrs. Helen Fisher Bailey Celebrates 102nd Birthday

Mrs. Helen Fisher Bailey of Quincy, whose birthplace on Cape Cod is a registered historic house, celebrated her 102nd birthday recently at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church.

She was born Aug. 6, 1904, when Teddy Roosevelt was president and only seven months after the Wright Brothers first flew, in Waquoit, a village in the town of Falmouth.

The house in which she was born is known to historians as the Bourne-Fisher House.

A special birthday cake was shared in the church at a coffee hour following the worship service for Mrs. Bailey, who lives alone in senior housing on Clay Street in Wollaston.

She was also honored by members of the Rural Masonic Lodge of Quincy as oldest surviving widow of the Wollaston Lodge which recently merged with the Rural Masons.

Her husband, Albert Bailey, died in 1961.

DAVID and ALICIA COLETTI

David, Alicia Coletti Celebrate 50th Anniversary

They were married Aug. 11, 1956 at St. Ambrose Church in Dorchester and have been Quincy residents for 50 years.

The dinner, at Alba's Restaurant, was given by their four children and spouses: Paul and Celeste Coletti and David and Mary Coletti of Quincy; Carroll Coletti and Deborah Jean Parsons of Milton and Gina Coletti and George Lanides of Bronx, N.Y.

Attending the dinner were Gloria Noble of Quincy, matron of honor; Jack Dankert of Squantum, best man, and wedding party members Lorraine Coskley of Connecticut and Barry Coletti of Plymouth.

tive Director of Quincy Asian Resources Inc. (QARI), who sponsored the event at Kam Man Marketplace, at President's Plaza. There was heavy rain preceding the event, but it cleared in time for the festivities. During the festival, there was a heavy rain shower for about 10 minutes, and attendees sought shelter under tents until it cleared again.

"We appreciate the support and cooperation of the city and sponsors," said Brothers. "It was a lot of fun for everyone."

The event was sponsored by Kam Man Foods, Mohegan Sun, and the city of Quincy, said Brothers.

Secretary of State William Galvin attended the festival and urged the crowd to register to vote at the Sept. 19 state primary election. Registering new voters were: Trish Bossart and Vincent Au of the Quincy City Clerk's Office.

Brothers said that Mayor William Phelan attended the festivities twice, returning the second time with his family.

A new Toyota Scion was raffled off during the festival, and will be donated once the ticket is verified. A round-trip international airline trip was also raffled, and proceeds will benefit QARI, and their mission to provide services and programs to the Quincy Asian community.

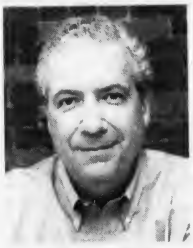
Gabrieli Visits Quincy For Town Hall Meeting



CHRIS GABRIELI

The Town Hall Meeting tour of Chris Gabrieli, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor, stopped off in Quincy the other day.

Some 250 people crowded into the community room at Marina Bay to greet the 46-year-old candidate during one of 10 such meetings he plans across the state.

"Holding public town meetings are a great way to hear directly from residents," he said. "I think Massachusetts needs a governor to hear the concerns of residents statewide."

He pledged to hold town hall meetings in every region of the state as governor to hear the concerns of residents statewide as a means of restoring accountability in state government.

Gabrieli is running against Attorney General Thomas Reilly and attorney Deval Patrick for the right to opposed Republican Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey in the November election.

"Let's talk about jobs," said Gabrieli, "where Mitt Romney and Kerry Healey haven't gotten the job done, about housing where they haven't gotten the job done, and about education, where they haven't gotten the job done.

"On taxes they came in promising to lower taxes to 5 per cent, but taxes are still 5.3 per cent.

"That's the difference between Kerry Healey and me: Kerry Healey wants to run the same politics and election year slogans and really hope you don't notice there are no results."

Sleep Subject Of Senior Talk

Dr. Gabrielle Freedman will lecture seniors on sleep disturbances Tuesday, Oct. 24, at 10 a.m. at Fenno House, 540 Hancock St. Wollaston.

She will discuss the problems of getting a good night's sleep, impart tips on nutrition and answers questions from the audience.

To register, call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

SOUTH COASTAL BANK recently presented a $500 grant to First Baptist Church of Wollaston from the bank's C.A.R.E.S. community giving program which helps local not-for-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of Community, Achievement, Responsibility and Excellence in children through exposure to the arts. First Baptist Church of Wollaston used the grant to run its Harmony Youth Chorus during the summer. The city-wide chorus, which is open to children of all faiths, backgrounds and races, was formed to give youths the opportunity to express themselves through music and dance, gain self-confidence and make new friends across ethnic and religions lines. The Harmony Youth Chorus concluded its summer session with a public performance at the church. For more information on South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. or to download an application, visit South Coastal Bank's Web site, www.southcoastalbank.com, or contact community liaison Susan Lincoln at 781-681-7206.

Stuttering Kids Star In DVD At Library

The often-ridiculed youngsters who stutter now have an ally in Stuttering For Kids By Kids, a new DVD starring real kids who stutter, now available at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The new video from The Stuttering Foundation shows how some kids handle the challenges by speaking out in class and teaching others about stuttering.

This is done through the narration of Swish, a lively and engaging animated basketball character designed by students from the Computer Graphics Technology Department at Purdue.

The children, who range in age from first graders to high schoolers, offer frank and sometimes differing views of stuttering.

The video and DVD are available free of charge at the library.

Sunday School Registration At Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church is now accepting registrations for the 2006-2007 Sunday School year.

Sunday School classes will begin Sunday, Sept. 24 with a Registration/Rally Day at the church, 310 Manet Ave. Regular classes will meet every Sunday at 9:30 a.m. October through June. Classes are offered for children grades kindergarten through 6th grade.

"We have an exciting year planned that's built around our new curriculum," said Jennifer McCauley Logue, director of the Sunday School program. "'Walk with Me' uses the best-loved stories of the Bible, combined with songs and activities, to share the gospel with children. We'll also be holding a traditional Christmas pageant with parts for all of the Sunday School students, and many other activities."

Children and their families do not need to be Houghs Neck residents or members of Houghs Neck Congregational Church in order to participate in the Sunday School program. "All children grades K-6th are invited to participate," Logue said.

To receive a registration form or for more information, call (617)328-1384 or e m a i l jennmccauley@aol.com.

Produce In Live Color At Quincy's Farmers' Market

Whatever your favorite vegetables are, you can find them at Quincy's Farmers' Market, located at the John Hancock Municipal parking lot, across from the court house.

Hours of operation are Fridays, 11:30 a.m. - 5 p.m., rain or shine until the end of October.

The City Council recently awarded Anneli Johnson, market manager of Farmers' Market, with an "Outstanding Community Service Award," presented by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

"That the City Council thought to do that was very nice," said Johnson. "I want to thank various organizations for helping the Farmers' Market. I couldn't have done it alone." Johnson expressed appreciation to the Planning Department, the Park Department and the Traffic Department for making the Farmers' Market possible.

Kelly also accepted a certificate of appreciation from the Federation of Massachusetts Farmers' Market on behalf of Mayor William Phelan.

The Farmer's Market aims to provide residents with healthy, affordable food, support local agriculture and create a community gathering place in downtown Quincy.

Other options available at the market are breads, cheeses, and meats.

Rev. Michael Robertson Pastor At First Church Of Squantum

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Formerly the Interim Pastor of Union Church in Weymouth, Rev. Michael Robertson is the new pastor at the First Church of Squantum.

Rev. MICHAEL ROBERTSON

Robertson, who started his Squantum position in June, said that the church is open to all, and is behavior-oriented. He said he believes in teaching participants how to act rather than what to think, though the church does remain "Christ centered."

"We're a church that's open," said Robertson. "The members aren't told how to think theologically. There is no creed. We're gathered around a covenant.

"There is a broad diversity of what people believe. I really love that. We're all in a different place of how we feel about our relationship with God. We're welcome and open to anyone who wants to come, and I'm very excited about being here. I hope to stay here for 10 years."

Robertson's wife, Emily "Emmy" Robertson earned her master's degree at Episcopal Divinity School in May, and is expected to join her husband at First Church of Squantum when she is ordained. "We're hopping to get her ordained some time this fall," said Robertson.

Upcoming events at the church include:

Spaghetti Supper: 6p.m. Sept. 16 at the church. Call the church for tickets, which are $10 each. Proceeds benefit the church.

Cookout and Open House: Begins after the 10-11a.m worship Sept. 10 at the parsonage. The event is open to the public, and will show renovations and redecorating of the interior of the parsonage. At the event, the church will be accepting registration for Sunday School, which will reconvene for the first time in several years. Emily Robertson will also display her hook rugs.

Other groups that convene at the church include boy scouts, yoga, brownie troops, youth choir, and Irish dancing.

Robertson was educated at Harvard College, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, and ordained in 2000. He has been involved in the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches, and the Interim Ministry Network. He was a member of many organizations, and is currently a member of the Interim Ministry Network, the Mayflower Association of Congregational Ministers, Milton Academy, Class of 1953 secretary, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, 82nd AMP Class Secretary, Falmouth Rotary Club, Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Varsity Club, and Falmouth Yacht Club.

For more information, call the First Church of Squantum at 617-328-6649.

Bereavement Support Group At Quincy Medical

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St. will host a free, seven-week Bereavement Support Group, beginning Wednesday Sept. 13.

The support group will meet Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for the seven consecutive weeks. The group is designed to help adults who are coping with the recent death of an adult loved one to alleviate feelings of grief and begin the healing process.

"Grieving people often feel isolated in their pain and perceive that the world only wants to see and hear from happy people," said Rev. Esther Bowen, director of Pastoral Care at Quincy Medical Center. "If you need an emotionally safe place where you can be yourself and process your grief experience, then perhaps this support group may work for you."

The program is free, however, pre-registration is required. For more information or to register, contact the Quincy Medical Center Pastoral Care Department at 617-376-5502.

Mollie Hirshberg Fund Aids Step One Program

A Swingin' for Children Jazz Concert and Auction recently held by the Mollie Hirshberg Fund raised some $20,000 for the Quincy-based Step One Early Intervention Program.

The event, held at the Lantana in Randolph, included live and silent auctions, a sit-down dinner and a jazz concert by The Olde Kids of the Block, a 20-piece orchestra featuring music of the Big Band Era.

Honorary co-chairs for the evening were Mayor William Phelan and his wife, Tracy.

Among the items auctioned were a one-week South African photo safari for two, two nights in New York, a week in Wellfleet on the Cape, Red Sox/Yankees tickets and a Vermont ski vacation.

Proceeds for the event benefit the renovation of the Mollie Hirshberg Learning Center , a program of Step One Early Intervention, which provides services to youngsters from birth to 3 years who have significant medical and developmental needs.

The Mollie Hirshberg Fund is a non-profit charitable organization founded in 1992 by the family and friends of Mollie Hirshberg, who for 40 years worked to help child victims of abuse or neglect and those with special needs.

Three Receive 15 HN Church Scholarships

Three residents were the recipients of 15 awards from the Scholarship Board for the Houghs Neck Congregational Church at a recent service.

Andrew "Zak" Keating is the recipient of The Randal and Brian Coombs Memorial Scholarship, the Elizabeth "Libby" and herb Morgan Memorial Scholarship, the Dr. Peter V. Corea Memorial Scholarship, The David Murphy Memorial Scholarship, and the Edwina Robeinson Scholarship. He will study computer science at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Natalie Janson is the recipient of the Mabel and Parmeter Brummit Memorial Scholarship, the Barbara Blowers Memorial Scholarship, the Edward and Cornelia Maguire Memorial Scholarship, the Hugh Christie Memorial Scholarship, and the Jeanette Griffin Memorial Scholarship. She will study biology at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Ashley Flibotte is the recipient of the Nellie R. Kirby Memorial Scholarship, the Anna and Norman Straughn Memorial Scholarship, the Muriel Bonney Memorial Scholarship, the Annie Coffin Memorial Scholarship, and the Rev. M. Alicia Corea Scholarship. She will study pharmacy at Simmons College.

Board members are: Pamela Criag, chairman/president, Susan Carr, secretary/clerk, Rev. M. Alicia Corea, Edwina Robinson, Gloria M. Brummitt, and Barbara Christie.

The Scholarship Board has offered scholarship awards for the past 52 years. It was established, and initially funded, by its founder, Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea, who said that he believed in the value and power of education for young people. His congregation believes that Rev. Corea inspired young people within the church to attend college before it was socially popular to do so. With his help, 14 individuals started the Scholarship Board for the Houghs Neck Congregational Church. The first scholarships were awarded to 11 young people in June, 1954. With numerous fund-raisers and contributions, the scholarship awards have continued. The board represents 16 "memorial" and "honor" scholarships.

The board has the distinction of being among the first Scholarship Boards in the Northeast, which was established to benefit young people who were affiliated with a church, and seeking higher education.

NQHS Orientation Program For Parents, Guardians Sept. 6

The North Quincy High School guidance department will host a "First Day of School" orientation program for parents and guardians of ninth-grade students Wednesday, Sept. 6, at 8:30 a.m. in the high school's media center.

The guidance staff along with a panel of guest speakers will provide parents with information regarding tools for a successful transition to high school and preparing for all of the issues that high school brings on. Refreshments will be served.

Guest speakers are:

Sue Blaney, author of "Please Stop the Roller Coaster! How Parents of Teenagers Can Smooth Out the Ride," will discuss adolescent development and how to make the high school years easier for parents to navigate.

Matt Noble from Revolution Prep will address the importance of preparing for college beginning with ninth grade.

Jean Auguste, career counselor from the My Turn program, will introduce parents to the career programs that are available to our students.

For more information, parents and guardians can call Helena Skinner at the North Quincy High School guidance office at 617-984-8747.

Matthew Harner Receives Book Award

Matthew Harner of Quincy is the recipient of a Book Award from the New England Institute of Technology (NEIT).

Book awards are given to those who demonstrate interest in technical areas of study. Harner is one of eight recipients from Blue Hills Regional Technical High School.

All recipients receive a gift book from NEIT, and those who elect to attend NEIT receive a scholarship up to $1,800.

Second Griday Book Group To Discuss Yellowstone Novel

The Second Friday Book Group will meet on the third Friday next month instead of the second.

The group will meet Friday, Sept. 15, at 9:30 a.m. in the children's room at the Thomas Crane Public Library to discuss the novel Letters from Yellowstone, by Diane Smith.

The novel tells the story written entirely in letters by Professor Howard Merriam as he plans in 1898 to put together an expedition to study botany in Yellowstone National Park.

He is more than pleased to accept a young medical student as a member of the group — until he meets A. E. Bartram face-to-face and finds out the A stands for Alexandra.

Copies of the book are available for checkout at the Main Library, 40 Washington St. Parents may bring their children and age appropriate activities will be available.

Morrissey Petitions For Senate To Reconvene To Vote On Critical Bills

State Senator Michael Morrissey is one of 11 senators who have signed a letter to Senate President Robert Travaglini requesting that the Senate reconvene to vote on some critical legislation, including one that would extend the statute of limitations on sexual abuse crimes against children.

The House and Senate adopted different versions. The Senate was not able to take up the matter before the session expired on midnight, July 31 because of the extensive changes made by the House.

"I hope that the President looks favorably on our request, and this important matter is taken up as soon as possible," said Morrissey.

At the start of this year's session, Morrissey co-sponsored two bills that would remove the statute of limitations in cases involving the sexual abuse of a child. The bills were taken up in a public hearing of the Joint Committee on the Judiciary. The Judiciary Committee endorsed a 10 year extension, from 15 to 25 years, for the statute of limitations for victims of sexual crimes as children to report their cases for prosecution.

"Although the bill in its current form is weaker than originally filed," said Morrissey, a co-sponsor of the legislation, "we can come back into session and take a stand in support of children and close loopholes currently enjoyed by many sex offenders."

In the letter to Travaglini dated Aug. 11, Morrissey and his colleagues asked Travaglini to recognize that "the victims of sexual abuse have suffered through inexplicable pain and torment throughout their lives and this legislation would recognize their plight by providing them with more time to bring closure to their lives."

The legislature has a number of other legislative business that could be taken up formally, such as the IT Bond Bill which includes funding for the University of Massachusetts, the state police and a matching grant for the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act.

"The legislature can also consider a number of vetoes that were not acted on," said Morrissey.

As Sales Of Homes And Condos Ease

Prices Stabilize Across Bay State In Spring Quarter

The Bay State housing market continued its cool down in the second quarter of 2006 as higher mortgage rates, a weak labor market, and a sharp rise in the inventory of unsold homes prompted buyers to proceed more cautiously before purchasing homes this spring, according to recent data issued by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

Across Massachusetts, a total of 12,439 detached single-family homes were sold in the second quarter of 2006, a decrease of 10.6 percent from the spring quarter last year when 13,918 homes sold. It's the fifth consecutive quarter that activity in the single-family home market has declined from the same period one year earlier. Sales of condominiums also fell this spring, though less significantly, declining 8.9 percent from a second quarter high of 6,790 units sold from April-June 2005 to 6,185 units sold in the comparable three-month period this year.

The MAR report found that this was the third busiest second quarter on record for the state's housing market, with the 18,624 homes and condos sold from April-June 2006 surpassed only by the 20,708 homes and condominiums sold in the 2005 second quarter and the 20,529 resident properties sold in the second quarter of 2004.

Regionally, in the spring quarter, sales of detached single-family homes declined in all areas of the state except Western Massachusetts, where sales were essentially flat, rising just 0.5 percent over the 2005 second quarter sales level. Sales fell a modest 4.6 percent in greater Boston, declined 13-14 percent in the Northeast region, South Shore and Southeastern Mass., and decreased 15-18 in Barnstable and Worcester counties.

Most regions also reported a drop in condo sales over the past year, but there was a modest sales growth of 2.2 percent in the Central region and a 26.9 percent increase in sales in the South Coast communities that comprise the Greater Fall River/New Bedford area. Sales slipped 3.2 percent in Western Mass., 6-8 percent along the South Shore and in greater Boston, but fell sharply by 33.9 percent on Cape Cod.

This spring, the number of single-family properties for sale across the state reached a new all-time high, the MAR report found. Over the past year, the inventory of detached homes and condos on the market rose steadily by 27 percent, from a monthly average of 49,931 listings in the second quarters of 2005 to 63,433 in the same quarter this year. At the current sales pace, this presents 10.2 months of supply, up from 7.2 months of suppy in the second quarter a year ago.

The time it takes to sell residential property in the Bay State has risen an average of 3-4 weeks in the past year. This spring, detached single-family homes were on the market an average of 120 days before selling, compared to 95 days for homes sold from April-June 2005. Similarly, the market time for condominiums increased from an average of 81 days in the second quarter last year to 112 days for units placed under agreement in the comparable quarter this year.

With the market finally starting to return to a more normal sales pace, selling prices has stabilized over the past year, data from the MAR report shows. During the spring quarter, hte statewide median selling price for detached single-family homes decreased a modest 1.3 percent, from $364,900 in the second quarter of 2005 to $360,000 in the same three-month period this year. It's the second consecutive quarter the median selling price has declined on an annualized basis, and reflects a price drop of 2.7 percent from the all-time high quarterly median of $370,000 set in the 2005 third quarter.

Meanwhile, in the condominium market, the statewide median selling price remained flat over the past 12 months at $280,000. This marks the first timme in 30 quarters that the median price for condos has not risen on a year-to-year basis.

Treat Within Walls To Rid Home Of Ants

(NUC) - If you see a trail of tiny black specs moving along your kitchen counter, you may have a serious ant problem.

In severe cases, these critters are all around the home.

"When ants go looking for food, their trails pass through voids in walls, window bays, under cabinets and carpeting and above ceilings," said Dr. Deanna Branscome, technical representative at Syngenta, a leading manufacturer of professional pest control products.

A PROFESSIONAL pest control treatment applied to void areas in walls can help keep ants at bay.

"In some cases, ant colonies make these wall voids their home. So, the ants you see on your counter could be living just behind it."

Ants enter the walls through openings in your home's exterior and then follow plumbing or other lines to find food or water inside. That's why you so often see ants around sinks and dishwashers.

Many ant problems are treated at the perimeter of a home. These treatments work well when ants enter your home to find food and take it back to their nest outdoors, but they are ineffective when ants have already moved into your walls.

Treating within walls can reach ant colonies that have moved their nests inside, while keeping indoor chemical application away from people and pets.

Branscome's company, Syngenta, offers Optigard ZT, the first nonrepellent insecticide specifically designed for treatment of void areas.

"When treating within walls there is a benefit in having your pest control company use a nonrepellent insecticide," Branscome said. "Nonrepellents allow ants to walk through the treated area and carry the insecticide back to their nest, which helps eliminate the colony."

If ants are inside your home, they are very difficult to control on your own. A professional pest control company can inspect your home, find the ant nests and create a targeted treatment program focused on those locations.

Energy Efficiency While Remodeling

(NAPS) According to the National Association of Homebuilders, Americans spent approximately $215 billion remodeling their homes in 2005. So if planning to renovate, remember it can pay to make the home more energy efficient while remodeling.

"Homeowners are putting extra emphasis on energy cost savings when remodeling their homes," said Danny Lipford, home-building expert and host of the television show "Today's Homeowner with Danny Lipford."

"Projects that provide more energy efficiency have proven to help reduce heating and cooling costs, in some cases by up to 15 percent," said Lipford.

Lipford says that homeowners would be wise to seek every possible way to keep their homes energy efficient and resistant to moisture. He recommends asking the contractor plenty of questions early in the remodeling process. Find out where he/she thinks energy savings can be maximized, where energy can be lost during a renovation, how to protect against potential weather damage and if he/she plans to use innovative products such as DuPont Tyvek Weatherization Systems Products that can help save energy while protecting the home.

TIPS FOR HOMEOWNERS

ZONE #1: The Attic

Attic insulation can result in significant energy savings, reducing heating and cooling costs by using innovative building materials like DuPont Tyvek AtticWrap. "Some of the most effective solutions that help make homes more efficient are the ones you can't see and are important to focus on early in the remodeling process," said Lipford.

Zone #2: The Walls

During construction, contractors can use a house wrap-such as DuPont Tyvek HomeWrap, which meets ENERGY STAR standards-under the siding. The wrap protects the house like a wind-breaker, forming a protective skin around the walls, doors and windows. Installing house wrap can help lower heating and cooling costs by keeping outside air and water out while allowing moisture to escape. Without a quality house wrap, homes are more vulnerable to exterior deterioration, air and water infiltration and possibly mold.

Zone #3: The Windows

Vinyl windows have become one of the most popular choices for superior energy efficiency and moisture management, especially when flashed correctly and installed with insulation glass panels.

Marble Chips Stained by Mildew

Q. We have a 2-foot border of marble chips around our house. On the backside of the house, the marble chips have become tarnished to a dark brown by mold and mildew. Tilex seems to kill the mold/mildew, but doesn't return the color. Obviously, I can't clean each individual stone by hand. Are there any products or methods available to kill the mold/mildew and return the marble chips to their original white luster? Thanks. — Bob G. in West Virginia

A. You could have a tough job ahead, because you just might have to clean each stone by hand. However, before we go to that extreme, let's try a couple of other tricks first.

A bathroom tile cleaner may not be the best thing for cleaning marble. As you mentioned, the cleaner killed the mold and mildew but didn't get rid of the tarnish. The next step is to test a few different cleaners on one or two of the marble chips to see what the results are.

Put away the name-brand cleaner (which may contribute to the staining problem rather than solve it) and pick up some plain old Borax, a stain fighter and fungicide (and a heckuva pest-control solution, but that's for another column). Mix the powder with water at the ratio recommended on the package and sponge it onto one of the stained marble chips. Let it sit for about 10 minutes, then rinse the stone. Do the same with a half-and-half solution of vinegar and water, and then a one-third to two-thirds solution of bleach and water. Let the chips dry and note the results.

If you find a good solution, apply it either by hand with a thick sponge (wear rubber gloves to protect your skin) and rinse with a garden hose, or look into renting a pressure washer and spraying on the solution at low pressure and then rinsing it off at a higher pressure to speed up the job.

Professional marble cleaners are also available at home-improvement and flooring stores. These will cost more than the household solutions and may only be applicable by hand, but if nothing else works, these may do the trick — remove the mildew and restore the color.

Tips On Making Over A Home Office

(NUC) - Most people have some type of a home office. Whether it's used for work, managing household finances or helping the kids with homework, there is usually a room designated for a computer, printer, filing cabinet and other office supplies.

If you haven't spent much time planning your home office, you may wind up with a cramped, cluttered, uncomfortable space that simply doesn't inspire productivity. Genevieve Gorder of TLC's "Trading Spaces" has a few tips for getting your home office in workable condition:

GENEVIEVE GORDER

• Start from scratch. Clear out your entire office and paint it a fresh color that inspires you or makes you feel focused. Stay away from reds and blues; choose energizing greens, comforting golds or pale yellows. Color is a bold and inexpensive way to transform a room.

• Organize. When it comes to organizing, think modular, so you can move pieces around to suit your various needs and create more desk space. Determine which items you will need easy access to and arrange them accordingly. Bins and boxes are great for storing the things you're not using all the time and give the room a clean and organized look.

• Declutter your desktop. This applies to your virtual desktop as well as your physical one. A recent survey by Harris Interactive revealed that 61 percent of PC owners are more likely to store their music, photos and other personal files on their computer rather than anywhere else in their house. However, it can be frustrating if the information you need isn't easy to locate because you've forgotten the file name or the folder where it's stored.

Software, such as Windows Desktop Search, is available to help you search, organize and store digital photos, music, financial files and more. It is available as a free download at http://desktop .msn.com.

• Install soothing lighting. Stay away from harsh, fluorescent lights. Lamps and dimmer switches help create a comfortable, inviting work space.

• Choose comfortable furniture. Consider an ergonomic chair that won't strain your back over the course of a busy day.

Healing Tree Yoga Offers Classes And Treatments

Healing Tree Yoga & Wellness Center recently celebrated its grand opening in Wollaston Center, ready to deliver daily yoga and pilates classes as well as healing treatments, massages and a variety of wellness programs.

The opening at 605 Hancock St. was attended by City Council President Doug Gutro; Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative; and Nancy Mui from Ascend Tutoring & Services, a member of the Wollaston Business Partnership.

Owners Kathy Keane, an experience yoga instructor, and her husband, Mark, a former marketing executive, have combined their respective talents to assist people in improving their lives through healthy practices and education.

Healing Tree Yoga enhances their classes and treatments with a wide variety of workshops and special events throughout the week.

The business on the second floor is a short walk from the Wollaston T Station and has something that is becoming a rarity in Quincy — ample parking within an adjacent lot.

"Starting Sept. 5, we will begin a Fall Lounge Talk series every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 7:15 to 8:30 p.m. which will feature free seminars by life coaches, alternative healers, doctors and nutritionists," said Kathy Keane.

Healing Tree Yoga is designed to appeal to all ages and levels of fitness.

Baby boomers will enjoy the gentle flow of yoga practice, seniors can work on chronic conditions and children can learn to quiet their minds and strengthen their bodies.

For more information, drop in at the Center or visit their website at www.healingtreeyoga.com.

31 Quincy Winners In Sheriff's Essay Contest

Middle school students from Quincy and other Norfolk County communities received high praise for their participation in Sheriff Michael Bellotti's annual School Essay Contest.

Out of 748 essays submitted, 77 students received top honors for their compositions on the subject of who they look up to as a role model.

Boston Globe Columnist Beverly Beckham, guest speaker at the recent awards ceremony, expressed her delight at children being celebrated for something a little different- in this case, their writing ability.

"We're usually giving awards for sports or other accomplishments, which is good, but it's nice to see students being recognized for writing," Beckham told the crowd of nearly 300 students, parents and teachers at Apollo Restaurant in Norwood.

She encouraged the children to keep a journal and write in it every day.

Sheriff Bellotti said the students did an "incredible job" writing their essays and describing the importance of a role model and who their own role models are.

"We know that children with positive role models are better equipped to handle the challenges that life will bring their way," Bellotti said. "And being able to express and explore these ideas through writing gives students a better understanding of themselves and the world around them."

Many of the students shared personal stories of friendships that have had an impact on their lives and other people they look up to in a positive way.

The most frequently mentioned role models in the essays were fathers, mothers, sports figures, grandparents and teachers.

In addition to Quincy, students from Braintree, Brookline, Canton, Dover, Holbrook, Norwood, Randolph, Stoughton and Weymouth participated in the essay contest.

"I'm grateful to all the teachers, principals and school superintendents for getting their students involved and recognizing the value of this contest," Bellotti said.

Staff members from the Sheriff's Youth Division choose the winners after grading the essays on grammar, composition and overall development of ideas.

The School Essay Contest is part of Bellotti's commitment to youth development. He also has an after-school program in Braintree during the school year that focuses on outdoor adventure-based education and leadership skills.

He also operates the annual Youth Leadership Academy and a basketball academy in the summer.

Scam Alert

One of the most recent, but by no means new scam, involves a telephone ruse. The calls, which have been made mostly to Weymouth residents, comes from an excited caller stating "your nephew is in trouble and needs money," using a common name like John or Steve if asked.

There are variations of the ruse, with the victim asked to either leave the money in their mailbox or bring it to a predetermined location. Although most people would not fall for something like this, there are enough victims out there to make this scam profitable.

As always, get further information and give the police a call. It is never a good idea to meet an unknown person with a large sum of money!

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Aug. 8, at approximately 12:45 a.m., Officer M.J. O'Brien arrived at the WaterWorks nightclub to assist detail Officers Ed Ryan and Terrence Downing in dispersing the crowd at closing time.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officers had a difficult time attempting to remove one patron who was being loud and obnoxious, swearing at them and making obscene gestures. This male patron (suspect No. 1) was accompanied by a female (suspect No. 2) who joined in with foul language.

The suspects did not like that the officers told them the club was closing and they would have to leave. The behavior of the suspects resulted in approximately 40 to 50 people gathering around to watch the tirade aimed at the officers.

The officers showed great restraint as they continued to direct the suspects to keep walking away and leave the premises. The suspects were advised they would be arrested if they continued their antics, so they slowly walked away but continued shouting obscenities at the officers.

At this time, with the suspects approximately 100 yards away, they stopped and screamed more obscenities. Suspect No. 1 held his arms up at the officers and yelled, "Come on (expletive)! Come on! You want some of this?"

The behavior of the suspects was clearly disruptive to the community and hindering the ability of the officers to disperse the crowd at the club. O'Brien jumped into his cruiser and drove to the suspects, but suspect No. 1 immediately ran away.

O'Brien attempted to run after him and as he ran by suspect No. 2, she shouted, "Don't you touch him (expletive)," and she shoved the officer with both hands, knocking him off balance and nearly to the ground.

Ryan, who was directly behind O'Brien, immediately handcuffed suspect No. 2. O'Brien and additional officers searched for suspect No. 1 in the MDC parking lot, where he was last seen.

After searching for several minutes, State Troopers Bill Cameron and Steve Johnson, who were patrolling the area in an unmarked cruiser, pulled up and stated they may have the person the Quincy officers were looking for.

They said the man ran up to them, opened up the rear door, jumped in and excitedly yelled, "Get me out of here. The police are chasing me!" O'Brien opened the cruiser door and identified the passenger as suspect No. 1 and told him to get out of the car. Suspect No. 1 refused to get out and as officers tried to remove him, he flailed and squirmed about until additional officers were able to extricate him.

Suspect No. 1, a 26-year-old male from Weymouth, was charged with "Disorderly Conduct" and "Knowingly Resisting Arrest." Suspect No. 2 and wife of suspect No. 1, also from Weymouth, was charged with "Assault and Battery on a Police Officer" and "Disorderly Conduct." Nice work!

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

From Start To Fitness

by Andrea Wyatt M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Do Children Need Personal Trainer?

Q. Despite numerous attempts to get my children up and moving, they're still not as active as I would like. A neighbor suggested signing them up with a personal trainer to help them stay in shape. Her children work with a trainer, and she has seen an improvement in their body composition and attitude toward exercise. My children are 10 and 12 years old. Does working out with a trainer sound like a good idea?

A. Motivating children to enjoy and engage in physical activity has become harder and harder lately. The days of children running from yard to yard playing with each other until the street lights come on has been replaced with hours of television and video games. With the rise in childhood obesity and other medical conditions associated with inactivity, the use of a personal trainer might be an innovative and fun way to get your children moving.

A certified personal trainer will be able to create a fitness program to suit the needs of any client, including children. Although your children may be working with a trainer, that doesn't mean they will have to lift heavy weights or work on exercise equipment. For children, these sessions could resemble a classic physical education class, where the use of bodyweight exercises such as push ups can be used in addition to other fitness tools to introduce fun back into being active.

A trainer also will take into consideration the age of the children and develop an appropriate program to ensure their safety while increasing their fitness level.

Hire a trainer who is certified and has experience working with children. Discuss your goals for your children with the trainer and stay involved with their progress. Ask the trainer to give you feedback so that you can positively reinforce healthy behaviors at home.

Another idea may be to have your children exercise with your neighbor's children in a group. Group training is a great way to encourage children to exercise with others and can allow them to not feel like outsiders.

The key word to remember is "fun!" Promoting a healthy lifestyle for your children should begin at home, and a little help from the outside can make it easier.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Orthopedic Surgeon, Sports Medicine Physician

Dr. Eric Berkson Joins QMC Staff

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) announces Orthopedic Surgeon and Sports Medicine Physician Eric Berkson, MD, has joined the medical staff.

Dr. Berkson joins Quincy Medical Center surgeons Drs. Frederick Heller, Charles DiCecca and Marvin Rosen in Orthopaedic Surgery of Quincy, Inc., located at 909 Hancock St., Quincy.

Specializing in treatment of shoulder, elbow and knee injuries, Dr. Berkson has advanced training and expertise in minimally invasive, arthroscopic techniques, cartilage restorative procedures, knee ligament reconstruction and rotator cuff repair.

A graduate of the prestigious Sports Medicine clinical fellowship in the Department of Orthopaedic Surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital, Dr. Berkson has a clinical interest in the treatment of sports injuries and focuses on assisting athletes – at all age levels – to return to their highest level of pre-injury function, with an emphasis on early, post-operative rehabilitation. He has provided medical coverage for the New England Patriots, Boston Red Sox, Boston Bruins, and New Revolutions, as well as several high school and collegiate athletic teams.

DR. ERIC BERKSON

Board Eligible Orthopedic Surgery, Dr. Berkson received his medical degree, with honors, from the Pritzker School of Medicine at the University of Chicago, and completed his internship and residency with the Department of Orthopaedic Surgery at Rush University Medical Center in Chicago. He served as a clinical fellow and graduate assistant in the Section of Sports Medicine in the Department of Orthopaedic Surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital before joining Quincy Medical Center.

To learn more about Dr. Berkson or any of Quincy Medical Center's nearly 400 physicians and specialists, call the Quincy Medical Center Physician Referral Service, toll-free, 24-hours a day, at 1-877-479-CARE or 1-877-479-2273.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Sprains, Strains And Muscle Spasms

By DR. JAY PROVENZANO

Sprain:

Have you ever been walking and slip off the curb? Your ankle turns over and you feel a wrenching pain, but can still walk back home. This is a sprain.

A sprain occurs when the joint is forced to go beyond its normal range of motion. The ligament fibers overstretch and tear. This often happens with sudden twisting in active sports. With a sprain, the joint can still function, even though minute ligament tears leak blood into the tissue surrounding the joint, causing swelling and discomfort.

Back sprains are usually severe. Pain and motion in the lower back will often cause a muscle spasm. Acute sprains require the attention of a doctor.

Strain:

If a muscle or tendon was injured and the pain is immediate, it is a strain. Strains are not as serious as sprains. They often happen when muscles aren't properly warmed up before use. Chronically strained muscles or ligaments can result from years of tension or misuse.

Spasm:

After a long drive in the car, have you ever reached in the back seat for something and had your low back muscles clamp down and cause extreme pain? This is a spasm.

A spasm is a sudden, forceful and sustained muscle contraction. It is usually caused by a direct trauma to the muscle, excessive exercise or chronic strain. You can tell when your muscle is in spasm. It bulges and is hard to the touch. The muscle is painful and feels tied in a knot. When you have a muscle spasm, all the fibers contract. With normal movement, only some of the fibers contract.

Muscles do two things. They contract and they relax. Muscles around the spine add protection. If they are overworked, the message from the nervous system to the muscle is to contract and protect. If something is wrong with the discs or facet joints, muscles go into spasm to hold everything in place, preventing further damage to the spine. A muscle in spasm serves as a splint, restricting range of motion and friction upon joints. Protective spasms can be chronic. It can even be a cause of scoliosis, abnormal spinal curvature.

What You Can Do

- Treat your muscles with the care and respect they deserve. Keep them flexible with daily slow stretching.
- Check with a chiropractor to correct any defects in joint mobility which might be causing your muscles to go into protective spasm.
- Warm up your muscles and joints before exercise.
- Stretch them out when you are through exercising.

Dr. Jay Provenzano is a chiropractor at WholeBody Solutions, 605 Hancock St. For more information call 617-328-6300.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE EARLIEST AMERICAN DENTISTRY

One popular form of cosmetic dentistry involves the application of porcelain veneers. These thin, precisely formed shells of porcelain are placed on the outer surfaces of front teeth that have been shaved just enough to accept the new porcelain layer without altering the thickness of the tooth. The result is a gleaming, new translucent surface that corrects chipped and discolored teeth. As advanced as this technology may seem, a crude form of it was found to exist 4,500 years ago. This earliest known form of dental work in the Americas was found at a Mexican burial site, in which there was a skull with upper front teeth that had been ground down so they could be fitted with panther teeth.

Recent advances in technique and materials offer many options in the creation of brilliant smiles. A dazzling smile can ignite a room, projecting an image of self-assurance and high personal esteem. Rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. We appreciate the opportunity to provide you with quality dental care. Our staff is made up of well-trained professionals who work together as a team to provide you with the highest quality treatment in a warm, caring setting. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for compassionate and gentle dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

2,000 Attend Tribute, Plaque Dedicated

Jimmy Fund Tourney Remembers Patrick White

The recent sixth annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament had a different atmosphere than in years past.

Patrick White, for whom the tournament is played in honor of, was not physically present at Adams Field but he was there in spirit.

Patrick, a second baseman who played many years in Quincy Youth Baseball, died last November at age 15 after battling rhabdomysarcoma, a form of tissue cancer, for more than six years.

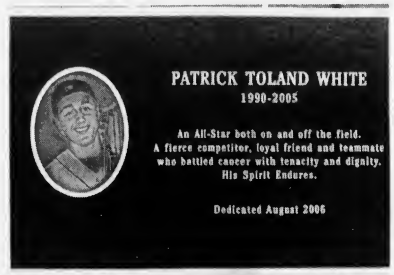
During that time, Patrick helped raise money for The Jimmy Fund and spent time visiting and supporting other young cancer patients at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Patrick was remembered at the opening ceremony with an emotional, half-hour tribute before nearly 2,000 people, including many family and friends.

"It was really great," said Bob Griffin, tournament director, who also organized the event with his wife, Roseann Russell, Jane Warwick and Cindy Ouellette, and numerous volunteers. "It was very moving and touching. It was an emotional tribute."

The tourney turned out to be another big hit, raising around $27,000 to bring the six-year total to more than $115,000. The funds raised will benefit the Pediatric Solid Tumor Program within Dana-Farber/Children's Hospital Cancer Care Services.

Patrick's former team, a group of 15-year-olds coached by Mark Vialpando, repeated as champions with a thrilling victory over Weymouth. In the inaugural tourney six years, ago, Patrick's team lost to Weymouth in the final game as 10-year-olds.



A PLAQUE HONORING the late Patrick White was unveiled at Adams Field. It reads: "An All-Star both on and off the field. A fierce competitor, loyal friend and teammate who battled cancer with tenacity and dignity. His Spirit Endures."
Quincy Sun Photo/Chris Poisson

The ceremony, emceed by Tom Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, began with remarks by Mayor William Phelan, Griffin and Patrick's father, Paul.

Two longtime teammates and friends, Joe Vialpando and Mike Le Bel, unveiled a plaque in Patrick's memory that reads: "An All-Star both on and off the field. A fierce competitor, loyal friend and teammate who battled cancer with tenacity and dignity. His Spirit Endures."

Boston Red Sox right fielder Trot Nixon, who knows the White family through the Jimmy Fund, attended the tribute with his young son, who threw out the ceremonial first pitch along with Patrick's sisters, Meghan and Katie.

Before the start of the game that evening, each player on the 10 participating teams carried a yellow rose and placed it at the second base position in honor of Patrick. The players, in a move that was not choreographed, lined up in the shape of the numeral seven — Patrick's uniform number — while U2's "Sometimes you can't make it on your own" could be heard over the sound system.

Billy Kiley, Patrick's best friend who played on the same team, then placed a dozen red roses on the field with Louis Armstrong's "It's a wonderful world" playing in the background.

Patrick's Quincy team took the field in the top of the first inning and paid another tribute by leaving the second base position unoccupied. Instead, coach Vialpando had the second baseman play in short right field while the roses remained on the field.

After the half inning, the ceremony concluded when the players handed the red roses to Patrick's mother, Barbara, and the yellow roses to family and friends in the stands.

The Mary Pratt Division of Quincy Youth Softball recently finished its season with Coffee Break Café defeating Villa Rosa in extra innings for the championship at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The girls in the league, ages 12 to 15, exhibited fine-tuned softball skills and sportsmanship throughout the season. They were coached by Jim Bonanni, Ken Gray, Meghan McCarthy, Dave Sheridan and Bob Yee.

Registration Underway For Redstocking Fall Baseball Program

Registration is ongoing for the Quincy Redstocking fall baseball program.

The eight-week program is open to any player ages 6 to 15 who wants to improve their skills by playing more games in a competitive and fun atmosphere.

The program will be directed by Mark Jaehnig, founder of the Quincy Redstocking AAU Club and longtime Quincy Little League and Quincy Legion baseball coach. He will be assisted by several high school and Legion ball players.

There are three divisions:

- Ages 6 to 9 will play Tuesdays and/or Thursdays from 4 to 6 p.m. at Quarry Hills beginning Sept. 5.
- Ages 9 to 12 will play Tuesdays and/or Thursdays from 4 to 6 p.m. at Quarry Hills beginning Sept. 5.
- Ages 12 to 15 will play Saturdays from 1 to 4 p.m. at O'Rourke Field beginning Sept. 9.

Registration forms can be picked up at 112 Billings Road or can be done by calling Mark Jaehnig at 617-472-3311. Cost is $70 per player and includes a Quincy Redstocking baseball shirt.

TECHNOLOGY YOU CAN LIVE WITH

According to a study conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS), the technology known as "electronic stability control" (ESC) could prevent nearly one-third of the 10,000 fatal automobile crashes each year. Electronic stability control, as its name implies, is technology that prevents automobiles from rolling over. According to the IIHS, ESC was able to reduce the risk of single-vehicle rollovers involving sport utility vehicles (SUVs) by 80 percent while reducing the risk of the same in passenger cars by 77 percent. Electronic stability control involves the application of brakes to individual wheels when sensors detect that a vehicle is veering off course. It is a proven technology that saves lives.

Electronic stability control, according to the IIHS study, saves lives. If you see an indicator light on your dash regarding ESC, please get your car checked out right away. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we have the knowledge to work with today's technology, such as ESC. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we guarantee any work we do. Questions? Call 781-843-1550 today. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: Electronic stability control may be the most significant safety advancement since the advent of the seat belt.

CHAMPIONS OF Quincy Bay Race Week Widgeon Class from the Quincy Recreation Department's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Facility were skipper DJ Figueiredo (center) with crew Sean Patrick Hannon and Danny Breen.

SECOND-PLACE finishers were skipper Kelsey McCarthy (center) with crew Hannah Flattery and Andrew Fonte.

THIRD-PLACE finishers were, from the left, skipper Aiden Flattery and crew John Schwartz and Zach Dwyer.

16 Rec. Dept. Sailors Participate In Race Week

Sixteen sailors from the Quincy Recreation Department's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Facility at Black's Creek recently participated in Quincy Bay Race Week.

The sailors, from the advanced sailing classes, participated in seven races held at Quincy Yacht Club.

Sailing in the Widgeon Class were skipper DJ Figueiredo and crew Sean Patrick Hannon and Danny Breen, who won six of seven races to finish first overall.

Skipper Kelsey McCarthy and crew Andrew Fonte and Hannah Flattery won a race and finished second. Skipper Aiden Flattery and crew John Schwartz and Zach Dwyer placed third.

Also racing were skipper Giulia Murphy and crew Emily Hannon and Katie Breen, and skipper Mary Schwartz and crew Anthony Fonte, Jack Glennon and Leah Glennon.

The sailors were selected from the advanced class of the department's summer program and were accompanied by program supervisor Bill Croke and instructors Lisa Rice and Nate Schow.

Recreation Director Barry Welch praised the Quincy Bay Race Week Committee for "their commitment to providing the opportunity for our participants to enjoy the thrill associated with sailing in Quincy Bay. It is an experience they will never forget."

DANIELLE PASCHALL and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti at the Sheriff's Youth Leadership Academy in Braintree. Paschall recently became the 3,000th participant in the Sheriff's annual summer Youth Academy, now in its fifth year.

Sheriff's Youth Leadership Academy Reaches Milestone

A 10-year-old Quincy girl this month became the 3,000th participant in Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's Youth Leadership Academy.

The milestone was reached this week as Bellotti recognized Danielle Paschall at the Sheriff's Braintree Public Safety Complex.

"It's a number we didn't think we'd get to so quickly," Bellotti said. "We're just so happy to have a program here that has really taken off and is having such a positive impact on Norfolk County youth."

In just its fifth summer, the Sheriff's Youth Leadership Academy has now seen 3,000 10- to 14-year-olds attend the annual summer academy that uses adventure-based education to teach teamwork and instill pride and confidence in each participant.

"In our first year we had 250 kids for the entire summer," Bellotti said. "Last summer we had over 600. This summer we added an extra week and will have almost 800 kids from across Norfolk County participate by the end of August."

The Youth Academy's most dynamic feature is the expansive, 40-foot high Ropes Course, or "confidence course," which is among the five largest ropes courses in New England with its 25 high elements and 15 low elements.

Paschall said her favorite aspects of the academy were "making friends, working hard at climbing and making it to the top of the (40-foot high) Rock Wall."

"It's awesome because you challenge yourself and your friends are always cheering you on," she added.

The academy runs one-week sessions with new children every week. Local police officers refer many of the children and also participate with their groups.

"This is one of the best youth programs I've seen," said Peter Aubry, training manager for Project Adventure of Beverly, the company that installed the ropes course. "It's well organized and the full-time staff stays current with their training, which is a compliment to the sheriff's office."

Deputy Superintendent of Community Programs for the sheriff's office, William Knight, said the Youth Academy is "one of a kind."

"Sheriff Bellotti is committed to have as many children participate throughout Norfolk County as possible," he said.

For more information about the Youth Leadership Academy, contact the Sheriff's Youth Programs Division at 781-751-3505.

City Tennis Tourney Starts Sept. 13

The 36th annual City Tennis Tournament is scheduled to start Sept. 13 on the municipal courts at Russell Park behind the Center for Technical Education.

The tournament will conclude Sept. 24, weather permitting. Applications can be obtained at the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway. Deadline for applications is Sept. 8.

Entry fee is $15 for adults and $8 for youth under age 16. Participants will receive a tournament T-shirt.

The tournament — believed to be the largest and oldest municipal tourney in New England — is open to Quincy residents with 12 events crowning city champions.

Events are: Men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles, boys and girls 16 and under, men's 50 and over, men's and women's 35 and over, mixed doubles, men's singles "B" and city employees.

The Quincy Credit Union will co-sponsor the event for the 11th straight year. For more information, call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A troubling situation takes a positive turn and moves toward a resolution that should please you and your supporters. Meanwhile, make time to deal with new domestic issues.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time to reassess your goals and consider shifting directions. Remember to keep an open mind, and be prepared to make changes as new opportunities arise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Rely on your strong Mercury aspect to help you close that communication gap before it becomes too wide to cross. A sibling or other family member has news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're about to get off that emotional roller coaster and start experiencing more stability than you've been used to. This is a good time to let someone new into your life.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Good news: A trusted friend comes through for you. But you still need to shed that last scrap of self-doubt and once more become the cool, confident Cat we all know and love.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Things should be getting back to a less hectic pace. Enjoy the more peaceful atmosphere. You earned it. But don't forget about those still-unresolved issues.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive family relationship develops as misunderstandings are explained away. A job situation appears promising, but check it out before you act on it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. That on-the-job situation is working out as you'd hoped. Now's a good time to relax and to enjoy the company of family and close friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might feel as if you're caught in an emotional tug-of-war. But don't be rushed into a decision on either side. Wait for more facts before you act.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Goat's usually high level of self-confidence is brimming over these days. This should help you deal with a situation that you've avoided far too long. Go for it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Relationships become more intense. But be careful not to be pushed into decisions you're not comfortable with. Remember: You're the one in charge of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You need to show more confidence in your ability to reach your goals. Make that long-delayed decision, and avoid floundering around in a sea of self-doubt.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you appear to be strongly opinionated, you can also be open to other ideas — so long as they are presented with logic and clarity.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that life is a mirror. If you frown at it, it frowns back; if you smile, it returns the greeting.

Have you ever noticed that no matter how humble the circumstances, how difficult their tasks and work, some people seem to enjoy life immensely?

Those who use happiness as a tool for living appreciate, enjoy, and find satisfaction now in everything they have and in everything they do. Their condition in life may not be ideal, and need not represent the limit of their ambitions. But being content for their present, they can play with imagination and work with enthusiasm... Those who make happiness a goal, push it off into the future and make it something to struggle for, rather than something to know and enjoy. To make happiness a goal is never to know it... To make happiness a tool is never to lose it . . .

Registration Open For Chabad Hebrew School

Registration is now open to students of the Chabad Hebrew School, 1356 Quincy Dr., for the 2006-07 school year.

Starting in September, classes will be Sundays, and offered to children 5-13 years of age.

The school will teach South Shore Jewish children to embrace their Jewish roots, and gain a sense of Jewish pride, no matter their level of observance or affiliation.

The school will provide an academic environment where children will acquire a broad knowledge of Judaism through a motivating and challenging venue. Through Hebrew reading, writing, Jewish history, holidays and more, the students will gain appreciation for the values and traditions of their heritage.

"Our school's underlying approach is for the children to enjoy the time spent at Hebrew School so that they are left with positive experiences, and a greater appreciation for Jewish education," said Morah Bronstein, director of Chabad's Hebrew School.

The program is blended with games, incentives, crafts, dramatics, family celebrations and other exciting extra curricular activities.

Scholarships are available, and no student will be turned down for lack of funds.

To schedule an appointment or to visit, call 617-850-5935 or email shevybronstein@gmail.com.

Sunday School Registration At Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church is now accepting registrations for the 2006-2007 Sunday School year.

Sunday School classes will begin Sunday, Sept. 24 with a Registration/Rally Day at the church, 310 Manet Ave. Regular classes will meet every Sunday at 9:30 a.m. October through June. Classes are offered for children grades kindergarten through 6th grade.

"We have an exciting year planned that's built around our new curriculum," said Jennifer McCauley Logue, director of the Sunday School program. "'Walk with Me' uses the best-loved stories of the Bible, combined with songs and activities, to share the gospel with children. We'll also be holding a traditional Christmas pageant with parts for all of the Sunday School students, and many other activities."

Children and their families do not need to be Houghs Neck residents or members of Houghs Neck Congregational Church in order to participate in the Sunday School program. "All children grades K-6th are invited to participate," Logue said.

To receive a registration form or for more information, call (617)328-1384 or e m a i l jennmccauley@aol.com.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have Sunday worship and church school beginning at 10 a.m.

The Rev. Gary W. Smothers will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Sermons from Mark 7) Jesus Begins His Ministry."

There will also be a children's message.

Childcare is available for infants and toddlers.

(Cont'd From Page 1)

4.9 people. Some 54,000 visited the Main Library on weekends in July and August.

Attendance at the library's 744 programs was up, too, with 17,483 people representing a 22 per cent increase over the 14,311 who attended 607 programs in Fiscal '05. Children's attendance was up 13,933 over the 11,786 of the previous year.

Use of the 84 computers in the Main Library increased an amazing 60 per cent. They were used 430,144 times for an hour's use compared to 258,336 in Fiscal '05. The 10 branch computers added 13,312 uses for a grand total of 443,456.

The 608,076 items borrowed from the library included 406,477 books and magazines and 54,741 audios, videos and DVDs, mostly to adults, who took out 209,917 and 45,232 respectively. For children, the figures were 196,560 and 9,509.

Reference fielded 56,575 questions in Fiscal '06 compared to 52,151 a year before.

Appeal Is Denied In 1998 Quincy Murder

The State Appeals Court has affirmed the conviction of Joseph D. Romano Jr. of Quincy in the September, 1998, murder of his wife, Katherine, whose body has never been found.

Romano was convicted of second degree murder in 2002 in spite of his contention that his wife was still alive or had been harmed by unnamed drug dealers.

"This was no ordinary case and no ordinary trial," said Norfolk District Attorney William Keating.

"We felt strongly that the Appeals Court would uphold this conviction but we had no precedents to look to under Massachusetts law.

"Our research indicated that two dozen jurisdictions had successfully prosecuted murderers who had attempted to cover their crimes by successfully disposing of the body — but never Massachusetts."

Romano contended that his trial judge erred when she did not strike a prejudicial statement, that he was entitled to a manslaughter instruction and that evidence was insufficient to prove he acted with malice.

All three contentions were rejected by the Appeals Court.

Local Elected Officials Host Reception For Lt. Governor Candidate Tim Murray

Local elected officials Councillor Michael McFarland, Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis, and School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney recently held a reception fundraiser at the home of Honor and Jay Davis in Quincy for Worcester mayor and Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor Tim Murray.

Murray had the opportunity to address the audience on several campaign issues. He said one of the reasons he entered the race is because of cutbacks in state funding to towns and cities have forced municipalities to raise property taxes to intolerable levels.

"This has placed even affluent communities in the same predicament as cash-strapped cities such as Worcester" Murray said. When municipal governments raise property taxes to keep up with constantly rising costs and keep pubic schools and police department afloat, the residents with the lowest incomes are hurt the most, Murray said.

"These are the kinds of situations where communities can no longer continue to pay for these services with the property tax, the most regressive tax there is."

Murray said he wants to bring his experience of local government to the state level and be a voice of reason for local towns and cities.

As mayor Worcester, Murray said he used innovation and determination to fuel economic growth expanding commuter rail service; launched aggressive brownfields reclamation initiatives and maximized job creation and business development in Worcester.

As mayor Murray also chairs the School Committee and has worked hard to improve the city's school system. He built school-community partnerships to lower drop-out rates, launched school-based health initiatives and expanded after school programs to support working families.

Worcester University Park Campus School, a unique partnership between the city and Clark University, was recently named one of the top 100 public high schools in the U.S. by Newsweek magazine.

Murray is a third term mayor of Worcester, the state's second largest city.

A native of Worcester, and the son of a high school teacher and a nurse, Murray attended Worcester public schools. He attended St. John's High School and earned a B.A. degree at Fordham University.

Murray was elected to the Worcester City Council in 1997 and became mayor in 2001. He and his wife Tammy have one daughter.

For more information on the Murray campaign, call 508-791-0400.

School Bells Sept. 6 For Grades 1-9

By TOM HENSHAW

It's time to put away the skate boards and flip-flops and pick up the note pads and laptops.

School starts for students in grades 1-9 in Quincy Public Schools Wednesday, Sept. 6, with the city's first-ever full-day kindergarten classes experiencing the first of three orientation days.

Sophomores, juniors and seniors at both high schools will join their freshman colleagues for a full day of classes Thursday, Sept. 7, and pre-school and kindergarten classes will begin Monday, Sept. 11.

"Quincy Public Schools is proud and excited to begin the 2006-07 school year with the offer of full-day kindergarten at each of our elementary schools," said Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"Thanks to the support of Mayor William Phelan and the School Committee, Quincy Public Schools has been fortunate enough to provide this incredible opportunity to our kindergarten age students."

Children who are 4½ years old on or before Aug. 31, 2006 (born on or before Aug. 31, 2001) are eligible to attend the new full-day kindergarten. Registration is still open all this week.

"With the implementation of the full day kindergarten program," said DeCristofaro, "students will be able to further develop their literacy, writing, math, science and social skills beyond what was possible in our half-day format.

"The longer day will allow students to spend more time on comprehensive curriculum as well as provide time for social growth and developmental opportunities."

Students in grades 1 - 9 (elementary and middle pupils and high school freshmen) will attend a full day Sept. 6 with lunch served in all schools. For freshmen, it will be orientation day.

Preschool and kindergarten youngsters will have their orientation days Sept. 6 through Friday, Sept. 8, with 649 registered during an en-

Quincy To Have Role In Terror Attack Test Sept. 17

Quincy will play only a peripheral role in Operation Poseidon, the terrorist drill that is planned to take place in Greater Boston in the early morning hours of Sunday, Sept. 17.

The test of preparedness for a terrorist attack will assume an explosion in a lab in Everett that spreads to an LNG facility and the explosion of a "dirty" bomb in the Cambridge Galleria.

"Most of the action will take place in Everett and Cambridge," said Tom Gorman, the former fire chief who is now the director of Emergency Management in Quincy.

"The Quincy Fire Department will have the job of decontaminating radiation victims and clothing them in Tyvack suits after they have been sprayed."

Denise Spillane, spokeswoman for Quincy Medical Center, said the Center is still determining what its role will be in the test, which is the same day of the QMC Cancer Walk.

Yard Paving Regulating Ordinance Now In Effect

A new city ordinance preventing residents from excessive paving of their properties is now in effect.

Mayor William Phelan and Chief Building Inspector Jay Duca said Tuesday that residents should be aware that the Inspectional Services Department is enforcing the ordinance and violators could result in a fine or further enforcement action.

The new ordinance regulates the amount of paving that can be installed in front and rear yards, while allowing a limited area for vehicular parking. A building permit is now required for any new paving or any repaving of existing surfaces.

"This issue was at the forefront in many of the 'Neighborhoods First!' survey results submitted by residents," Phelan said. "I applaud the Council for their action on this issue. These little steps go a long way in preserving the character of a neighborhood."

Those that wish to seek a permit to pave or repave an existing surface can do so by contacting the Building Department at 617-376-1450.

"I recommend that residents speak to Building Department personnel to better understand the new ordinance," said Duca. "The new ordinance does not ban paving, it simply regulates it, and we will work with residents that have legitimate needs to pave or repave. Anyone that tries to circumvent the new ordinance risks costly enforcement action and potential adjustments."

Early Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Labor Day holiday, there will be an early news and advertising deadline for next week's Quincy Sun.

News, church, organizations and youth sports releases, retail and classified advertising and legal notices should be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., by noon tomorrow (Friday) to assure publication in the Sept. 7 issue.

The Sun will be closed Monday, Sept. 4.

Thank you and have a nice, safe, holiday weekend.

QUINCY RESTAURANT LEAGUE will soon promote local restaurant business. At a press conference Tuesday at the second floor conference room in city hall, from left are Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000, Mark Carey, tourism director of Discover Quincy, Tiffanie Williams, owner of Tiffanie Williams & Co., Inc., and Dave Murphy, assistant to Mayor William Phelan. Quincy Sun photo/Noreen O'Shea

New Restaurant League Invites You To 'Taste Quincy'

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The newly formed Quincy Restaurant League is spearheading a campaign to bring more restaurant-goers to Quincy.

The league was created as a partnership between Quincy 2000 Collaborative, Discover Quincy and in conjunction with Tiffanie Williams & Co., Inc.

The league, whose slogan is "Taste Quincy," will allow member restaurants to promote themselves through Quincy's tourism and economic development organizations.

According to Discover Quincy, there are over 200 restaurants in the city, and 49 were members of the league as of Tuesday.

"There is only so much a restaurant can do," said Tiffanie Williams, owner of Tiffanie Williams Co. "As a team there are tons of possibilities."

The Quincy Restaurant League plans to promote the restaurant business by showing the public what is out there.

"We are going to market Quincy as a region as the dining capital of the South Shore," said Williams.

"A lot of people who live in the city alone, have no idea what they have here," said Mark Carey, tourism director of Discover Quincy, at a recent press conference.

The Fours Restaurant was recently named best sports bar in the nation by Sports Illustrated Magazine. Despite the distinction, owner Ed Morris said, "I still have people walking in the door that never even knew we were here."

Tiffanie Williams & Co. are developing a new website: www.TasteQuincy.com, where consumers will be able to search restaurants, information about night-life, and food specialty shops. The site will feature a "restaurant spotlight" to promote the Quincy restaurant-of-the-month. Carey said the site expected to be launched by mid-September.

The league also has plans to:

• Produce a cooking show that will air on local programming throughout the South Shore.

• Participate in Quincy Restaurant Week (Oct. 23-29) sponsored by Quincy Arts Alive.

• Produce a Quincy Restaurant League passport that will encourage consumers to sample dishes from participating restaurants.

Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000, said that if the restaurant business in Quincy is improved, the business will improve in all other parts of Quincy as well. "This is a win/win situation for the many facets of the city of Quincy," he said.

Dave Murphy, assistant to the mayor, said that although Mayor William Phelan was unable to attend, he sends his support.

For more information on the Quincy Restaurant League, call Dean Rizzo at 617-847-1454, or Mark Carey at 617-847-1454.

Bereavement Support Group At Quincy Medical

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St. will host a free, seven-week Bereavement Support Group, beginning Wednesday Sept. 13.

The support group will meet Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for the seven consecutive weeks. The group is designed to help adults who are coping with the recent death of an adult loved one to alleviate feelings of grief and begin the healing process.

"Grieving people often feel isolated in their pain and perceive that the world only wants to see and hear from happy people," said Rev. Esther Bowen, director of Pastoral Care at Quincy Medical Center. "If you need an emotionally safe place where you can be yourself and process your grief experience, then perhaps this support group may work for you."

The program is free, however, pre-registration is required. For more information or to register, contact the Quincy Medical Center Pastoral Care Department at 617-376-5502.

Alzheimer's Forum On Memory Oct. 19

The Alzheimer's Association and the Council on Aging will present an informal talk on memory loss Thursday, Oct. 19, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Koch Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

The program, presented by Jamie Gutner, will provide an overview of Alzheimer's Disease, how to obtain diagnosis, addressing behavior and communication problems.

For reservation, call 617-376-1506.

West Nile Virus Mosquito Found In Quincy Trap

A mosquito with the West Nile Virus has shown up in a trap in a central section of Quincy.

"But it's nothing to get excited about as a long as residents take the proper precautions," said Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele. "We've had one every year for the past five years."

The mosquito was diagnosed with WNV by the State Health Alert Network at 4:12 p.m. Tuesday afternoon.

ANDREW SCHEELE

Scheele stressed that the West Nile Virus is not connected to Eastern Equine Encephalitis, although both viruses are carried by mosquitos.

Scheele urged that residents limit their time outdoors during peak periods of mosquito activity and use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET or Picaridin.

Also they should take special care to cover up arms and legs of children playing outdoors and fix and holes in screens in doors and windows.

"Since we've had a lot of rain lately," he said, "be sure to remove any standing water that offers a breeding area to mosquitos."

Special Council Meeting Approves Important Utility Pole

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The City Council met in a special meeting Monday night to approve the installation of a utility pole on Billings Street, North Quincy.

The pole is important because it will connect electricity to new traffic signals in Quincy Shore Drive. Without the council's approval, that project would be delayed.

The special meeting called by City Council President Douglas Gutro and attended by six councillors was recommended by Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"Sen. Morrissey contacted myself and Councilor McNamee, indicating that if it were delayed past the Sept. 5 meeting that there likely be delays in getting the signals up and running," said Gutro.

"Although we could have introduced this next week at the meeting, we potentially could have delayed the integration of the signals on Quincy Shore Drive. And we thought it best to schedule the public hearing for Sept. 5," he said.

Ernie Olson, outside plant engineer for Verizon, told The SUN that Verizon originally applied to install the pole in June, but the matter was tabled.

"It will be a service pole to feed the electrical and telephone feed into a traffic control box at the corner of Billings and Quincy Shore Boulevard," said Olson. "It's to energize the new traffic lights being put on Quincy Shore Drive."

The City Council received a joint petition June 6 from Verizon New England Inc. requesting the placement of the pole and all necessary wiring. The petition was signed by Penny Kane, manager of Rights of Way of Verizon, and Roger D. Cox, manager of Massachusetts Electric Company.

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, Councillor Joseph Finn, and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi were not present at the special meeting.

Looking for a great local bank?

Have all the great local banks disappeared? Absolutely not! We're Colonial Federal Savings Bank – an independent local bank with no plans to merge. We keep things simple and we treat customers right. For example: We don't make you open multiple accounts to get our best deals. We don't make you give us your life savings to get a great rate on a CD. If you have a question, you talk to us – not some out-of-state call center. And most of our people have been with us for years, so they know what they're talking about. We offer every banking service from old-fashioned Christmas Clubs to state-of-the-art online banking, free checking, mortgages, business banking and more. We've been part of the South Shore community since 1889. And we think it's our job to make it easy for you to bank with us. Had it with big banks? Come see us! For A Lonely Little Boy

Millions of viewers will again watch this weekend's Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon and again contribute millions of dollars to fight this cruel disease.

But do you know the first Muscular Dystrophy TV extravaganza was telecast across the country for an audience of just one — a lonely little boy?

Jerry Lewis produced that one, too, with a million-dollar cast supporting him.

There was no money raised in this one, though. Sole purpose was to help make this lonely little boy, a victim of muscular dystrophy, happy on his birthday.

It goes back to October, 1957 when I was a staff reporter at The Boston Traveler. We received a letter from Mrs. Doris Reynolds, a nurse at Lakeville Hospital, asking us if we could help a little boy. He was lonely because no one came to visit him.

He was going to be nine on Oct. 8. Would The Traveler please help him receive a few cards, she pleaded.

Photographer Frank Kelly and I were sent to the hospital. We met a handsome lad with one of the biggest smiles in the world. But not quite big enough to hide the heartache of thinking he was unwanted.

Dr. Kurt Jellinek, a real life Dr. Christian, filled us in on the tragic background. The boy's mother was dead and his father was imprisoned in connection with her death.

Because of the circumstances we agreed not to use his full name. We referred to him as "Francis X" (Francis was his real first name) and as Little Boy Blue.

What did he want for his birthday?

"Four or six cards," he replied. "Funny cards."

Kelly took a photo of Francis seated in a wheel chair — back to camera — looking out the window for the visitors that never came.

The story and photo appeared on Page 1 of The Traveler Oct. 3 — five days before his birthday. By weekend the Middleboro post office was snowed under with letters and cards. Thirty extra people had to be hired to keep up with the avalanche.

The Traveler story had been picked up by the Associated Press and United Press and carried around the nation. Ham radio operators were reading it to others around the world.

Before it was over, there would be 500,000 pieces of mail, $12,000 in coins and dollar bills and three rooms full of toys and other presents.

The toys were shared with other youngsters at a number of hospitals. The money was set up in a trust fund for Francis.

But the most touching part of this story happened the night of Francis' ninth birthday. Jerry Lewis, who even then was national chairman for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, had read the story and quickly swung into action.

He wanted to give Francis something special. And, he did.

Lewis asked Gen. David Sarnoff, head of NBC, for a closed TV circuit from Burbank, Calif., to the little Massachusetts town of Lakeville, 3,000 miles away. Permission granted. They said it cost some $350,000 and the services of some 9,000 persons — technicians, engineers and others to complete the hookup.

A SERIOUS Jerry Lewis reads the story of Francis X, a lonely muscular dystrophy patient at the Lakeville Hospital, written by Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth (right) in 1957. As a result of the story, Lewis put on a closed circuit TV show to the boy on his ninth birthday, which was the forerunner of today's Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon. Lewis and Bosworth got together in 1977 at Children's Hospital where Lewis dedicated a Muscular Dystrophy clinic.

John Gillooly Photo

By telecast time, the audience had grown. Joining Francis in front of TV receivers in the recreation hall of the hospital were other youngsters in wheel chairs, beds and on crutches. Nurses, doctors, parents and newsmen were there, too.

Suddenly, an announcer was saying:

"This program is an NBC closed circuit broadcast for Francis in Lakeville Sanatorium — direct from Hollywood — a special command performance!"

Francis smiled, giggled and slapped the side of his wheel chair as Jerry Lewis mugged, clowned, sang and spoke directly to him.

And for the next 75 minutes or so on camera stepped Eddie Cantor, Dinah Shore, Hugh O'Brien, Eddie Fisher, George Gobel, Pinky Lee, The Mouseketeers, Mary Costa and others.

Each with a special personal message for Francis — and all doing their thing free to make a little boy happy.

The adults in the audience managed to hold back the tears when Lewis and the Skylarks sang a parody to "No Business Like Show Business" entitled "There's No Francis Like Our Francis."

But the tears did show up when Dinah Shore serenaded Francis with "You Made Me Love You," and he happily waved back.

Francis died in November, 1966 a few weeks after his 18th birthday. In the 10 years the mail never really stopped. He was remembered with cards every birthday and Christmas.

And the night that Jerry Lewis put on his MD telethon was for us, who were there, a night to remember.

Jerry was at his best. It was an Emmy performance — from the heart.

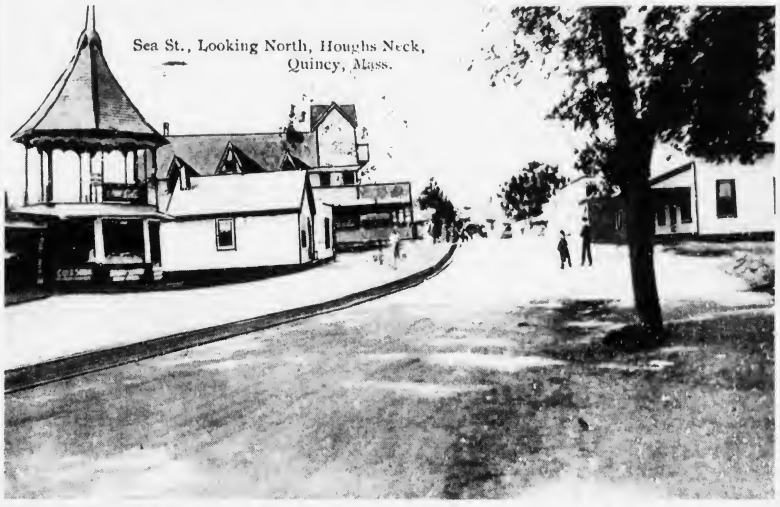
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view of Sea Street from near the end of Thomas Street in Houghs Neck. The building on the left with the peaked roof was Power's Casino, a major attraction in old time Houghs Neck. It was built in the late 1800s as part of an amusement park between Shennen and Winthrop Streets. The Casino was a large recreational building that offered among other things pool, billiards and dancing and was the first place in Quincy to have candlepin bowling alleys. They also rented boats on the north bay. It burned to the ground about 1918. The large building in the left center was Associates Hall at 1240 Sea St. That building also met its fate in a fire in the 1920s. The dark line in the street is an artist's enhancement of the trolley tracks that went down to the yacht club. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Budget Cuts Feud May Flare Again

This Week
1984
22 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

The simmering feud between the Mayor and the City Council, which was thought to be settled with passage of a $69.3 million budget in July, may break out again at the first fall meeting Sept. 4.

The agenda for the meeting will contain appropriation orders that were deleted when the council cut some $220,000 from the mayor's original $75.8 million. One that is particularly galling to Council President James A. Sheets is an order restoring $10,000 to the Law Department contractual obligation to David Grunebaum, the city's labor negotiator.

"I am not going to appropriate a single cent for the labor negotiator," Sheets said. "I am not going to give the mayor a blank check on this issue."

"Since both items were deleted by 5 to 4 council votes, someone might reconsider," said Mayor Frank McCauley.

VOTING MACHINES ON COUNCIL AGENDA

Quincy may have voting machines ready for the next city election in September 1985. The City Council agenda for Sept. 4 contains a financial order for $200,000 for the purchase of 500 punch card voting machines.

"They will save a lot of police overtime and counting expense on election night," said Mayor Frank McCauley. "They will pay for themselves very quickly."

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

Rookie pitcher Roger Clemens' record stood at 9-4 as the Red Sox entered the final month of the season. In his last seven starts, he is 6-0 with a 2.48 ERA.

The Red Sox, with a 68-62 record, were in fifth place in the seven-team American League East Division. Red Sox outfielder Tony Armas was the Sox home run leader with 35, while Jim Rice with 100 and Armas with 99 led the Sox in runs batted in (RBI).

Wants Mosquito 'Poisoning' Stopped

Although Eastern Equine Encephalitis is carried by mosquitoes it is part of nature.

When fish eggs hatch the minnows need mosquito larvae to eat in order to survive and grow. Without mosquitoes, fish, frogs and songbirds will lack food and will starve. The repercussions will travel right up the food chain until we humans are affected by the sterile landscape we have created.

Mosquitoes can be dangerous and should be avoided but they have a very important place in the delicate balance of nature. Spraying poison over hundreds of square miles of land will kill many life forms and do irreparable harm to our environment.

If this poisoning is allowed to continue the risk of EEE will soon be overshadowed by problems of quiet dry marshes, sterile land, and depleted fish stock.

An Apology From Sal

I've been penning letters to the editor of newspapers since I was 19 years old. Back when both Dr. King and Bobby Kennedy were still alive and back when L.B.J. was still in the White House. There's not a subject I haven't touched. I've even talked about the former planet known as Pluto.

I'm apparently safer talking about the solar system or the war in Iraq than I am talking about the ramps at Wollaston beach. If my mother was alive today, she'd be 97 years old and she'd probably be whacking me for making light of ramps at public beaches.

I should have known better before writing the letter. The reaction to my most recent letter reminded me of something the late California Gov. Pat Brown said decades ago. His quote was deja vu all over again for me. It goes, "I am invariably misquoted on something I never should have said in the first place."

Last week's letter criticizing my letter had it right as did several phone callers to my house. Handicap ramps aren't just for the wheelchair-bound. The elderly can use them. Little kids. Mothers pushing carriages. Beaches should be accessible to all and I in no way meant otherwise.

I apologize to anyone offended by my letter. Many folks have worked together to improve Wollaston Beach. The ramp was well thought-out and with hindsight I now see its benefits to all.

Hey, even I make a mistake or two from time to time. No one's perfect all the time.

September Computer Classes At Thomas Crane Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is offering several free computer classes starting in September.

No advance registration is needed for the classes, which are held in the computer lab of the main library. Classes are based on the assumption that participants have some experience using a mouse and keyboard. For those who do not, call 617-376-1316, or stop by the main library reference desk on the second floor. One-on-one mouse tutorials are available upon request.

Internet Basics I: This introductory class will be Wednesday, Sept. 6 from 10-11 a.m. and covers basics such as web features, how to find web addresses, and how to do easy searches on websites like Google and Mapquest. Participants may warm up their fingers before class with online "mousercises." There will be time after class for questions and practice.

Internet Basics II: In this follow-up class on Wednesday, Sept. 20, participants will review the basic concepts covered in Internet Basics I, and have time for questions related to personal web interests. Participants will also be assisted in setting up a free Yahoo! email account, or may learn more about the account they already have. Participants will review how to compose, send, forward and reply to massages, attach files, and create and use an address book.

Introduction To Word: This class will be held Monday, Sept. 11 from 7-8p.m. For those who want to create a simple letter, complete a class assignment or write a best-selling novel, this class will teach the basics of opening, saving, formating, editing, spell-checking and printing a document. There will also be several tips and shortcuts.

DISCOVER!* Special Topics On The Web: This special series of hands-on workshops will introduce participants to a wealth of online resources. A different topic is planned for each month. On Monday, Sept. 25 from 7-8:15p.m., discover "What's In Your Library." This class goes behind the scenes of the library's books, newspapers and magazines, and discover music, movies, and online resources and websites. Search beyond the walls of Thomas Crane and learn how to request a book or article from other libraries, find phone numbers or addresses for local or out-of-state businesses or individuals, read articles from Consumer Reports, search for obituaries in the Patriot Ledger, and explore business, career, legal and career resources. This class will show how to use the library's website to find information inside and outside the library.

Upcoming Discover! programs include: "Discover! Travel Resources on the Web," Monday, Oct. 23 and "Discover! Health and Wellness Resources on the Web" Monday, Nov. 27.

For more information about a computer class, call 617-376-1316, or visit www.thomascranelibrary.org.

September Events At Boston Harbor Islands

Boston Harbor Islands announces upcoming events for September.

Sept. 2: At 11:15 a.m. explore the landscape of Bumpkin Island with a ranger to learn about its past uses as a farm, hospital, and naval training facility.

Sept. 3: At 3:45 p.m. take a walk with a ranger around Bumpkin Island to discover the island's natural beauty.

Both days there will be "Boston Light Tours" on Little Brewster Island at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The three and a half hour "soft adventure tour" explores the oldest lighthouse site in the nation. Reservations are highly recommended. Tours leave from Fan Pier, Boston. There will also be Fort Warren Tours on Georges Island, a national historic landmark. Visitors claim that this is the home of the ghost of the "Lady in Black." There will be dark and mysterious passage-ways, and views of Boston Harbor and the city skyline.

Visiting Bumpkin Island requires travel on the park inter-island shuttle.

For the ferry schedule, or for more information visit www.BosstonIslands.com, or call the Boston Harbor Islands park ranger line at 617-223-8666.

SOCIAL

Fundraiser For DOVE To Be Held Oct. 18

A fundraiser for DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) will be Wednesday, Oct. 18 from 6-9:30p.m. at the Granite Links Golf Club, 100 Quarry Hills Dr.

Proceeds will benefit DOVE, which is a organization that aids victims of domestic violence. DOVE recently saw a major cut in funding.

Cost is $100 per person for a light dinner, cocktails, raffles, and live entertainment provided by "Java Jive." Master of ceremonies will be Julie Devereaux, 105.7 WROR.

The loss of the 20 year annual funding of approximately $250,999 from the Department of Social Services is expected to force DOVE to close around Oct. 1 after serving the area for 28 years.

Dove runs on an annual budget of approximately $600,000.

Virginia Kurtzman, chairwoman of the DOVE board of directors said the facility served 275 women and children last year but had to turn away another 250 for lack of space. The shelter is the second largest in the state with 18 beds.

Kurtzman said that although the facility may be forced to close, they will continue serving battered women and children, and will arrange to put victims in other shelters. Committee members include: Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Retired Honorable Judge Paul Buckley, Jay Cashman, president of Cashman Construction, Chef Curtis, Gary Gibbons, director of Quincy Medical Center, Edward Kane of EatWell, Inc. District Attorney William Keating, Senator Michael Morrissey, Chairman of the Board Peter M. Nicholas, co-founder of Boston Scientific, Inc., Mayor William Phelan and Tracy Phelan, Mathew Reneghan of Captain Fishbones and Marina Bay, Denise Reneghan, of Bay State Charitable Foundation, Wan Wu of Kamman Food, and Betty K. Yau of Yau's Marketing Services.

Board of Directors include: President Virginia Kurtzman, Vice President Patricia Novak-Tenney, Treasurer Judith Serode, Clerk Jennifer Howard, Sylvia Beaton, Julie Devereaux, Barbara DiNatale, Karen Elsworth, Laurie Kelleher, Judy Kiley, Margeret Loughlin, Catherine Lynde, James Mamary.

Advertising space is available in the Harvesting Home Program Book, with proceeds benefiting DOVE. To advertise call Catherine Lynden at 617-328-9832.

For more information call 617-770-4065, or visit www.doveinc.info. A 24 hour crisis hotline is available at 617-471-1234 or 888-314-3683.

Four-Time Emmy Winner Dan Jaehnig Confides:

'I Like Hometown Stories That Leave People Happy'

By TOM HENSHAW

Dan Jaehnig, 36, a Quincy boy born and raised, with four Emmys on his resume, was talking about his job as reporter/anchor at Fox 25 News, a major television channel in Boston.

"In the last few months," he said, "I've covered major flooding from a chopper and the scandals at the Big Dig. I was at Ronald Reagan's funeral and I interviewed Bill Clinton.

"There's always something new. But I like best of all the hometown story about people that other people enjoy, the lighter stories, the ones that leave people happy."

Jaehnig, who got his start in broadcast journalism as an intern with The Quincy Sun and Quincy Cable, won his four Emmys for overall reporting, spot news, serious news features and, last May, for news writing.

His three stories cited for this year's Emmy illustrates the versatility acquired in a march to the top of his profession that took him through TV stations in Springfield and Providence.

One involved the struggles of local fishermen to survive. Another involved the theft of a stuffed bear. The third took viewers inside a facility for child sex offenders.

"One showed people what fishermen go through every day to make a living," he said. "Another got a laugh. The third opened people's eyes to a great problem.

"I may start a day knocking on doors, then chase down a story in city hall but then it will start raining and I'll wind up in Sharon where the wind has blown the trees down and I have to report it.

"Every day is like that. You go to work every day not knowing what is going to happen. One day is never the same as another day."

Actually, Jaehnig has been working in TV since he was in the seventh grade as a participant in Quincy Cables' "Kid's Magazine," a news program by and for youngsters.

This eventually led to an internship at the cable station and The Sun, where he wrote obituaries and shared the TV camera with John Noonan when The Sun operated Channel 8 news.

He recalls his first assignment as coverage of the Quincy Farmer's Market.

"If I learned anything at The Sun it was the importance of accuracy and integrity and a sense of camaraderie," he said.

He graduated from Suffolk University in 1992 with a degree in broadcast journalism and joined Channel 56 in Boston, first as an intern, then as assignment editor.

He quit Channel 56 after a few months to travel, including a safari in Africa, and returned to find himself tied down to another assignment desk at WPRI-TV in Providence.

Jaehnig left there for his first reporter/anchor job at WWLP-TV in Springfield, an NBC affiliate, where he made his mark in front of the camera instead of behind it.

He investigated the western Massachusetts Mafia and Kristen Gilbert, a nurse who was accused to killing her patients, and he traveled to Ireland for a series on connections to Springfield folks.

He was in Springfield for a year and a half before Providence called again and he joined WJAR-TV as reporter/anchor.

He was there to cover the plane crash that killed young John Kennedy and his wife, the suspicious crash of Egypt airliner 999 and the corruption charges that sent Providence Mayor Vincent Cianci to jail.

He came to Fox 25 four years ago.

Jaehnig, always the Quincy boy, lives in Merrymount with his wife, the former Jane MacLeod, and their 4 1/2-year-old daughters, Emma and Caroline.

He teaches part-time at Suffolk and he'd like to do more.

"There is an A road and a B road," he says. "If I can steer someone onto the A road I'd like to do that.

"I've reached all the goals I set when I started out. Now it's time for new goals."

The new goals sound a lot like the old ones.

"It's important every day to tell a good story," he says. "Get the facts, meet people that's my goal."

DAN JAEHNIG, reporter and anchor newsman for Fox 25 Channel in Boston, displays the four Emmys he has won on the mantelpiece of his home in Merrymount.

Eli Cedrone Paintings At Crane Library Sept. 6-30

Artist Eli Cedrone will present her oil paintings Sept. 6-30 in the Coletti Reading Room on the first floor of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

A public reception for the artist will be held Thursday, Sept. 7 from 6-8:30p.m.

New works on display will be a series of small oil sketches called "apuntes," which were created this summer. The images of figures on the beach in direct sunlight or landscapes evoke a moment captured in time.

Through her work, Cedrone said she tries to "describe the profound in the commonplace.

"My concerns are with the expressive qualities of light captured in paint as much as they're about new ways to consider the landscape in contemporary painting. By dividing my time between studio work and painting en plein aire, Painting is a way of sharing a portion of my life with others."

Cedrone spent her lifetime creating. Upon graduating from the School of Art & Design in Boston, Cedrone studied art in Italy and at the MFA. Her professional career began as an art director in 1982 at Saatchi & Saatchi & Saatchi Advertising in Bermuda. This was followed by work as an illustrator and mixed-media artist in Laguna Beach, CA. Today, Eli paints full-time and teaches art at her gallery in Hingham.

Granddaughter of Lucia Coletti, Cedrone shares a lineage with the architects of the library's Coletti addition where her work will be exhibited. Constructed in 1939, the addition was designed by Paul Coletti, Carroll Coletti and Quincy resident Joseph A. Coletti. His ornamentation and basrelief sculptures of riveters, granite cutters and two entwined cranes grace the exterior of the building.

Tian Hu Graduates From Environmental Training Program

Tian Hu of Botolph St., Quincy, graduated from the Environmental Technology Training Program at JFYNetWorks' 29th annual graduation ceremony held recently at Suffolk University Law School.

The JFYNetWorks Environmental Technology program is a 14-week course in environmental science, chemistry, chemistry lab, math and business writing. It includes five different professional certifications: OSHA 40, asbestos, mold, confined space and emergency response.

Annual Event Set For Sunday, Sept. 17

Businesses Supporting QMC Cancer Walk

The South Shore business community has once again laced up its sneakers to support the annual Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk on Sunday, Sept. 17.

Building upon the legacy of the seven-year Marie Curry Walk, the Quincy Medical Center Walk continues its support of the Marie A. Curry Fund, a permanent, endowed Fund at Quincy Medical Center that underwrites free, high quality cancer screening programs and services for uninsured or underinsured women and men in our community.

Event registration will begin at 8 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 17 at Pageant Field in Quincy's Merrymount Park, with the four-mile, non-competitive Walk kicking off at 9:30 a.m.

In addition to the seaside stroll, the fun family day includes a pre-Walk breakfast catered by area Dunkin' Donuts stores and a post-Walk celebration, held at Pageant Field, including lunch donated by the Outback Steakhouse of Quincy.

For the second year, the Quincy-based Rural Lodge of the Massachusetts Freemasons will offer their Child Identification Program (CHIP), free of charge, at Pageant Field, throughout the Walk day. The CHIP program is a national program designed to aid in the identification of missing and/or abducted children by providing parents, of children age 18 and younger, with a file containing a fingerprinting, videotaped interview, dental impression and more. All materials are given to the parents for safekeeping.

To date, more than 50 area businesses have pledged their support to this year's Walk, including:

Marble Chips Stained by Mildew

Q: We have a 2-foot border of marble chips around our house. On the backside of the house, the marble chips have become tarnished to a dark brown by mold and mildew. Tilex seems to kill the mold/mildew, but doesn't return the color. Obviously, I can't clean each individual stone by hand. Are there any products or methods available to kill the mold/mildew and return the marble chips to their original white luster? Thanks. — Bob G. in West Virginia

A. You could have a tough job ahead, because you just might have to clean each stone by hand. However, before we go to that extreme, let's try a couple of other tricks first.

A bathroom tile cleaner may not be the best thing for cleaning marble. As you mentioned, the cleaner killed the mold and mildew but didn't get rid of the tarnish. The next step is to test a few different cleaners on one or two of the marble chips to see what the results are.

Put away the name-brand cleaner (which may contribute to the staining problem rather than solve it) and pick up some plain old Borax, a stain fighter and fungicide (and a heckuva pest-control solution, but that's for another column). Mix the powder with water at the ratio recommended on the package and sponge it onto one of the stained marble chips. Let it sit for about 10 minutes, then rinse the stone. Do the same with a half-and-half solution of vinegar and water, and then a one-third to two-thirds solution of bleach and water. Let the chips dry and note the results.

If you find a good solution, apply it either by hand with a thick sponge (wear rubber gloves to protect your skin) and rinse with a garden hose, or look into renting a pressure washer and spraying on the solution at low pressure and then rinsing it off at a higher pressure to speed up the job.

Professional marble cleaners are also available at home-improvement and flooring stores. These will cost more than the household solutions and may only be applicable by hand, but if nothing else works, these may do the trick — remove the mildew and restore the color.

Year-Round Maintenance Tips

TIPS FOR HOMEOWNERS

(NAPS) Many homeowners find that the key to reducing the potential for major repairs is to follow a regular home maintenance program. This will not only reduce the need to pay for costly repairs, but it will protect the home's value.

For example, by annually servicing a heating and air-conditioning unit, it will have fewer breakdowns, and the energy savings may pay for the cost of having to service the unit.

Dan Steward, president of Pillar To Post, North America's largest home-inspection service, offers this checklist showing the top 10 year-round maintenance tips homeowners should follow.

Ongoing Maintenance Schedule

• Test smoke detectors, carbon monoxide detectors and ground fault circuit interrupters monthly.

• Check caulking around all outside openings and joints of windows and doors annually in the spring.

• Change furnace filters monthly during heating season.

• Clean or change air-conditioning filters monthly during the cooling season.

• Clean gas and electric space heaters. Be certain dust and dirt are not on heating coils monthly during the heating season.

• Check slope of landscaping and paving (to slop away from the building to reduce the possibility of water intrusion) annually in the spring.

• Check fire-extinguisher gauges, refill or replace them annually.

• Inspect roof for damaged or loose shingles or blisters and damaged or loose flashings annually in the spring.

• Remove leaves from gutters and downspouts one to two times during the fall.

• Close shutoff valves to outside faucets, water lines and sprinkler systems annually in the late fall in regions with winter freezing.

For more year-round maintenance tips from Pillar To Post visit www.pillartopost.com.

Fire Prevention For Landscapes

(NAPS) Among the many steps that homeowners living in fire-prone areas can take to protect their homes from wildfires, developing a "fire-wise" landscape is at the top of the list.

Not only will a fire-wise landscape have an effect on the home's beauty and value, it can also be the deciding factor in whether or not a home survives a wildfire.

Homeowners who take appropriate steps to limit the level of flammable vegetation and materials surrounding the home and incorporate fuel breaks can increase their safety from wildfire while creating a welcoming, healthy and beautiful home environment.

"Homeowners will use pathways and appreciate the beauty of their gardens, particularly once the landscaping is lean and green," said Randall Ismay of Water & Landscape Consultants in Laguna Niguel, California. "In fact, by removing flammable grass and other plants, homeowners will save time and money on maintaining their landscapes. This will give homeowners more time to embrace the reason that they moved into the wildland/urban interface to begin with: to be part of the natural beauty that surrounds them."

A critical aspect of keeping the landscape fire-wise is proper maintenance of the moisture levels in all plants and grass. However, a leading cause of wildfires is dry weather conditions, often making water scarce. What's a homeowner to do?

The following tips can help reduce the home's vulnerability to wildfire while using water responsibly:

• Make sure that all plants and grass within 30 feet of the home are watered on a regular basis. Vegetation that becomes dry because of a drought is more likely to catch fire.

• During fire season, water plants and trees regularly to ensure that they are healthy and green. Mulch should also be kept watered, as it can become flammable when dry.

• Try not to waste water on species of plants that do not need a lot of water. Certain species are not used to large amounts of water, and will die out and become fuel for wildfires if they are overwatered.

• Sprinkler systems are useful in ensuring that plants and grass are watered on a consistent basis, but try to use a drip trickle or microspray sprinkler system. These kinds of systems help and prevent over-watering and wasted water.

Contact your state forestry office or water and landscape specialist for more information about fire-wise landscaping and to determine the area's wildfire hazard level. Resources are also available at www.firewise.org.

Registry Of Deeds Report Issued

Register William P. O'Donnell has issued a report on operations and improvements at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds for Fiscal Year 2006.

"Improved technology and customer service continues to be a major focus," O'Donnell said. "We have made additional progress in computer-accessible document imaging, records management, and public research access. The Registry's dedicated customer service center and expanded real estate closing areas have been a benefit to both real estate professionals and the general public."

In Fiscal Year 2006, over 198,000 documents were received for recording. This was down slightly from 214,000 in FY '05. Total Registry revenues for the year were $53.7 million, down from $57.8 million in FY '05.

Registry operations are effectively self-supporting, O'Donnell reported, and generate significant surplus revenues. These revenues contribute other county operations and the state's general revenue.

During the year the Registry invites the public to regular seminars about land records research and Internet information, and hosts meetings and tours for community groups.

In one highlight this year, the Norfolk Registry hosted a visiting delegation of attorneys and judges from the Tomsk region of the Russian Federation as part of the Open World Exchange Program sponsored by the Library of Congress.

"The people of Russia face many challenges, including developing a new land records system." Register O'Donnell stated. "We were honored that the Norfolk Registry was selected for this program, and I hope that this exchange will be prove helpful in their efforts and improve relations between our two countries.

The Registry has worked with Norfolk County communities, including boards of assessors and engineering departments, to better develop information flows. The Registry has introduced a local office hours program, with periodic scheduled hours at city and town halls. This program is particularly intended for residents who might have difficulty traveling to the Registry's Dedham office.

"We will continue to look for ways to improve the Registry of Deeds," O'Donnell said, "and we welcome comments and suggestions from the public as part of this effort."

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a basic resource for homeowners, real estate professionals and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information. For more information call 781-461-6116.

How To Protect Family And Belongings

Preparing For Flood Damage

(NAPS) Floods can happen without warning. Even for those who don't live near a river, one heavy rainstorm can change everything. Floods can happen anywhere, according to the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Floods occur whenever rain, melting snow or even a dam break produces more water than the land can readily absorb. Use the following tips from the CPCU Society to protect family and belongings from floods.

• Keep an up-to-date home inventory and other important papers in a secure place. Take these items when evacuation is necessary. Also, keep exact copies in a place away from home, such as a bank safety-deposit box.

• Utility services may be disrupted during floods. Stock non-perishable food that requires little or no cooking. Buy bottled water or prepare jugs for filling with water.

• Check portable radios and flashlights. Make sure there are new batteries on hand.

• Keep the car's gas tank filled. Also, keep oil and gas tanks for the home heating system filled. This will help keep them from coming loose and causing damage to the foundation.

• Leave immediately when authorities say to evacuate. Delay can leave people stranded without an escape route. Because flooding changes the way areas and landmarks look, people may become disoriented easily.

• Do not walk or drive through flowing water. As little as six inches of fast-moving water can knock down an adult.

• Be alert to downed electrical wires and gas leaks. Electricity travels through water, so report downed wires as soon as possible. Before using electrical devices and heating and air-conditioning equipment, have a trained professional check them. The damage may not be obvious if the equipment was under water or exposed to moisture.

• Contact insurance representatives as soon as possible. Document the damage with photos. Keep evidence of damage and loss for the claims adjuster.

Standard homeowners insurance does not cover flood damage. However, special flood insurance covers this risk. Flood insurance pays for covered losses quickly. Government loans and grants may take some time and not cover what was lost. Insurance agents can give coverage information or a no-obligation quote.

Try to find an insurance agent that has the CPCU (chartered property casualty underwriter) designation. To find a CPCU, visit the Society's website at www.cpcusociety.org to access the Agent & Broker Locator, a database of CPCU Society members searchable by location or company. While on the site, take a minute to learn more about the CPCU designation and the society. Or call 800-932-CPCU to learn more.

O'Donnell Office Hours Here Sept. 14

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will hold scheduled office hours at Quincy City Hall on Thursday, Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to noon in the second floor Conference Room.

The Register or staff will be available to help answer questions or concerns about any Registry of Deeds matter, and will have information available about the Massachusetts Homestead Act, as well as an Internet computer link that can be used to confirm the status of mortgage discharges or other recent filings. No appointment is needed.

This program is particularly intended for Quincy residents who might have difficulty traveling to the Registry's Dedham office.

Registry staff cannot give legal advice, but can provide answers to basic questions and general information.

The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County, and is a basic resource for land record information.

For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call 781-461-6116 or visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Homebuyer Workshop Sept. 11, 16

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Brockton Housing Partnership, will hold a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Sept. 11 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Sept. 16 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

They will be held at the Cape Verdean Association, 575 North Montello St., Brockton, and will be taught in Cape Verdean. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend. Participants will have the opportunity to be pre-qualified by a lender.

Topics include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $15 fee per person. There will be refreshments and free gifts.

Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Mayor Praises ZBA In Controlling Development

Mayor William Phelan praised the work of the city's Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday in protecting Quincy's neighborhoods from over-development.

In February, Phelan had urged the Zoning Board to strictly examine each special permit application with the hope of stringent review for any hardship exemption to the code.

He cited recent cases on Sea Street and Hospital Hill as examples of the Zoning Board's positive impact on neighborhoods. In both cases, strong neighborhood opposition was expressed.

"The Zoning Board has a difficult task and they have done a fine job in ensuring that the interests of our neighborhoods are upheld," Phelan said. "Our zoning code was designed to protect our neighborhoods from over-development and the ZBA's work has backed that up. I applaud the work of these hard-working volunteers and I thank them for their service."

Phelan also noted that the city benefits greatly from the work of volunteers on a wide range of boards and commissions.

"All of our volunteer board members deserve credit," he said. "They play an integral role in local government without fanfare or compensation. They love our city and we all owe them a debt of gratitude for the time and talents that they lend to the city and its residents."

Enthusiastic Turnout Greets Friends Of Wollaston Beach

More than 40 people expressed a desire to become Friends of Wollaston Beach last week.

And nearly a dozen of them agreed to come back and draft bylaws and a mission statement for the new organization.

"This was an amazing turnout and a resounding show of support for greater public involvement at Wollaston Beach," said Ward 5 City Councillor and Council President Doug Gutro.

"I'm encouraged by the passion and interest of Quincy residents in Wollaston Beach," said Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee.

Gutro and McNamee hosted the meeting at the Beechwood Knoll School to see how many people are interested in advocating improvements to the state-owned beach.

Similar organizations have been formed in Revere, East Boston and Lynn/Nahant to clean and organize activities at state beaches in those communities.

Gutro and McNamee shared their perspectives on the value of a citizen-centered group. Alicia Gardner represented State Sen. Michael Morrissey at the meeting.

The residents who attended had a chance to introduce themselves, discuss their reasons for coming to the meeting and sharing their ideas and hopes for the beach's future.

The bylaws and the mission statement for the Friends of Wollaston Beach will be presented and discussed at a meeting Wednesday, Oct. 11, at 7 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School.

The area is currently undergoing a $7 million state-funded Beach Improvement Project, which, said Gutro, makes it "the perfect time to establish a Friends group that will play a stewardship role in Wollaston Beach."

Others interested in joining the Friends' group should leave their names and addresses with the City Council office at 617-376-1341 or e-mailing Councillors Gutro or McNamee

South Shore Mental Health Expanding Cape Services

South Shore Mental Health will expand its operations on the Cape at its Bayview Associates clinic, at 310 Barnstable Rd., Hyannis.

Bayview Associates provides mental health and substance use treatment to children, adolescents, families and adults.

Harry Shulman, Chief Executive Officer of South Shore Mental Health announces the recent hiring of two psychiatrists, Dr. Richard Fellman, Board Certified in Adult Psychiatry, and Dr. Stephen Ikeda, Board Certified in Child Psychiatry. They were hired in response to the growth of the Hyannis clinic and to meet the increasing demand for psychiatric services.

Shulman said that the Bayview Clinic in Brewster will be closing by Sept. 15 and clinical staff will move to the Bayview Clinic in Hyannis. This will allow for a more efficient utilization of staff resources to serve clients on the Cape, he said.

Bayview's staff includes licensed therapists comprised of Board certified psychiatrists for children and adults, psychologists, licensed clinical social workers, clinical nurse specialists and substance use counselors. Treatment is goal-oriented, flexible, and often short term centered on each person's unique needs.

Call 800-852-2844 to obtain a confidential appointment. Bayview Associates accepts most insurance plans.

School Superintendent's Message

'Change Is In The Air'

Dr. RICHARD DeCRISTOFARO

It is a privilege to welcome our students, parents, and staff to the 2006-2007 school year.

The first day of school is always filled with excitement and a bit of anxiety. However, as the days and weeks unfold, we all settle into new schedules at school and at home.

We are fortunate again this year to have increased the 2006-2007 School Budget. It reflects a five percent increase. This increase has allowed us to establish a Full Day Kindergarten Program for all kindergarten age children in our city. As well, the 2006-2007 budget has enhanced our Literacy Program and increased system programs for special student population. Along with these excellent additions, our text/learning and technology materials have been advanced. We are thankful for the leadership of Mayor William Phelan, Vice Chair Elaine Dwyer, and all of the Quincy School Committee for their vision and support.

As September arrives, there will be 90-100 new educators serving our students. These excellent teachers and support staff are eager to begin the school year and meet your children. We also have two new Elementary Principals beginning this year - Ms. Maryanne Palmer (Parker School) and Mr. Peter Dionne (Bernazzani).

Although "change" is in the air this fall, some things never change in the Quincy Public Schools. We can only accomplish our system, individual school, individual school, and student-centered goals if we work together. We need to be investors and partner in educating this caring city's most valuable citizens, the children. The extent of involvement in your son or daughter's education is critical to their achievement and to creating a life-long love of learning.

It is with confidence and pride in our school system that I am pleased to welcome all of you to the 2006-2007 school year. If ever you need to speak with me, feel free to call my office at any time!

Sincerely,
Dr. Richard DeCristofaro

Back-To-School Safety Rules

By LT. DAN MINTON
Crime Prevention Officer

It's that time of year again. Time to send your children back to school. It can be a frightening time for parents, but if you prepare your child for the big world you may help save them from getting into trouble.

LT. DAN MINTON

• Make sure your children are taking the safest route to school and friends' houses, one that avoids danger spots like alleys, new construction, and wooded areas.

• Encourage your children to walk and play with friends, not alone, and to stay in well-lighted, open areas where others can see them.

• Don't hang a house key around your child's neck. It's a telltale sign that you won't be at home when they return from school. Put it inside a pocket or sock.

• Teach children to walk confidently and stay alert to what's going on around them.

• Encourage your children to look out for other kids' safety and report anything they see that doesn't seem right.

• Tell your children to stay away from strangers who hang around playgrounds, public restrooms and empty buildings.

• Rehearse with children their full name, address, and phone number (including area code) and how to make emergency phone calls from home and public phones.

• Tell children never to accept gifts or rides from someone they don't know well.

• Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in woodes areas, overgrown shrubbery, abandoned buildings, bad lighting, vacant lots littered with debris, no sidewalks or bike paths next to busy streets.

• Teach children to go to a store clerk or security guard and ask for help if you become separated in a store or shopping mall. Tell them never to go into the parking lot alone. Accompany your children to public restrooms.

• Teach children no one, not even someone they know, has the right to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable. Tell them that they have the right to say "No" to any adult in this situation.

If you teach the above tips to your children, they will be better prepared to survive in this great big, sometimes crazy, world.

The Trend: Clothing To Wear Right Away

(NAPS) Youngsters can size up the back-to-school shopping trend in three words: Wear It Now.

Teens and preteens are looking for the immediate shopping gratification of purchasing clothes they can wear right now.

"A good idea for parents is to split the back-to-school budget into summer and fall shopping trips," said T.J. Maxx Fashion Spokesperson Laura McDowell. "Stock up on the trends for warmer weather now and then later add the sweaters, sweatshirts and other heavier items as the weather changes."

The layered look is absolutely the top fashion statement. Start with lace camies and add dress-length shirts, deep V-neck sweaters and hoodies. There will be three layers of various textures and pieces.

In August and September, gals will want to start with a tank or lace camisole and build upon the layering effect with the season's hottest new favorite, the tunic. Tunics elongate the overall ensemble, with many ranging in length from 26 to 34 inches. Look for polka dots, florals and solids in muted shades such as gray, brown, olive and black. Tunics can be tank tops, short sleeved or long sleeved; the key is their length.

When it comes to bottoms, the long shorts will certainly continue to be a popular choice in early fall.

Other top choices for back to school are skinny leg jeans in darker washes, pencil skirts and leggings.

Tops will play an integral role in back-to-school fashions. Hooded fleece jackets and cropped hoodies for layering as well as sweaters (oversized "boyfriend" knits in solids and stripes), all make the scene. The long cardigan, turtleneck, cowl neck and deep V necks are all perfect layering pieces.

As the gals enjoy layering, especially in a muted palette of color, guys seek urban and camo pieces. Again the colors are basic: camouflage green, olive, deep brown, black and gray. hooded sweatshirts are still a favorite, but nonhooded zip jackets also make a statement. Jeans are both plain and embellished in a variety of washes. Logo tee shirts with screens and messages are top must-haves as well.

St. Ann Students Visit Korean War Monument

Students from St. Ann School recently honored veterans at the Korean War Monument at Hancock Street and Southern Artery.

Students from grade 5 placed potted plants and flags at the foot of the monument to honor Korean War veterans, and all veterans who have given their lives in service,. Students recited the "Pledge of Allegiance" and sang "God Bless America."

"This certainly made an impression on the children of the third, fourth and fifth grades who represented all the children at St. Ann School," said Sister Catherine Lee, principal of St. Ann School.

John Mahoney of the Veterans of Foreign Wars helped the children place the flags, which were donated by a Quincy resident.

ST. ANN STUDENTS from front Devin O'Brien and Keniesha Georges pay tribute to veterans of the Korean War with potted plants.

NQHS Orientation Program For Parents, Guardians Sept. 6

The North Quincy High School guidance department will host a "First Day of School" orientation program for parents and guardians of ninth-grade students Wednesday, Sept. 6, at 8:30 a.m. in the high school's media center.

The guidance staff along with a panel of guest speakers will provide parents with information regarding tools for a successful transition to high school and preparing for all of the issues that high school brings on. Refreshments will be served.

Guest speakers are:

Sue Blaney, author of "Please Stop the Roller Coaster! How Parents of Teenagers Can Smooth Out the Ride," will discuss adolescent development and how to make the high school years easier for parents to navigate.

Matt Noble from Revolution Prep will address the importance of preparing for college beginning with ninth grade.

Jean Auguste, career counselor from the My Turn program, will introduce parents to the career programs that are available to our students.

For more information, parents and guardians can call Helena Skinner at the North Quincy High School guidance office at 617-984-8747.

Quincy Girl Scouts Registration Sept. 20, 23, 25

The Quincy Girls Scouts will be conducting fall registration in September.

It will be held Sept. 20 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and Sept. 23 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., both at Thomas Crane Library, 40 Washing St., Quincy Center, and Sept. 25 from 4 to 6 p.m. at Adams Shore Library, 519 Sea St.

Girls Scouts is open to all girls ages 5 to 17. The age levels are Daisy Girl Scouts (5-6), Brownie Girl Scouts (6-8) and Junior Girl Scouts (8-11). Girls ages 11 to 17 have a number of opportunities for participation in troops as well as individual and special programs.

Girl Scouts, Patriots' Trail Council is one of the largest organizations in greater Boston dedicated to girls. The council serves 23,000 girls and 10,500 adult volunteers from 65 cities and towns including Boston.

Patriots' Trail Council develops girls' character, confidence and courage, and blends tradition with innovation by continually adapting to meet the needs of today's girls.

For more information, call 781-893-6113 or visit www.ptgirlscouts.org.

Wollaston Cemetery Walking Tour Sept. 9

The Historical Walking Tour of Mount Wollaston Cemetery will be Saturday, Sept. 9 at 1 p.m., meeting first at the Greenleaf Street gate on the Southern Artery.

Led by Historian Tom Galvin, the tour will focus on the Quincy granite industry.

Included in the tour will be notable granite monuments, war memorials and the graves of Quincy granite industry leaders, mayors and civic leaders.

Free Movie For Seniors

The Council on Aging will show the movie of the month free to seniors on the third Thursday of every month at the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St.

The movie is provided by West Coast Video at no charge. Refreshments will be provided. Call Ann at 617-376-1506 to reserve a seat.

Jury Program At St. Ann School

The students and faculty at St. Ann School recently participated in a presentation on the American jury process.

Michael Ryan, Massachusetts Jury Commission communications coordinator, gave a presentation in the school gymnasium explaining the importance of the jury system, the history of its process, and the responsibilities that devolved upon the citizens chosen for jury duty. The presentation was followed up with a video, and role-play by the students.

Participants from Sheila Barry's eighth grade U.S. history class role played with Victoria Barney as court officer, Matthew Forbes as clerk of courts, Cassandra Briffett as the trial judge, Elizabeth Do as defense attorney, Katie Hanlon as prosecuting attorney, Andy Georges as the defendant, and other students were witnesses or jurors.

Massachusetts Jury Commissioner Pamela J. Wood has indicated interest in presenting a jury-related program to students at St. Ann's School.

Also participating was Principal Sister Catherine Lee, SCN. Ryan was invited by St. Ann School counselor Dr. Arlene Morrissey.

Mature Driver Safety Course Sept. 7, 14

A two-day safe driving course for the mature driver will be held Sept. 7 and Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Marina Place, 4 Seaport Dr., North Quincy.

The course is $10, payable in advance. Checks may be made payable to the AARP. Lunch will be served.

For more information or to make a reservation, call the Council on Aging office at 617-376-1506.

HAMMERTOES

Hammertoes is defined as an unnatural bending of the four smaller toes that can create pressure on the toes when wearing shoes. Symptoms include pain or irritation on the tops of toes when shoes are on. Corns (soft or hard accumulations of skin that are caused by continuous friction) can also develop on the top, side, or end of affected toes. Calluses, a similar type of skin buildup, can occur on the bottom of the toe or ball of the foot. Over time, hammertoes can cause the joint to become dislocated, which increases discomfort. Left untreated, hammertoes may increase in rigidity, which makes them less likely to respond to non-surgical treatment. In severe cases, patients may develop open sores.

Many disorders can affect the joints of the toes, causing pain and preventing the foot from functioning properly. And any toe problems that cause discomfort when walking should be given prompt professional attention. Over time, ignoring the symptoms may lead to infection and ulceration. We don't want that happening to you – we'd rather you were able to walk, run, and live pain-free! If you would like an appointment to address your aching feet, please give us a call at 781-986-3668. We're located at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are now also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Hammertoes are caused most often by an imbalance of muscles and tendons.

A Job Well Done

On Aug. 11, at approximately 12:20 p.m., Officer William Monteith was dispatched to the Quincy Rehabilitation Nursing Center on McGrath Highway for a report of a suspicious male in the parking lot wearing all black clothing.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Monteith responded, Communications received additional calls stating this person was hovering around the parked cars. Upon arrival, several people pointed to the location of the suspect, next to a white pick-up truck.

Monteith determined the identity of the suspect and asked him what he was doing. He stated he parked his BMW "around here somewhere" but couldn't find it. The suspect said he remembered where his car was and walked over to an empty space and reiterated he couldn't recall where he parked.

Monteith noted the suspect's behavior, combined with slow and deliberate speech, resembled someone under the influence of drugs, which the suspect denied.

As Officers Harry Breen and Tom Pepdjonovic detained the suspect, Monteith learned from witnesses the suspect entered a Toyota in the lot, stepped out and tried to open the trunk. One of the witnesses stated he knew the owner of the Toyota and knew something was wrong. Another witness stated she saw something in the suspect's hand but was unsure what it was.

As the officers attempted to gather all available evidence and information, the owner of the white pick-up truck stated $1,000 in cash was just stolen from his truck. He said he was making a delivery of vending machine products inside Quincy Rehabilitation Nursing Center and when he returned to his truck 15 minutes later the money was missing from the rear or the truck. The victim said he saw the suspect near the truck but not in it.

The suspect changed his story, stating he did not drive his BMW (today), but did drive a "white Ford rental." He said he dropped his BMW off at the shop. When asked where he parked the rental, the suspect again stated he couldn't recall.

A check with the Registry of Motor Vehicles showed the suspect did not own a vehicle! The owner of the Toyota arrived on scene and said he was visiting his mother in the nursing home, adding he did not know the suspect and did not have permission to enter his car.

A criminal record check of the suspect indicated he had 48 past arraignments, including robbery, larcenies and various breaking and entering charges. The suspect, a 41-year-old Weymouth resident, was arrested on the charge of "Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle." A search of the suspect as well as the surrounding area was conducted but the missing $1,000 was never found. Nice work!

UPDATE: Detective Delahoyde informed me the jewelry that went unclaimed after being found on a burglary suspect two weeks ago and highlighted in this column was returned to the rightful owner.

The woman, a Bartlett Street resident and victim of one of the break-ins, found a CD player on her lawn and brought this to the station. While there, Delahoyde inquired if she was missing any jewelry and she said she was, describing the items that we had in evidence.

Once the jewelry was photographed for court purposes against the defendant, it was returned to the victim. The defendant was charged with "Receiving Stolen Property over $250." Nice work!

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

FROM START TO FITNESS

Do Children Need Personal Trainer?

Q. Despite numerous attempts to get my children up and moving, they're still not as active as I would like. A neighbor suggested signing them up with a personal trainer to help them stay in shape. Her children work with a trainer, and she has seen an improvement in their body composition and attitude toward exercise. My children are 10 and 12 years old. Does working out with a trainer sound like a good idea?

A. Motivating children to enjoy and engage in physical activity has become harder and harder lately. The days of children running from yard to yard playing with each other until the street lights come on has been replaced with hours of television and video games. With the rise in childhood obesity and other medical conditions associated with inactivity, the use of a personal trainer might be an innovative and fun way to get your children moving.

A certified personal trainer will be able to create a fitness program to suit the needs of any client, including children. Although your children may be working with a trainer, that doesn't mean they will have to lift heavy weights or work on exercise equipment. For children, these sessions could resemble a classic physical education class, where the use of bodyweight exercises such as push ups can be used in addition to other fitness tools to introduce fun back into being active.

A trainer also will take into consideration the age of the children and develop an appropriate program to ensure their safety while increasing their fitness level.

Hire a trainer who is certified and has experience working with children. Discuss your goals for your children with the trainer and stay involved with their progress. Ask the trainer to give you feedback so that you can positively reinforce healthy behaviors at home.

Another idea may be to have your children exercise with your neighbor's children in a group. Group training is a great way to encourage children to exercise with others and can allow them to not feel like outsiders.

The key word to remember is "fun!" Promoting a healthy lifestyle for your children should begin at home, and a little help from the outside can make it easier.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Healthy Lunches On The Go

By MIRIAM NELSON, Ph.D.

(NAPS) Did you know that most children over the age of eight are deficient in calcium and vitamin D intake, according to a recent study from the American Academy of Pediatrics? And that's not all. Most women, about 75 percent, also do not get enough calcium and vitamin D in their daily diet.

Deficiency in these two nutrients can lead to many health problems, and osteoporosis in particular. Each year, the United States alone spends $20 million on osteoporosis fractures.

Ironically, osteoporosis is a largely preventable disease. If you take care of your bones from childhood throughout life with adequate calcium and vitamin D intake, exercise and healthy lifestyle choices, you will not become one of the one in two women who suffer an osteoporosis related fracture in their lifetime; nor will you have to deal with the hump your grandmother may have had.

Q: My kids don't drink enough milk because they do not care for the flavor. How can I pack a lunch that is both nutritious and appealing to my children's tastes?

Delicious packables can open your kids' eyes and mouths to healthy foods. To pack a healthy lunch that your children will enjoy, make nutritious foods more appealing to them by varying what you put in their lunch box.

Look for creative alternatives. If regular milk is a problem, try flavored milk or minicartons of calcium-enriched orange juice, cheese-string snacks or tiny containers of yogurt. Let children choose their own smart substitutes from a limited selection.

Treats don't have to be "store bought"; in fact, kids often like to eat what they help prepare. For example, bring a little fun to the lunch box with "ants on a log"- cream cheese on celery dotted with dried fruit. Let children choose the "ants" from a mini-selection of dried cranberries, currants, nuts and raisins. Mix in a few chocolate chips for a surprise. Offer kid-friendly snacks that you know will appeal to the taste buds and be healthy. Remember to always include a serving each of whole grain, low-fat dairy, a vegetable or fruit and lean protein. If your youngster insists on junk food, you may want to allow it but try to limit indulgences to once a day.

Q: My schedule is so busy I often do not have time to sit down and have a meal. What are the best snack or meal options for women on the go?

Moms are often too busy packing their kid's lunch to find time for their own breakfast. Unfortunately, erratic eating behavior can cause moms to grab less than nutritious food. Look for snacks that help keep your nutrition on track, such as new Citracal® Creamy Bites, a delicious way to get calcium and vitamin D.

The individually packed, bite-size treats easily fit in your purse and each one contains half the recommended daily allowance of calcium and vitamin D in the flavor of your choice. They are creamy, bon-bon-sized squares that come in chocolate fudge, caramel or lemon cream and taste a lot more than the mere 35 calories they are.

Because they contain calcium citrate, they can be taken anytime day or night, with or without meals. Look for other grab-and-go foods for grown-ups and keep a stock in your fridge and pantry, such as pre-cleaned vegetables and precut fruit.

Heart Healthy

(NUC) - While awareness is growing, heart disease is still seen by many as primarily a man's disease. Yet heart disease remains the No. 1 killer of women.

According to the Web site www.hearthealthywomen.org, approximately 356,000 women in America died from heart disease in 2002, compared to 42,000 from breast cancer that same year. From these findings, the site states that heart disease kills six times more women than breast cancer.

If you are concerned that you may be at risk, the following tips can help keep your heart pumping:

• Stop smoking. Smoking affects not only your heart but also your lungs, and it aggravates various other medical conditions.

• Feed your body well. For heart health, make sure the foods and drinks you consume contain little fat and are low in cholesterol. If you have trouble getting your daily dose of vitamins, minerals and other nutrients, try a health beverage like NuVim.

Tested and proven effective in 19 clinical studies, NuVim maintains a healthy immune system and helps with muscle flexibility, according to its manufacturer. This cholesterol-free, fat-free drink contains the antioxidant vitamins A, C and E, along with B-12, zinc, calcium and essential amino acids. For a list of stores that carry NuVim or to purchase the product in powder form, visit www.nuvim.com or call 877-850-8777.

• Be happy. Having a positive attitude keeps the effects of stress in check. A high amount of stress can be bad for the heart.

• Say goodbye to alcohol. Limit your intake to 3 ounces or less. People who drink 6 to 8 ounces of alcoholic beverages a day tend to have higher blood pressure.

• Keep moving. Find ways to incorporate exercise into your day, whether it entails taking a brisk walk at lunchtime, stepping up the pace of household chores, or simply taking the stairs whenever possible.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

CROWNS FIT FOR KINGS AND QUEENS

If a substantial part of a tooth is lost to decay or wear, the dentist can provide a replacement for the upper part of the tooth known as a crown. Before this durable dental prosthesis can be attached, the tooth must be prepared by grinding down a significant part of its enamel and some underlying dentin. If the tooth is badly weakened by decay and needs a root canal, the dentist will implant a metal post inside the tooth to help support the crown. The crown itself is typically made of porcelain over metal-alloy. However, all-metal crowns are sometimes used on back teeth for added strength while aesthetically pleasing all-porcelain crowns are sometimes used for front teeth.

Crowns are an ideal restoration for teeth, which have been broken, or have been weakened by decay or a very large filling. You are the most important person in the world. That's why we take time to listen to your concerns and develop a personalized plan to enhance your smile. Our dental services include crowns, bridges, dentures, and cosmetic dentistry. For more information, or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220. It is important to us that any dental experience be a positive one for all patients. For gentle, caring dentistry for the entire family, come see us at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Crowns may be held in place by implants in cases where the root has been removed through extraction.

Degan Memorial Road Race Sept. 10

The 14th annual U.S. Marshal William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will be held Sunday, Sept. 10, at Pageant Field.

The race commemorates the life and career of former U.S. Deputy Marshal William F. Degan, who was killed in the line of duty in August 1992. All proceeds will go to various charities.

The Quincy native earned numerous awards during his career, including the prestigious Attorney General's Award for Excellence in Law Enforcement. In addition to being a U.S. marshal, he served his country as a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserves.

The 10K road race begins at 10 a.m. followed by the 5K run and the free kids fun run. Entry fee is $20 for pre-registration received by Friday, Sept. 1. T-shirts are included for all pre-registered runners.

Race day registration and number pick-up will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m. at Adams Field. Bib numbers and T-shirts for all pre-registered runners can also be picked up the day preceding the race, Saturday, Sept. 9, from 2 to 5 p.m. at Adams Field.

The USATF Certified course, which includes three miles of beach front road, will start and finish at Pageant Field. Prizes will be awarded to all first-, second- and third-place division finishers.

Refreshments will be served to all runners and families. There will be a DJ, raffles and pony rides.

For more information, call 617-576-9860 or visit www.deganroadrace.com.

Applications Available For City Tennis Tournament

Applications for the 36th annual City Tennis Tournament are still available at the Quincy Recreation Department, the Quincy Municipal Credit Union, City Hall and all city tennis courts.

Deadline for applications is Sept. 8. Fee is $15 for adults and $8 for youth under age 16.

The tournament, open to all Quincy residents, begins Sept. 13 and will have 12 divisions of play for boys, girls, men and women.

The draw will be posted Sept. 11 and 12 from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at the municipal courts at Russell Park behind the Center for Technical Education.

For more information, call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Lincoln-Hancock School Pool Closed Until Sept. 11

The Quincy Recreation Department announces its supervised recreation swim program at the Lincoln Hancock Community School pool will be closed for maintenance beginning today (Thursday).

The program will resume Monday, Sept. 11, at 6 p.m. with a new schedule:

- Family Swim: Monday through Friday, 6 to 6:50 p.m.
- Scuba: Monday, 7 to 7:45 p.m.
- Senior Citizens: Tuesday through Friday, 7 to 7:45 p.m.

57 Youngsters Compete In 'Knock Out' Basketball

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual Knock Out basketball competition at Fenno Street Park with 57 children from 12 playgrounds participating.

The champions were David Lawlor, Annie Down, Emily Sullivan, Pat Gould, Arnold Tacho and Mackenzie Irvin.

The finalists were Stephanie DiPietro, Dan Gould, Andrew Shraff, Cedric Dybaud and Taylor Shepard.

The competition tested skill, ability and agility. It was separated into three different age groups (midgets, juniors and seniors) and consisted of two rounds. In the first round of the competition, each district was split into four different divisions. Each age group had 15 children participating to advance to the final round. Once four youngsters were left, they moved on to the championship.

Sports specialists Jimmy Burke, Bonnie Hirtle, Dan DiNardo and Meaghan Foley ran the competition.

12-Year-Old AAU Baseball Tryouts Sept. 10

Try-outs for 12-year-old AAU baseball for Quincy residents only will be held Sunday, Sept. 10, at 9 a.m. at Quarry Hills.

Matt Swartzlander, assistant baseball coach at Eastern Nazarene College, will conduct the try-outs. Rain date is Sunday, Sept. 17.

The 2007 will start in early April and end in late June. There will be about 20 games during the regular season, mostly double-headers on the weekends.

Cost will be between $350 and $400, which covers equipment, balls, uniforms, insurance, umpires and charter fees.

Also, the team is planning to travel to Cooperstown, N.Y., for a week in August to play in a tournament consisting of about eight games against teams from all over the country. Cost of the tournament is $625 per player, with part of the cost defrayed by fund-raising and sponsorships.

For more information, contact Matt Swartzlander at 517-262-0605.

Boating Skills Course Sept. 20

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary will hold a Boating Skills and Seamanship course on the South Shore beginning Sept. 20.

Registration will be Wednesday, Sept. 13, at 6:30 p.m. at Town River Yacht Club, 60 Mound St., Quincy.

Designed for both the experienced and the novice boater, the course will be held Wednesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Cost is $45 for materials.

STEERING PROBLEMS

Whether your steering shimmies, pulls, wanders, or has excessive play, there are certain components to check to be sure that the vehicle tracks straight and that driver input transmits to the wheels. The first among these are the wheel bearings, which allow the rotating wheel to wobble when worn. Next are the ball joints, which, if they exhibit any sloppiness, will produce unwanted wheel movement. This will result in erratic steering. The tie rod that connects the two steering knuckles to each other, keeping the wheels pointed in the same general direction, also warrants a check. Beyond these items, the power steering box or rack or power steering pump may be bad, in which case repair or replacement is required.

Your steering system is vital to performance and safety. With so many complex components, it is best to have your steering system checked by professionals. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we assure you that you and your family's safety are our number one concern. We guarantee all work performed. If you have questions regarding steering, please come to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, or call 781-843-1550 today. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: If the steering wheels is hard to turn, first check the level in the power steering fluid reservoir.

South Shore PAL Boxers Post 7-1 Record At World Championships

The South Shore PAL Boxing team traveled to the recent Ringside World Championships in Kansas City, Mo., and emerged with a 7-1 record and three champions and a silver medalist.

Whitney Drayton, 20, of Roxbury was the open women's (ages 17-34) 138-pound champion. She had two decisive decision wins over competitors from Connecticut and Missouri.

Justin Kennard, 52, of Boston was the 152-pound Masters champion. He won the title with two sensational knockouts over fighters from Ohio and Canada.

John O'Brien, 57, of Hull, was the 201-pound Masters champion. He captured his title with two strong decision wins over boxers from Iowa and Canada.

Mike Melville, 41, of Newton was the 152-pound Masters silver medalist. He had a record of 1-1 in the tournament with a decision win in the semi-finals and a decision loss in the final.

Open boxers are competitors with 10 fights or more and Master boxers are 35 years old and older in divisions 10 years either side of their age.

The team was coached by Poppa Ray Drayton of Roxbury and assisted by Jimmy Manning of Quincy. Shawn Creegan, manager of gym, also helped in the preparation of the competing boxers.

The South Shore PAL Boxing gym is located at 1452 Hancock St., Quincy Center. New members are welcome.

The Garden Bug

Ragweed

Often found along roadsides, vacant lots, river banks, and abandoned fields, ragweed starts blooming from mid-August to late fall. One plant can produce up to 1 billion pollen grains, wreaking havoc on sinuses everywhere the pollen blows.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A troubling situation takes a positive turn and moves toward a resolution that should please you and your supporters. Meanwhile, make time to deal with new domestic issues.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time to reassess your goals and consider shifting directions. Remember to keep an open mind, and be prepared to make changes as new opportunities arise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Rely on your strong Mercury aspect to help you close that communication gap before it becomes too wide to cross. A sibling or other family member has news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're about to get off that emotional roller coaster and start experiencing more stability than you've been used to. This is a good time to let someone new into your life.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Good news: A trusted friend comes through for you. But you still need to shed that last scrap of self-doubt and once more become the cool, confident Cat we all know and love.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Things should be getting back to a less hectic pace. Enjoy the more peaceful atmosphere. You earned it. But don't forget about those still-unresolved issues.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A more positive family relationship develops as misunderstandings are explained away. A job situation appears promising, but check it out before you act on it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. That on-the-job situation is working out as you'd hoped. Now's a good time to relax and to enjoy the company of family and close friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might feel as if you're caught in an emotional tug-of-war. But don't be rushed into a decision on either side. Wait for more facts before you act.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Goat's usually high level of self-confidence is brimming over these days. This should help you deal with a situation that you've avoided far too long. Go for it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Relationships become more intense. But be careful not to be pushed into decisions you're not comfortable with. Remember: You're the one in charge of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You need to show more confidence in your ability to reach your goals. Make that long-delayed decision, and avoid floundering around in a sea of self-doubt.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you appear to be strongly opinionated, you can also be open to other ideas — so long as they are presented with logic and clarity.

A Thought For The Week

Labor Day for most Americans has become a traditional last-fling-of-the-summer weekend.

On the calendar it marks the eve of another school year, the dividing line between the serenity of summer and the onrush of a harsher autumn and winter. In presidential election years it has become the kickoff date of serious campaigning for the nation's highest office.

The day was first celebrated over 100 years ago with a parade and labor holiday in New York City instituted by the Central Labor Union at the suggestion of Peter McGuire, a carpenter and one of the two founders of the American Federation of Labor.

Congress passed a bill June 28, 1894, making the first Monday in September a legal holiday to be observed throughout the nation as Labor Day.

Labor Day has no meaning for the small but vocal minority of loafers whose whine is that the world owes them a living.

But it has full meaning for all others – the overwhelming majority – who realize the dignity of work, who labor in dignity and reap just rewards for their efforts...

Dear World...

My young son starts to school today... It's going to be sort of strange and new to him for awhile, and I wish you would sort of treat him gently.

You see, up to now he's been king of the roost... He's been boss of the backyard... His mother has always been near to soothe his wounds and repair his feelings.

But now things are going to be different.

This morning he's going to walk down the front steps, wave his hand, and start out on the great adventure... It is an adventure that might take him across continents, across oceans... It's an adventure that will probably include wars and tragedy and sorrow... To live his life in the world he will have to live in, will require faith and love and courage.

So, World, I wish you would sort of look after him... Take him by the hand and teach him things he will have to know.

But do it gently, if you can.

He will have to learn, I know, that all men are not just, that all men are not true.

But teach him also that for every scoundrel there is a hero... that for every crooked politician there is a great and dedicated leader... Teach him that for every enemy there is a friend.

Steer him away from envy, if you can... And teach him the secret of quiet laughter.

In school, World, teach him it is far more honorable to fail than to cheat... Teach him to have faith in his own ideas, even if everyone says they are wrong... Teach him to be gentle with gentle people and tough with tough people.

Try to give my son the strength not to follow the crowd when everyone is getting on the bandwagon... Teach him to listen to all men – but teach him also to filter all he hears on a screen of truth and take just the good that siphons through.

Teach him, if you can, how to laugh when he is sad... Teach him there is no shame in tears... Teach him there can be glory in failure and despair in success.

Treat him gently, World, if you can, but don't coddle him... Because only the test of fire makes fine steel... Let him have the courage to be impatient... Let him have the patience to be brave.

Let him be no man's man... Teach him always to have sublime faith in himself.

Because then he will always have sublime faith in mankind.

This is quite an order, World, but see what you can do... He's such a nice little fellow, my son! - Dan Valentine

RELIGION

Wollaston Congregational To Hold Kids Super Saturday Sept. 16

Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, will hold its third annual Kids Super Saturday Sept. 16 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The festivities will include games, prizes, surprises, crafts and cookie painting, as well as bubbles and beads, dance demonstrations, and a free lunch for children.

There will also be a tots play area.

The free community event is sponsored by the Christian Education Committee.

For more information, call 617-773-7432.

Union Congregational Church

Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, will host "Eucharist at Sea," a special Communion Service on the beach, to be held between the Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs, Sunday, Sept. 3 at 8 a.m.

The service will be followed by the church's annual Outdoor Worship Service and Cookout, to be held on the church lawn at 10 a.m.

This service will feature Craig Stanley, a contemporary musician. Pastor John Swanson will give the sermon.

The public is invited to attend both events.

Registration Open For Chabad Hebrew School

Registration is now open to students of the Chabad Hebrew School, 1356 Quincy Dr., for the 2006-07 school year.

Starting in September, classes will be Sundays, and offered to children 5-13 years of age.

The school will teach South Shore Jewish children to embrace their Jewish roots, and gain a sense of Jewish pride, no matter their level of observance or affiliation.

The school will provide an academic environment where children will acquire a broad knowledge of Judaism through a motivating and challenging venue. Through Hebrew reading, writing, Jewish history, holidays and more, the students will gain appreciation for the values and traditions of their heritage.

"Our school's underlying approach is for the children to enjoy the time spent at Hebrew School so that they are left with positive experiences, and a greater appreciation for Jewish education," said Morah Bronstein, director of Chabad's Hebrew School.

The program is blended with games, incentives, crafts, dramatics, family celebrations and other exciting extra curricular activities.

Scholarships are available, and no student will be turned down for lack of funds.

To schedule an appointment or to visit, call 617-850-5935 or email shevybronstein@gmail.com.

Sunday School Registration At Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church is now accepting registrations for the 2006-2007 Sunday School year.

Sunday School classes will begin Sunday, Sept. 24 with a Registration/Rally Day at the church, 310 Manet Ave. Regular classes will meet every Sunday at 9:30 a.m. October through June. Classes are offered for children grades kindergarten through 6th grade.

"We have an exciting year planned that's built around our new curriculum," said Jennifer McCauley Logue, director of the Sunday School program. "'Walk with Me' uses the best-loved stories of the Bible, combined with songs and activities, to share the gospel with children. We'll also be holding a traditional Christmas pageant with parts for all of the Sunday School students, and many other activities."

Children and their families do not need to be Houghs Neck residents or members of Houghs Neck Congregational Church in order to participate in the Sunday School program. "All children grades K-6th are invited to participate," Logue said.

To receive a registration form or for more information, call (617)328-1384 or email jennmccauley@aol.com.

Community United Methodist Church

The Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden will conduct the 10:30 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Lector will be Joan Donovan. Ushers will be Brian and Nancy White.

Coffee hour follows the worship service hosted by Kathy Emerson, Linda Johnson and Karin Paul.

Upcoming events include the annual Homecoming Hot Dog Roast, to be held after the Sept. 10 service (weather permitting the event will be held on the side lawn). In the event of inclement weather, the event will be held in the hall. The event is free.

On Saturday, Sept. 16 family movie night will begin at 6 p.m. with free popcorn, soda and candy. The movie is Eight Below.

Bethany Congregational Church

Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy Center, will have Sunday worship at 10 a.m.

The Rev. Gary W. Smothers will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Sermons From Mark 8) A Private Miracle." There will also be a children's message.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers. Fellowship follows the service in Allen Parlor. Light refreshments will be served.
